HARDING PLEDGES DRY ENFORCEMENT; HITS SMITH'S STAND

LAMENTS STATES' LAXITY

He Warns That It May Mean a Big and Costly Federal Police Organization.

TALKS OF COAL AT CHEYENNE

Sure That His Commission Will Bring About New Understanding in Industry.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., June 25.—In a speech here today that bristled with straightout declarations of policy and with admonitions to those who hold extreme views on one side or the other of the liquor question, President Harding made it clear that he wanted rigid enforcement of prohibition, and so far as he was able as titular leader of the party he committed the party to that position.

According to the President's view prohibition has come to stay. He expressed the conviction that the Eighteenth Amendment would never be repealed. Experience might dictate changes in details of enforcement, he said, but he was convinced that the changes would mean "the sincere purpose of effective enforcement rather than moderation of the general policy."

Furthermore, President Harding served notice on the country that if the States continue to throw an increasing burden of enforcement on the Federal Government, it would be necessary, at heavy expense to the taxpayers, to create a Federal police authority "which in time will come to be regarded as an intrusion and interference with the right of local authority to manage local concerns." To the President's way of thinking "the possibilities of disaster in such a situation hardly need to be suggested." But he maintained that this menace must be recognized.

The President threw down the gauntlet to Governor Smith of New York. Although he did not mention the Governor's name the conclusion was obvious that part of his speech was intended to be a specific condemnation of the repeal of the New York prohibition enforcement law. The issue was made clean-cut as between the Governor and the President. Flatly and in terms, condemning the policy adopted by the New York Legislature and executive as "nullification," the President struck from the shoulder at those who contended that the abolition of State prohibition enforcement laws was an assertion of the doctrine of State rights.

Challenge to Governor Smith.

The President delivered his challenge in these words:

"It is a curious illustration of loose thinking that some people have proposed as a means of protecting the fullest rights of the States, that the States should abandon their part in enforcing the prohibition policy. That means simply an invitation to the Federal Government to exercise powers which should be exercised by the States. Instead of being an assertion of State rights, it is an abandonment of them; it is an addication; it amounts to a confession by the State that it does not choose to govern itself, but prefers to turn the task, or a considerable part of it, over to the Federal authority. There could be no more complete negation of State rights.

"The National Government has been uniformly considerate of the sensibilities of the States about their rights and authorities. But when a State deliberately refuses to exercise the powers which the Constitution expressly confers on it, it obviously commits itself to a policy of nullifying State authority, the end of which we are reluctant to conjecture."

The President declared that it was not an issue between wets and drys; it was not a question between those who believe in prohibition and those who do not.

"It is fast being raised above all that," he said, "to recognition as an issue of whether the laws of this country can be and will be enforced." And to leave no doubt as to where he stood, the President gave notice that the Federal Government would enforce the amendment and the Volstead act.

Thinks It Paramount Issue.

In the President's opinion today's address stands foremost among his utterances since leaving Washington Wednesday. It presents his measured conclusions on the prohibition question. To his mind this question, involving respect for the Constitution and the laws, is a leading American issue, perhaps the paramount issue.

Mr. Harding appealed to the States to do their part in helping the Federal Government enforce prohibition. To most of them he paid the tribute of trying to do their part, but he declared that some States, which had prohibition statutes before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted "have literally gone backward in this regard." He emphasized this by the statement that "communities in which the policy was frankly accepted as productive of highly beneficial results, and in which there was no widespread protest as long as it was merely a State concern, report that since the Federal Government became in part responsible there has been a growing laxity on the part of State authorities about enforcing the law."

In concluding his address the President spoke again in advocacy of his proposal that the United States participate in the League of Nations Permanent Court of International Justice. While he confessed that it was too much to say that such a court would give a guaranty against war, he declared "it

LONDON, June 25 (Associated Press).—Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, stated in the House of Commons today that there was no ground for protest if British customs seals were broken within United States territorial waters by officials of the United States customs service.

His statement was in answer to a question whether Great Britain recognized America's right to break the seals on liquor aboard ships.

Mr. Baldwin said it was the practice for the British customs authorities to fix their seals as a matter of routine on dutiable ship stores taken from England in bond, to prevent consumption of the stores in territorial waters. The seals must not be broken in British territorial waters, but otherwise they were in no way inviolable.

Foreign customs seals, he added, were habitually broken, when necessity arose, in British territorial waters.

DRY LEADERS GATHER FOR "WAR COUNCIL"

Anti-Saloon League Officials Will Meet in Ohio Today to Plan Big Campaign.

AIM FOR "DRY" PRESIDENT

They Also Plan to Wage Hot Fights in All States Where Wets Are Strong.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTERVILLE, Ohio, June 25.—The leading strategists of the Anti-Saloon League of America will meet in this little community tomorrow for a council of war, at which plans will be laid for a country-wide "dry" offensive against the wet forces—supposed to be in the ascendant since New York scrapped its State prohibition law—and rallying with new determination to make their influence felt in the national conventions and the Congressional campaigns next year.

This town is the birthplace of the Anti-Saloon League and for more than fifty years has been its fighting base. Almost every year it has been the scene of a conference of the League's State Superintendents, but it is declared by officials and delegates who are arriving tonight that tomorrow's meeting will overshadow in importance any similar gathering in the history of the organization.

The council of war is scheduled to continue until Thursday evening. All its session probably will be held behind closed doors. Law enforcement by peace officers, the fights this Fall in wet or semi-wet States for election of dry legislatures, pledged to resist to the bitter end any attempt to repeal State prohibition enforcement acts, and Anti-Saloon League strategy in relations to the Presidential and Congressional campaigns next year will be among the topics discussed.

It is the belief among those who will sit in the council that, acting upon the incentive afforded by New York, possibly half a dozen States will see fights in the Legislature next year for the repeal of statutes modeled on the Volstead law and enacted to facilitate cooperation between the Federal and State Governments in the enforcement of prohibition.

See Danger in Six States.

Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Illinois, Connecticut and Rhode Island are regarded by League officials as danger points where an extraordinary effort will have to be made by the drys if spread of what one League official referred to as "the nullification contagion" over an even wider area is to be averted. In most of the States mentioned the League regards the situation as critical, and its officials feel that nearly all the territory east of the Mississippi River will bear careful watching.

In some of the States listed by the league as battlegrounds in the conflict this impending bodies this year became operative the moment word came of the action taken by the New York Legislature. In Wisconsin the General Assembly passed a prohibition repeal bill which was blocked by the Senate. In Illinois also the Senate was compelled to save the day for State enforcement.

One Legislature—that in Texas—adopted a resolution censuring New York for its action, and by a vote of 75 to 8 defeated an amendment which would have endorsed the stand taken by the New York lawmakers as "in accord with the South's views of State's rights."

SWIFT BLAZE TRAPS BATTERY BATHERS; FOURTEEN INJURED

Bath House, Pier 2, and Two Ships Are Destroyed in Spectacular Fire.

20,000 WATCH FROM PARK

TUG FIREMAN IS MISSING

One of the shortest but most spectacular fires of recent years in lower Manhattan started last evening just before 6 o'clock at the extreme west end of Pier 2 at the foot of Battery Place. Feeding on the rotting wood of the condemned pier and fanned by a strong in-shore wind, the blaze leaped shoreward with almost explosive speed. Half an hour later the pier, the Battery Park Baths alongside, a barge and a tugboat had been destroyed, a steamship and several smaller vessels had been badly damaged, and at least fourteen persons had been injured. A fireman on one of the tugs is missing and it is feared he was burned. The damage to property was estimated at $200,000.

The injured, with the exception of five firemen, were patrons of the baths and were caught by the fire in all stages of undress. None of them, however, was seriously injured.

The fire was discovered almost simultaneously by Deputy Fire Chief Worth, in charge of the Marine Division, as he was proceeding down the river in the launch Velox, and by William Fairclough, the keeper of the baths. Chief Worth hurriedly called the fireboat John Purroy Mitchel, tied up at the Battery, and Fairclough ran to the Marine Division, where he gave the alarm. But before the first apparatus could make the run the pier had become a mass of flames.

Steamship Was Unloading.

The hot and cold water baths were in the superstructure of an old barge tied alongside Pier 2. Nearer the end of the pier the tug Cornelius, owned by the Clifton Towing Company of Stapleton, S. I., had been tied up for the night. At Pier 1, just to the south, the steamship La Betta, a Shipping Board vessel, operated by the Munson Line, was unloading its cargo of 800 tons of linseed oil, consigned to the Spencer Kellogg Linseed Company of Staten Island, onto barges. About ten small craft were tied to the north side of Pier 2.

The wind was blowing from the river. It caught the flames at the pier's end and swept them steadily nearer the shore. Almost as soon as the pier was fired the tug Cornelius caught. Its Captain and crew with the exception of the fireman, whose name could not be learned, had departed for the night. The fireman was not seen to leave the burning vessel, and it is feared he was burned to death.

Before the arrival of the apparatus the flames had gorged themselves on the pier and had reached the bathhouse barge. Had the fire occurred earlier in the afternoon there would have been many more injured, but only about twelve women and half a dozen men were in the bathhouse at the time.

The speed with which the flames spread gave them no time to dress and they were forced to flee, in some cases without clothing. Patrolman McAuliffe of Old Slip Station was one of the first to reach the blazing baths. One woman, without clothing, was making frantic efforts to make her way from the structure through a doorway, but found her escape cut off by flames. As the patrolman arrived, she fainted. McAuliffe grasped this way through the fire and smoke and carried her to the street. She was taken away in an automobile before he could learn her name.

On the top floor of the baths were William Fairclough Jr. and his mother. The Fairclough family with Thomas Tregellis, Mrs. Fairclough's brother, have their living quarters there. The first warning of fire came with the smoke as it poured into the room. William, who is 14 years old, threw open the door only to find a mass of flames. He broke a small skylight in the roof and after clambering through, dragged his mother up after him. On the roof, with flames spurting all about them, the boy

Sir Auckland Geddes, Ill, Sails for England Today

Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, arrived here last night from Washington in a private car over the Pennsylvania Railroad and was driven to the Cunard pier, where he embarked on the Berengaria, sailing at 9:30 o'clock this morning for Southampton.

Sir Auckland, who has been in poor health for some time, was accompanied by his physician and a trained nurse. He appeared to be very weak and was almost carried along the pier and up the steep gangway.

Friends said that the Ambassador's condition did not improve after he reached his suite on the Berengaria.

JURY TO GET TODAY CABLES WARD SENT

MESSAGES NOW IN COURT

Their Admission as Evidence Is Expected to Clear Alleged Blackmailing Mystery.

The Ward "mystery" cable messages, which Walter S. Ward's attorney have fought so hard to keep from the hands of the authorities, probably will be revealed to the Extraordinary Grand Jury, convened by order of the Governor, at White Plains today. These messages, it is thought by Attorney General Carl Sherman, will disclose the blackmail secret, so closely guarded since Ward shot Clarence E. Peters on May 16, 1922.

Announcing that he would hear argument of counsel on the question of privilege of the messages at 10:30 this morning, Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner, in charge of the extraordinary term of court which opened yesterday, declared from the bench that he did not think the messages were privileged. He consented, however, to hear argument by Isaac N. Mills, former Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division, chief of counsel for Ward, at the opening of court today.

Copies of the cablegrams sent by Ralph Ward to his father, George S. Ward, head of the Ward Baking Company in Europe were subpoenaed and were taken sealed to White Plains yesterday by representatives of the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Companies, who were, directed by the Court to return with the papers today. At least three of the numerous messages said to have been exchanged between the Wards are known to the authorities, it was disclosed. These are said to be the least important of the messages.

Asked for $90,000.

The first of these, from Ralph Ward to his father, asked George S. Ward's permission to advance $90,000 to Walter Ward. George S. is said to have replied in substance, "Yes, give it to him." The third message, it was said, followed closely George S. Ward's reply, and peremptorily denied the request, "if it is for blackmail."

It was said yesterday that George S. Ward was "out of the State," possibly in Chicago, on business for the Baking company. It was recalled that in argument for the dismissal of the indictment for first degree murder found against Ward last year by the May Grand Jury, Judge Mills suggested to the Court that the mysterious "Charley Ross," "Jack" and Peters, might have been "blackmailing him (Walter Ward) into blackmailing his father."

Attorney General Sherman and Deputy Attorney General Wilbur F. Chambers seemed confident yesterday that the cable messages, the importance of which Mr. Sherman stressed in his argument, would finally find their way through the tangled legal processes into the hands of the authorities.

"The very fact that we seek these messages is sufficient reason for these Grand Jury proceedings," Mr. Sherman said in reply to a point made by Judge Mills. He had hoped, it was learned, that the messages might be laid before the Grand Jury yesterday.

After the selection yesterday of twenty-three Grand Jurors from more than 100 talesmen summoned for the first Extraordinary Grand Jury Westchester County has known, Judge Mills of counsel for Ward made a motion for the vacating of an order signed by Justice Wagner when court convened resubmitting the Ward-Peters case to the Grand Jury. This move resulted in a spirited tilt between Attorney General Sherman and Judge Mills. The motion was denied by Justice Wagner.

Walter Ward in Court.

Walter S. Ward, debonair and smiling, clad in a blue suit with white pencil stripe, sat in the midst of his array of counsel throughout the court sessions. He was represented in addition to Judge Mills by Allan R. Campbell, State Senator Elwood M. Rabenold and Samuel Miller.

The order for the resubmission of the case, handed to Justice Wagner by Deputy Attorney General Chambers, contained, as a concluding sentence: "The conclusion of justifiable homicide is entirely lacking in this case."

Judge Mills contended that in the order there was no recital of additional evidence obtained since the dismissal of the indictment against Ward. Therefore there was no cause for its resubmission, he contended.

He then declared that the Attorney General's investigation had no validity.

Judge Mills charged that the facts as presented to the Governor were false.

When Court reconvened for the afternoon session, Justice Wagner announced that George Stark, of White Plains, had been selected as foreman of the Extra-

FULLER AIDED ROTHSTEIN

Lent $187,000 to Ex-Gambler, but Latter Testifies He Paid It All Back.

DODGES MANY QUESTIONS

"Perjury Has No Terror for You," Comments Attorney for 4,000 Fuller Creditors.

William S. Silkworth, President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, yesterday resigned to take effect today, and his resignation was accepted by the Board of Directors. Announcement also was made by the Special Committee of Five of the Exchange that Silkworth had sold his seat on the Exchange, effective today, and will cease to be a member of that organization.

The resignation of Mr. Silkworth and the severing of his connection with the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York marks another milestone in the long series of disagreements between members of the Exchange and its officials, which have developed in the investigation of member brokers of that organization, a large number of whom have been thrown into bankruptcy. The affair reached its climax with the hearings before a referee in bankruptcy on the petition of creditors attempting to recover assets of the firm of E. M. Fuller & Co., which mysteriously disappeared at the time the firm was put into bankruptcy.

During the latter part of last week, Silkworth announced that in view of the unfavorable publicity which had been brought upon the Consolidated Exchange in the last few months, he planned to resign from the Presidency of the Exchange on June 28, holding up his resignation until that time on the grounds that he would not quit under fire. No hint had been made before that Silkworth planned to sell his seat and sever all connections with the Consolidated Stock Exchange, as he now has done, according to last night's announcement.

The Special Committee of Five was named by the Board of Governors of the Consolidated Stock Exchange six weeks ago and is composed of prominent members of the Exchange, who have been independent of the factions which have grown up within the Exchange itself. It was announced that this committee would make a thorough investigation of conditions witin the Exchange and would be vested with power to take summary action in case it was the judgment of the committee that summary action was necessary.

Last night's report, issued at a late hour, was the first that the committee has made since its organization, and this brief statement was given out on behalf of the Board of Governors of the Consolidated Stock Exchange and of the Special Committee of Five:

"The Special Committee of Five made a preliminary report to the board today. W. S. Silkworth resigned as President to take effect Tuesday, June 26. His resignation was accepted. He also sold his seat to the Exchange and thereby ceases to be a member. The special committee will make a further report soon."

Arnold Rothstein, once prominent in Tenderloin gambling circles and more recently head of an insurance brokerage firm, admitted yesterday at the bankruptcy investigation of E. M. Fuller & Co., the brokerage firm which failed for $6,000,000 a year ago, that he borrowed $187,000 from Edward M. Fuller in 1921. Under a fire of questions by Referee Harold P. Coffin, Francis L. Kohlman, counsel for the trustee in bankruptcy, and William M. Chadbourne, representing the 4,000 Fuller creditors, Rothstein fell back on his constitutional rights and refused to answer certain pertinent questions. To others he replied "I don't remember."

In admitting that Fuller lent him $187,000, Rothstein declared that he had paid it all back within a day or two of the occasions on which he borrowed it, in sums ranging from $200 to $24,000. When he first applied to Fuller for a loan, in April, 1921, he said, he put up, on Fuller's demand, $25,000 in bonds and securities to cover the loans. When he paid off the last loan, in November, 1921, Rothstein said, Fuller returned the collateral.

Questioned by Mr. Kohlman, Roth-

7 KILLED, 70 INJURED IN ELEVATED CRASH WHEN 2 CARS FALL INTO BROOKLYN STREET; TWO INQUIRIES TO SEEK CAUSE OF DISASTER

Accident Caused By Derailing of Truck; Will Aid Investigation, Says Head of Line

This statement was given out last night at the office of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation:

"Mr Menden, President, stated late this evening that the investigation of the cause of the accident this afternoon, while not complete, indicates that the rear truck on the rear car of the two-car train was derailed, for some cause not yet ascertained, at the frog of the switch just east of the Atlantic Avenue Station, causing the rear car to be precipitated into the street, dragging the forward truck of the rear car and the entire forward car with its trucks into the street, leaving the truck which was first derailed on the structure practically at right angles to the running rail.

"The truck and switches at the location in question had been inspected in the morning and found in good condition. Both cars of the train had been inspected on June 15, 1923, in accordance with the established practice and found O. K. The two cars in the train had been in operation on the same line over the same switch and frog for nine trips on the same day without any difficulty of any kind.

"The train was in charge of an experienced motorman with a good record. The investigation is being continued in co-operation with the public authorities to ascertain more definitely the cause of the derailment."

FELL LIKE PLANE, MOTORMAN SAYS

CHARGED WITH HOMICIDE

Worked With Hylan When Mayor Was a Motorman, and Talked With Him After Accident

A graphic story of the way he felt when his train was bumping along the line and when it dived into the street below was told yesterday in the Bergen Street Police Station by Edwin P. Parcell of 221 Hopkinson Avenue, the motorman. Parcell, a man of 56 years, was haggard and worn from his experience and the long questioning by officials. He was held on a technical charge of homicide.

Parcell stuck to his story that the switch presented its green side to him as he approached it. He has a record of thirty-four years with the B. R. T., six years of that time as an engineer on the old steam road. His record has been a good one and this was his first wreck.

"I worked with Hylan, our Mayor, when he was a motorman," said Parcell. He recognized me today after the wreck when the detectives were questioning me in that train in the Atlantic Avenue station, where I was taken after all the injured and dead had been taken away.

"He said to me, 'What happened, Ed? What's the trouble?'

"I told him, 'I don't know, Mr. Mayor.'"

"But about that wreck—I took the bend at Fifth Avenue, where we swing into Flatbush, at normal speed. One hundred and fifty yards east of the station and about seventy-five feet east of the switch I coasted like we always do coming into the station, at about twelve miles an hour.

"And those signals on that switch were green. They were green, and green means clear, and I kept on going, as I said, at about twelve miles an hour, coasting. Then came a peculiar sort of bump, bump, and I didn't know what it was. I applied the emergency brakes.

"I thought that bumping would stop, but it didn't, and then—" The gray-haired engineer's look of bewilderment changed into drawn lines and he hesitated.

"I felt her grind to the right," he resumed, "and then, first thing I knew, she was hanging—slipping like—over the trestle and I stood up in my cab and heard myself saying: 'My God, we're going down!'

"I've never been in an airplane, but I feel that it must give a feeling such as I felt when we started to go over. I can't describe it. Then we kept sort of sliding over and down into the street and I was standing up all the time.

Second Bump the Worst.

"Somehow the bump when we hit didn't seem so much. There was another bump right after that. I imagine that was the other car coming down on top of the first one and I think that did most of the damage, crushing with its full weight.

"How long I was down on the street in the cab I don't really know, but it couldn't have been very long. The screams of the women and the kids, and the men, too, I guess, brought me back to a realization of what had happened and I climbed out. I wasn't hurt much.

"I climbed out and I heard the screams and the women calling for help. That's all I remember."

SAW THE TRAIN FALL ON TOP OF HIS AUTO

STORIES OF EYEWITNESSES

Train Made a Nose Dive Like a Falling Airplane, Says One.

Nobody had a better view of the Brooklyn elevated wreck yesterday or came closer to it as a bystander than Douglas C. Fonda of Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J., whose automobile was stopped by the first car of the train falling squarely across the hood. The escape of Fonda and his friend, James Menkes of 1,430 University Avenue, the Bronx, from death was one of the most remarkable of the afternoon.

Fonda was driving, on his way to Manhattan. The car was a Dodge, one of the wagons used on big estates to meet trains and get baggage. He heard a grinding sound and heard the sizzling of crossed electric wires while a short distance from the tracks. He said he jumped before the train fell, although others who saw him said he sat in the car a few moments afterward, apparently dazed.

"I was going about ten miles an hour," said Fonda, "and knew that the car couldn't gather enough momentum to shoot past the elevated structure in time to prevent my car from being smashed. The train was beginning to topple when I jammed on my brakes, yelling to my friend. It wasn't three seconds until the first car of the train was resting on the hood and front part of the top of the car. We ran about forty feet after jumping from the auto and when we turned around the two-car train was lying on the ground.

"Hearing the cries of the people inside the cars we went back, and with others helped pull out several of those in the cars. We must have helped ten or twelve out before the police shoved us out of the way. I pointed to my car and told the officer that it was mine, and the officer said: 'Well, what can be done?'"

Victim Carried $200,000.

Lewis C. Awell, 45 years old, of 844 President Street, Brooklyn, President of the Lewis C. Awell Company, manufacturers of paints and varnishes, was one of the passengers on the first car. He had been reported dead by the police, but was found at his home, suffering from internal injuries and many cuts. His daughter said he could not tell his story, but said:

"My father was on the way to Jamaica to confer with business associates. He was riding in the rear part of the first car when it left the track and fell to the street. He lost consciousness, but after being taken from the debris by a patrolman he was identified through cards he carried and sent home. He had in his pockets $200,000 worth of securities. He has been badly injured, but we hope for his recovery."

One of the unusual escapes was that of A. M. Pear, a merchant of Asbury Park, who was in the rear car near the front door.

"There were about thirty people in our car," he said. "We were coming along Flatbush Avenue at a fair rate of speed. Just as we reached Atlantic Avenue, there was a grinding noise, which I later learned was the applying of the brakes. The car lifted to the right. There was a little girl about 14 years old sitting beside me. She became hysterical, and so did I for that matter. She rushed toward the window. I grabbed her and said, 'Don't jump.' There was a blinding flash, and the car was filled with a dense pungent odor. It was all over in a second. We hit the ground with a terrible thump.

Harry Carlson, an employe of the road, who lives at 223 South Fourth Street, Brooklyn, was passing along Atlantic Avenue at the time of the accident.

"I was looking at the train as it went by," Carlson said, "when I suddenly saw it jump the track and come down into the street. She struck nose down like a jet, and the second car meshed in slew inward. The forward car left the rails, and after bumping along the ties for fifty feet hung for a moment on the edge of the structure and then toppled over, pulling the second car after it.

A St. John's Avenue trolley car had just passed underneath and was only a Hylan Charges Transit Board With Negligence—Two Investigations Start Today.

The worst Brooklyn transit wreck since the Malbone Street tunnel disaster occurred on the elevated yesterday in Brooklyn, when a Bay Ridge train of two cars jumped from the rails at Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues and, with a grinding roar of splitting timbers and the spitting of blue flames from short circuits, dropped with a crash into the street, thirty-five feet below.

A cloud of dust and smoke rose from the shattered cars, and as horrified spectators near by rushed forward to help pull out the injured, a truck of one of the cars, which had broken off, and stuck on the edge of the tracks, fell and smashed through the second car of the train. The cries of those inside the cars ceased, and a tragic silence followed as policemen, firemen and others lifted the victims out and found that seven persons had been killed and seventy injured.

What caused the wreck will not be known until officials of the city and the Transit Commission have completed their investigation of the broken trucks and other equipment. Either something fell from one of the cars, causing a derailment, or something on a truck broke and caused it to jump from the track. There was sharp division of opinion, also, as to whether the first or second car fell toward the street first, but all those in the street who saw the accident, and the motorman, said that the first car went down first, pulling the second after it.

Mayor Examines Tracks.

Mayor Hylan with Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, were at the scene of the wreck within a few minutes. With District Attorney Charles J. Dodd of Brooklyn, they went up to the elevated tracks and made a careful examination of the marks made by the derailed wheels. Mayor Hylan was incensed at the condition of the wooden guard rails, and both he and Mr. Dodd said they were convinced that if these rails had been sound the cars would have stayed on the elevated structure. Mr. Dodd will begin a public investigation of the accident at his offices at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

An attack on the Transit Commission was made by Mayor Hylan after he had seen the condition of the guard rails, which he said apparently had been there for many years and which should have been ordered replaced by inspectors of the commission. He said that Governor Smith should call a special session of the Legislature to remove the commission because of negligence. The only reply Le Roy T. Harkness, Transit Commissioner, would make to this after he returned to his office from the scene of the wreck, was to say that he did not care to express any "curbstone opinion" as to the cause of the wreck, adding:

Use Axes and Saws in Rescue.

The animosities between the city officials and officials of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company, which only recently took over the road, and representatives of the Transit Commission, were intensified by the extraordinary scene in one of the busiest spots in Brooklyn, where men struggled with axe and sledge and saw, blackened and covered with sweat, to rescue the unfortunate persons groaning in the smashed cars.

The train had come around the turn from Fifth Avenue and was "drifting" along without power up the approach to the Atlantic Avenue station. Underneath the elevated structure automobiles and trolley cars moved. Hundreds of persons came and went from the two subways which cross at that point, and from the Flatbush station of the Long Island Railroad. Always a busy place, traffic was unusually thick when tragedy plunged into the midst of it.

A few hundred feet east of the elevated station was a crossover switch, which the motorman, Edward Parcell, 56 years old, of Hopkinson Avenue, Brooklyn, an old employe with an excellent record, said showed green, the signal for him to come ahead. As he neared this switch those in the street below, taxicab drivers sitting at their wheels, and men loafing in the shade of the brick buildings, saw blue flames shoot out from under the rear car. Then came a jolt, and the second car meshed in slew inward. The forward car left the rails, and after bumping along the ties for fifty feet hung for a moment on the edge of the structure and then toppled over, pulling the second car after it.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, June 25. — Dispatches from Ontario show that in today's election the Conservatives swept that province.

The Farmers, or Progressive Party, which is somewhat akin to the farm bloc in the United States Congress, has passed away, according to figures here at a late hour.

This will mean that Ontario will have the only Conservative Legislature of the nine provinces. It means a turn of the tide also in regard to Federal affairs. The Province of Ontario at the last Federal election sent a strong farmer delegation to Ottawa, thereby largely accounting for the defeat of former Premier Arthur Meighen. With Ontario swinging back to the Conservative ranks, expectation will not centre on the strong possibility of the conservative Federal Party regaining power.

Another effect of the change in Ontario will be a referendum on the liquor question. A. Howard Ferguson, Ontario leader of the Conservative party, has repeatedly said in the course of the election campaign that it is for the people to declare themselves in regard to the liquor question. This is taken to mean that the Conservative Legislature will give the people of Ontario another chance to declare themselves on the issue.

The Farmer Government has tried to enforce prohibition strictly and sought to turn the entire campaign on its record in this regard.

TORONTO, June 25. — With ninety out of 111 seats accounted for, and the expectation of few more being heard from definitely tonight, the Conservatives will have at least sixty-eight members in the new Legislature as against the Farm-Labor Government's seven, the Liberals thirteen and the Independents two.

At least forty-five Conservatives were returned from Toronto and the North and East, without apparently a single Government supporter winning in this part of the country.

Wellington Hay, the Liberal leader, was defeated in North Perth. R. H. Grant, the Minister of Education; Walter Rollo, Minister of Labor, and Harry Mills, Minister of Mines, have been defeated.

Ethel Barrymore Sues for Divorce From R. G. Colt in Rhode Island Court

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, June 25.—Ethel Barrymore, wife of Russell G. Colt of this city, son of the late Colonel Samuel P. Colt, is seeking a divorce. Papers in the suit have been filed in the Superior Court of Rhode Island, and the case is set down for a hearing next week.

While Mr. Colt was not to be found tonight, it is believed that he will not contest the action.

Miss Barrymore's action is a surprise to her friends, although it was known to them that the actress had more than once threatened to seek a separation from her husband. Even as early as 1911, a little more than two years after her marriage in March 1909 in the rectory of the Church of the Precious Blood at Hyde Park, Mass., it was reported that she would divorce him. There were subsequent reports, too, but always it is said her Catholic faith and her devotion to her three children prevented her from taking the step.

The action here has been brought through Miss Barrymore's attorneys Gardner, Moss & Haslam, of this city, who, it is said, arranged for the serving of the writ on Mr. Colt. The writ was served, it was reported, on April 28, when a deputy sheriff met Mr. Colt in the Biltmore Hotel here. This report could not be confirmed today.

As one of the heirs to the estate of Colonel Colt of this city, President of the United States Rubber Company, Miss Barrymore on his death two years ago received $25,000 in cash and a joint share in Colonel Colt's estate at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where she now lives. In addition, $50,000 was left to each of her three children. Her husband, besides receiving $100,000 outright, also received one-sixth of the residuary estate and full rights to Linden Place, the Colt Summer home at Bristol, R. I., as a home for himself and his family.

few feet away. Traffic Patrolman Melbourne had just cleared the street, and only a little, new delivery truck and a few pedestrians were in line with the falling cars. Melbourne and the driver of the truck saw the cars shoot forward in the air and then fall slowly on their sides. Melbourne leaped backward, with a shout of warning.

The truck driver, paralyzed with fear, moved his hands and feet spasmodically and stalled his car. The first car of the train crashed down on the hood of the machine, the driver staring at it as his front wheels gave way under the load. For moments he sat there and then jumped from his seat and ran. Back under the second car was the body of a man who had been crossing the street and who had not jumped in time.

With the crash a cloud of dust drifted up from the street, and the cries of those in the wreckage came with heartrending distinctness to the men and women near by, who had stood transfixed with horror at the sight of the falling train. As they watched, the first truck of the second car which had been left on the edge of the rails when the car was snatched from it by the pull of the coupling of the first car, tottered and fell with a sickening smash on top of the car. It was from this car that most of the killed were taken, victims of the falling truck.

Up on the torn edge of the structure broken ties and moldering guard rails caught fire from the sparks made by broken electrical cables, and sparks dropped to the wreckage below, setting small fires. The trolley wires had been broken and the four loose ends jumped about from bits of iron and steel in the street, sizzling and throwing off showers of sparks which set fire to excelsior from the torn seats.

Quickly End Fire Peril.

It seemed for a moment that fire would add to the horror inside the cars, from which broken and maimed men and women were crawling, while others, helpless, remained with legs and heads and arms hanging from the windows. And then all the fire apparatus in Brooklyn seemed to get there at once. Patrolmen and others had pulled all the boxes in the neighborhood, had sent messages to Fire and Police Headquarters, and to hospitals for ambulances. Hose lines were run out and manned in a jiffy, men with chemical extinguishers ran up ladders to the elevated tracks above, and in a few minutes the fire was out.

The work of rescue had been going on with all the speed and humaneness shown by New Yorkers in moments of disaster. Taxicab drivers sprang from their cars and as fast as they lifted persons into their machines rushed away with them to hospitals. The driver of a truck stopped, threw open the doors behind and called: "Put them in here." He loaded his truck again and again and took nearly twenty men and women to the nearby hospitals. Postal clerks rushed from the Times Plaza Station in the Long Island Railroad Building, and carried the more severely hurt and the dead in there. The place was converted into a temporary morgue and first aid station, where women from the Red Cross Chapter and the Salvation Army Post, both within a few blocks, aided ambulance surgeons in their work.

Captain Matthew J. Kennedy of the Bergen Street Police Station arrived in a few moments with his reserves and sent out calls for more men until he had the two wrecked cars and the mass of apparatus about them surrounded with a cordon of 175 men. In this clear space firemen, policemen and men from the wrecking departments of the elevated company tore at the wooden cars with sledges and crowbars, ripping their way in to those caught in the mass of debris.

Struggle in Wrecked Car.

The first car fell squarely on its right side and did not collapse to any extent, but the inside of it was a shambles of struggling men and women covered with blood, and others moaning on the floor, unable to move under the trampling of those above them. It was quickly emptied.

The second car had fallen almost upside down and presented a harder problem. It was in a worse state of collapse, partly from the weight of the huge truck which had shattered the floor support and caved it in. Oxyacetylene torches were used to help cut away the supports about the windows, so as to enlarge these openings and permit rescuers to get in to the desperately injured and the bodies of the dead. So rapidly and efficiently did those sweat and soot blackened men work, bruising and injuring themselves in the effort to force their way inside, that in less than three-quarters of an hour the last of the injured had been taken out and placed in one of the swarm of ambulances from all over that section of Brooklyn and lower Manhattan.

There were many amazing escapes. A little girl about 12 years old stepped from one of the wrecked cars, pushed her hat on straight and walked rather uncertainly to a shop near by, where she cried a little and then went on. Morris Pear of 923 Somerville Avenue, Asbury Park, was in the second car near the rear door. When he felt the car begin to drop he grabbed a girl and tried to fling her to the rear platform. She got away from him, but he made it, and just before the car hit the ground he leaped off and escaped with only a shaking up.

The motorman, Parcell, stuck to his post as the car careened toward the ground. The part in which his box was placed struck first, but was not crushed, although the glass in the windows was cleaned out so completely that not a piece remained in place. William Culien, a taxicab driver of 696 Bergen Street, helped Parcell out, and, aside from a few scratches and the jolting he received, he was found to be unhurt.

Woman Seeks Missing Jewels.

One woman was more concerned about the loss of her jewels than the fact that she had fortunately escaped unhurt, and she ran into the Post Office, where the dead and injured were lying about on the floor, crying: "Where are my diamonds, where are my diamonds? I left them on the train."

Another man who had cause to be thankful was Larry McDonald, a postman, who missed the train at the station before Atlantic Avenue, and, after bemoaning his luck, decided to walk to work instead of waiting for the next train. When he arrived there he found the train he had missed in the middle of the street.

In the meantime officialdom had been gathering in full force to take charge of the situation and help in the investigations. Mayor Hylan heard of the accident at the City Hall and jumped into Dock Commissioner John H. Delaney's car, arriving at the scene fifteen minutes after the cars fell. Fire Commissioner Thomas Drennan followed him, with Deputy Chief John O'Hara, who took charge of the firemen. District Attorney Dodd arrived with a corps of assistants and detectives. Second Deputy Police Commissioner John Daly, in charge of Brooklyn; Inspector John D. Coughlin, in charge of detectives; Chief Inspector William J. Lahey, Inspector Joseph Conboy, Inspector John W. O'Connor and Deputy Chief Inspector John O'Brien were some of the police officials there.

George L. Lucas, acting chief executive officer of the Transit Commission; H. M. Latey, an electrical engineer, with a number of inspectors, went from the commission's offices at 49 Lafayette Street. Members of the new Board of Directors of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company were at lunch at the Chamber of Commerce in Brooklyn and about to start on a trip of inspection of the line. When they heard of the accident most of them went over, including G. H. Dahl, Chairman, and President W. S. Menden.

All these conflicting forces met on the shattered elevated structure, where one truck, twisted so that it lay crosswise from its natural position, was all that remained of the train on the roadbed. They found Mayor Hylan there with Grover Whalen, manager [illegible] hand inspection of the tracks in an effort to determine what had caused the accident.

Mayor Charges Tampering.

The Mayor, straddling from tie to tie and warning persons to stay away from the rails, in case any stray electricity from broken cables got into them, made a careful scrutiny of the marks, which presented a puzzling key to the accident if one knew how to read them. The Mayor brought to the task his experience as a motorman on that very line years ago, and the first thing his eyes fell upon was a crossover switch thrown so that the red signal to stop was against the train.

"That switch has been tampered with since the accident," said the Mayor. "Some one has thrown it over, in an attempt to place the blame upon an individual. There have been several up here since the accident with keys that fitted the lock."

The switch was in a strategic position, although it was determined later that it had nothing to do with the accident. The first mark to show that a wheel had left the track was at the frog of the crossover, about thirty feet east of the switch. Inside the frog was a guard piece of steel, and it had been gouged as if from a terrific blow from a wheel. Then a truck had slipped off and slid along inside the guard rail and into the switch on the side left open when it was thrown for the crossover. There were no marks on the bolts there.

But there were no marks on the other side of the switch, such as would have been made if the other wheel had forced its way through after the switch had been thrown against the train. Mayor Hylan said he had run through switches himself, and knew that if this switch had been thrown before the train reached it, or if the wheel had forced it closed, the point would have been bent or broken off.

While the controversy raged about the switch, others were examining the marks of the wheels east of the switch, where they had torn and gouged their ways along the ties and through the heavy guard beams. The marks showed that the train apparently ran for some time on the very edge of the ties and then had torn through the guard rails, which were smashed into matchwood, and dropped to the ground. These guard rails, or beams, seemed to the lay observer to be of wood so old that its power of resistance had vanished.

Disputes Cause of Accident.

Mr. Menden went to the roadbed and approached the Mayor. He saw the turned switch, also, and said:

"Mr. Mayor, it is this switch which was the cause of the accident."

"No, you are wrong," said the Mayor heatedly. "That switch was thrown and locked after the accident."

Mr. Menden looked dumbfounded and said very little more. The Mayor went on to point out that the switch could not have been thrown from its position by the wheels, for the reason that the turning part of the switch would probably have been broken. He did not think the train ever reached the switch. He also said that the rails for 200 feet east of the switch were in bad condition, not properly laid, and that the ties and guard beams showed evidence of dating back for years. It was suggested that the switch be thrown, but District Attorney Dodd said he did not want a thing disturbed until the official photographer got there and made a picture of the roadbed.

"That's right," said the Mayor, while officials of the B. M. T. explained that they did not want to do anything except help get at the truth.

"This is a terrible calamity," said the Mayor to reporters to whom he pointed out the significant marks about the switch. "I am heartily sorry for those in this awful accident and for their families and friends. We will investigate thoroughly. If any one is to blame he will be indicted. This includes every person who directly or indirectly may be responsible for it. I believe this accident is partly the result of using wooden cars. Those cars have been in service for thirty years.

"I have put in two hours investigating this thing and I am now convinced, from what I have seen and from the reports I have received, that the wreck was caused by a defective truck leaving the tracks and crushing through the weak guard rail.

"One thing that contributed to this calamity is the fact that stronger guard rails were not put at the side of the tracks to prevent a train leaving the elevated structure and falling into the street. That is what the guard rails are supposed to be for. The present rails have been up since the road was built about thirty years ago. The cars that were wrecked are from thirty-five to forty years old.

"I blame the officials of the road and the Transit Commission for this tragedy for allowing such conditions to exist. I shall try to reach the Governor and ask him to call a special session of the Legislature to remove the Transit Commission and the officials of the road, and to place in their stead men who will protect the lives of the public."

Says Light Was Changed.

District Attorney Dodd said, after Assistant District Attorney Joseph T. Gallagher had questioned Parcell, the motorman, that he was convinced the signal was green when the train approached it. Parcell told Gallagher that when he felt the first bump and felt he put on the emergency brakes and that they failed to hold. Then the car leaped from the structure, and as it fell he felt a jerk and then a release, as if it had yanked the second car and then the coupling had broken.

"It won't be the motorman who goes to jail for this," said Mr. Dodd, "but somebody higher up. I am convinced the signals showed green and that the switch had nothing to do with the accident. If the guard rail was of sound wood the cars, after jumping the track, would not have plunged into the street. The wood, from my investigation, was rotten all through. I did not find any buckling of the rails or any spreading of the rails. So far my investigation has not shown how the trucks got off the tracks. There were no defects in the rails. I have ordered the trucks of both cars to be removed to the Municipal Yards, where an examination will be made by experts in the Department of Plant and Structures. The cars and trucks are very old, and must have been used for many years.

"I have ordered the superintendent of the line, the foreman, assistant foreman, track walkers and inspectors to appear at my office at 9:30 tomorrow morning for examination. I have also ordered the inspectors of the B. M. T. machinery department who have to do with the inspection of the trucks under the cars and the cars themselves, to appear at my office. I have also ordered the inspectors of the Transit Commission, who are supposed to inspect the roadbeds and structures and guard rails where this accident happened to appear so that we can find out when the inspection of these rails was last made, and if they were passed.

"In my talk with Parcell he told me he came along at no more than twelve miles an hour and the signal, which was a head signal, directly over Atlantic Avenue, showed the motorman a green side, which meant a clear track. The motorman took it for granted that it was safe to proceed, and had only gone fifteen feet when he felt there was something wrong, as he felt a sensation of dropping. The car went over on its side. The motorman ran an engine on this road before it was electrified. I also believe that some one turned that switch thinking that the motorman had been killed and couldn't tell his story. That was done to offset an investigation or to becloud an investigation."

Start to Clear Wreckage.

Mr. Dodd said an official of the road had told him that many persons on the road had keys to the switch.

After the District Attorney and his assistants and the engineers of the city and the Transit Commission had finished their examination of the roadbed and the wreck, the wrecking crew started in demolishing the cars and clearing up the mess in the street. For some time men had been at work on the trolley wires joining them with rope and pulley, pounding and begging from the tops of their high wagons.

Big tanks of oxygen were rolled up near the cars, and with hammers and chisels and the sissing torches, men tore through the cars, taking them apart as if they were made of paper. They worked in a tangled mass of wires and broken wood, and as piece after piece of the cars was detached, they gradually shrank in size and finally collapsed. Big trucks of the Department of Plant and Structures were backed up to the car trucks, which were loaded with chains, and with snorting motors the trucks started off. There was a rending and tearing of wood and metal and the unwieldly things were yanked away, loaded on the trucks and taken to the municipal yards for examination.

Ladders were run up to the elevated structure and electricians started to repair the dangling wires. As a man picked up one of the cables the end of it struck a steel rail in the street. There was a flash and explosion and the man jumped back ten feet from the threat of sudden death. Then he nonchalantly picked it up again and started up a ladder, rolling the cable as he went, as if it were no more harmful than a piece of ordinary wire.

The workers on the second car, where there was more difficulty in disentangling the mass of twisted steel, got a scare when one of the oxyacetylene tanks blew up and went skyrocketing up in the air, narrowly missing some of the workers on the elevated structure. Finally, the wood and pieces of steel were all carted away in trucks, the wires were patched, and service was resumed on the tracks above at about 7 o'clock. The trains were run over the same rails that were there before the accident, but they moved with great caution. None of the rails had been damaged sufficiently to make them dangerous.

DECLARES HYLAN USES WRECK FOR POLITICS

A telegram by members of the Passengers' Protective Association, formed after the Malbone tunnel disaster, in which more than 100 persons were killed, framed last night at the Cortelyou Clubhouse, Avenue D and Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, was sent to Mayor Hylan by John J. O'Leary, counsel for the association. The telegram follows:

"As the attorney for the Malbone Tunnel Wreck Association I desire to file with you a public protest against your public statement upon the railroad disaster which occurred in Brooklyn today. Without one word or thought for the victims of the disaster you proceed to manufacture political capital for yourself out of the tragedy.

"While this disaster is in the public mind I desire to call public attention to the fact that you have not done one thing toward helping orphans or widows recover their damages. On the contrary, you have done everything possible to block proposed plans which included prompt payment of the Malbone tunnel damage claims.

"Your call for indictments reminds the public of the fact that this is all you did before. Convictions are what count and you did nothing toward securing convictions of those criminally responsible for the Malbone tunnel wreck. Neither did you do anything either to aid or encourage our association to bring the real men behind the Malbone tunnel disaster to justice."

The most serious rapid transit accident in the city in recent years occurred on Nov. 1, 1918, when a Brighton Beach train of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company jumped the track at the Malbone Street tunnel, Brooklyn, killing ninety-one passengers and injuring more than a hundred.

The train which was made up of five wooden cars of the oldest type in use was speeding with a rush-hour crowd on its way from Park Row to Coney Island. On the sharp curve approaching the tunnel at Malbone Street the first car jumped the track, plunging into a concrete partition between the north and south bound tracks. Nearly every man, woman and child in the first car was killed and most of those in the second were killed or severely injured. The train was in charge of an inexperienced motorman, pressed into service on account of a strike.

One person, two killed and forty passengers injured in December, 1921, when a southbound local train crashed into a local train stalled on the Ninth Avenue elevated structure at Fortieth Street. The stalled train had been having trouble with its motor.

Scores Hurt in Chicago "L" Smash.

CHICAGO, June 25.—More than sixty persons were bruised and shaken up and one man was seriously injured today when an elevated train crashed into the rear of another train. The trains operate on the surface at the point where the collision occurred.

Dead and Injured in Elevated Wreck

Following are the names of the dead and injured in the Brooklyn elevated accident yesterday:

The Dead.

B. M. T. RAISES WAGES.

Advances of 4 to 5 Per Cent. in New Scale.

A wage increase of between 4 and 5 per cent. for the employes of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation, until recently known as the B. R. T., was approved yesterday by the Board of Directors of the new corporation. The increase goes into effect Aug. 8. The directors and representatives of the employes met yesterday in the rooms of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, and tentatively agreed on the new wage agreement to remain in effect for one year.

The new scale provides for an increase of between 4 and 5 per cent. in wages for linemen and other employes of the company, in addition to the trainmen, conductors and motormen. The agreement was adopted after conferences extending over several weeks. President William J. Menden of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Corporation said yesterday:

"All of the Employes' Committee, without exception, discussed the question of working conditions and wage schedules in the most friendly spirit and indicated throughout a disposition to cooperate with the management."

Yesterday was the day set by the new Directors for a complete inspection of the line. Just before the trip was to start, and when all but two of the Directors and officials had assembled, word of the accident was received. Chairman G. H. Dahl and President W. S. Menden at once hurried to the scene.

an airplane that falls and hits the ground. The second car came down on top of it, telescoped it and then the two cars rolled over on their sides and a sheet of flame shot into the air.

"Then women and men screamed. It was terrible to hear the groans and screams of pain and terror. Children were crying, and it seemed to me as if thousands of people were trying to climb out from the wreckage, each thinking only of him or herself. It looked to me like a battlefield, where nobdy had a chance. The women and children were helpless.

"Patrolman Michael Kerrigan of the Bergen Street Station and I ran up and pulled a lot of them out of the first car and carrid them over to the Long Island station, where we stretched them out on the floor. One of these, a woman, and another, a man, were dead, with their heads crushed.

"The clerks in the Post Office at the depot took care of the injured that we brought in. I guess the patrolman and I must have carried fifteen or twenty injured men and women to the station. I carried a little baby that had both legs broken and that kept crying all the time for its mamma. That hurt me more than anything else. I was pretty nervous, but I managed to keep in mind that these people had to be taken out of that wreck before the rest of that overhanging structure fell down, as it was threatening to do at any moment."

Louis Stephen, manager of a café at 130 Flatbush Avenue, said:

"Just as I opened the door of the café to go out, a tile fell onto the pavement and then the cars came down. They hit with a crash that in itself was bad enough but that had an awful effect on me because I knew people were in those cars. Sounds that were still more awful came then—screams and groans of men and women and children. It was the most horrible thing I ever heard.

"I blew my police whistle. While I was doing that I saw another train coming from the other way and I thought it was going to come down, too, but the motorman stopped. I ran to the wreck and I helped out everyone I could until the police pushed most of us back."

Joseph J. Ryan, a traffic officer of the Seventy-second Precinct, Sheepshead Bay, who was on his way to serve subpoenaes, was in an automobile that turned a corner just after the cars struck. He turned in a fire alarm and telephoned police headquarters for ambulances.

Victims Struggling in a Mass.

"Those who died were fortunate, it seemed to me when I looked into the cars," Ryan said. "As long as I live I can never forget it. All the people were in a mass there, struggling and screaming, with blood running over them. They all seemed to be bleeding or stained with blood. One woman's head was terribly cut on top, and one jaw seemed to be crushed in. The hand of another woman was almost cut off.

"One woman I took out through a window died a few minutes after I carried her into the Post Office. I can't forget the inside of those cars. They looked like my idea of purgatory."

The first indication that a man in the street had been crushed by one of the falling cars was given by J. L. McCarthy, of 76 Fulton Market.

"I was crossing Fifth Avenue at Flatbush Avenue when a stranger asked me for a match," he said. "I gave it to him and he went along up the street smoking the cigarette that he had lighted. I was walking along in the same direction, when suddenly the cars fell from the elevated structure. One of them hit this man and I have no doubt he is dead. I jumped and was hit on the foot by something."

Charles Kingsley, manager of the Alphonse Smith Piano Company, at 162 Flatbush Avenue, a short distance from the accident, said it sounded "like an earthquake.

"There was a flash and a roar. The cars were completely covered with smoke and dust caused by the splintering wood," he said. "There was screaming, and I saw four or five people climb out of windows. One was a girl about 14 years old. She stepped out and seemed dazed for a moment; then recovered, brushed herself off and walked away."

A number of those who saw the accident spoke of the blue flames that shot from under the cars some moments before the cars appeared to be derailed. One of these witnesses said there were several explosions as if from crossed high-tension wires.

Twelve Drowned in Michigan.

DETROIT, June 25.—Seeking relief from the sweltering Sunday heat, twelve persons were drowned in the rivers and lakes of Michigan yesterday. Grand Rapids held the record for drownings, according to reports, with three. Two were drowned in Detroit. The official temperature here was 94 and Grand Rapids reported a high mark of 96.

HARKNESS DERIDES HYLAN WRECK VIEWS

EXPERTS EXAMINE TRACKS

Commission's Engineers Also Go Over Shattered Equipment, but Express No Opinions.

Officials of the Transit Commission, after their return last evening from an inspection trip to the scene of the Brooklyn elevated railroad wreck, said that they were unable to determine, without further investigation, the cause of the accident.

"We are not going to jump at any conclusions," said Commissioner Le Roy T. Harkness. "We have all the evidence there is as to the physical situation, such as the condition of the tracks, ties, cars, &c. Beyond that the human element must be taken into account. Until we have the statements of witnesses, including the motorman, we are not going to express any opinion."

Commissioner Harkness characterized as "ridiculous" the assertion attributed to Mayor Hylan that the rails were twenty-five years old, saying that no rails would stand up for twenty-five years. As to the fact that the cars were of the wooden type—the records show that they were put into service in 1898—the Commissioner declared that he did not believe the accident would have been less serious if steel cars had been in use.

When another statement by the Mayor blaming the commission for the accident was called to his attention, Mr. Harkness said:

"These accidents are deplorable enough in themselves without attempting to make political capital out of them."

In addition to Commissioner Harkness, a party of engineers and inspectors from the commission left for the scene of the accident in an automobile as soon as the news of it reached them. George L. Lucas, acting chief executive officer, who is an engineer, was in charge of the party. The others were H. M. Latey, electrical engineer; William L. Selmer, engineer of structure and grade crossings; William H. Freeman, railway engineer; Francis G. Daniel, railway engineer; George F. Daggett, chief of the Transit Bureau; two car inspectors and two track inspectors.

Mr. Lucas and his associates went over the ground carefully, examining the marks on ties and rails. The rails were found to be in perfect alignment, with no evidence of expansion, which exploded a theory that the hot weather might have been responsible for the wreck.

Although the cars were badly wrecked none of the axles was broken, according to the transit engineers, and there were no broken wheels or broken flanges.

The engineers spent a long time inspecting the switch. They arrived at the opinion that, even though the switch were closed and the signal set against the train as they were found after the accident, that would not account for the derailment of the train proceeding so slowly as witnesses reported.

Checking up on the story that the motorman had said he "felt a tug and then a drag," the experts examined the ground carefully to see if there was any warrant for a theory that the rear car left the track first and pulled the others after it. Although witnesses to the accident are unanimous in the statement that the front car left the track first, there was said to be evidence to support the contrary version.

Another story that was investigated was to the effect that the switch had been set against the train after the accident. No possible motive for such an act was advanced. The experts were generally agreed that the switch played no part in the accident.

When the engineers inspected the switch they found it locked with the switch signal set at danger. There were marks upon the guard rail and ties indicating that at least one truck of the train had left the rails after passing the frog.

The most likely theory of the accident, experts said, was that some part of the machinery had dropped under the wheels and caused the derailment. The chief difficulty in checking up on this was the wrecked condition of the cars.

SWIFT BLAZE TRAPS BATTERY BATHERS

attempted to lower his mother to the dock. Her weight proved to be too heavy, however, and she slipped from his grasp, injuring her shoulder and abdomen. Before fireman could reach the boy, he jumped to the dock, with a resulting sprained ankle.

Deputy Fire Chief Helm on his arrival sent in a second alarm; then a third and a fourth in quick succession. Pier 3 is directly opposite the Whitehall Building and about 400 feet away. Between them the space has been filled in with cinders in preparation for laying a street. When the apparatus attempted to cross it sank into the cinders up to the hubs and stalled.

Firemen brought ladders and hose across the ground and succeeded in getting the few remaining persons from the bath house. As the flames spread the heat became intense and the firemen were driven back for a time for the space of a city block.

Soon after the tug Cornelius caught fire it broke away from the pier and drifted toward the La Betta. Before the fireboats could prevent it the barges William G. Porter and Jacob Siegel, of the Inland Towing Company, which were unloading the steamer, were caught by the flames. They in turn set fire to the superstructure of the La Betta.

Two Shipping Board tugs with the aid of the fireboat New Yorker pulled the La Betta out into the river, where the crew of the fireboat boarded her and put out the blaze. The extent of her damage is not known. She was anchored off Governors Island for the night. The Cornelius burned to the water's edge. The barge Charles J. O'Neil, tied up on the north side of Pier 3, was also destroyed. The lighter E. J. McCormack, near by, was badly damaged.

The Injured.

BUSETTI, MADELINE, 25 Sullivan Street; back injured.

TREGELLIS, THOMAS, fireman at baths; legs burned.

A temporary hospital was set up in a rest room of the Whitehall Building where physicians from Broad Street Hospital and Dr. Harry Archer, honorary Deputy Fire Chief, attended the injured. All were able to return to their homes after being treated.

The fire drew an immense crowd which the police officially estimated at fully 30,000 persons. It was reported that the fire was started by two small boys playing near the end of the pier, who set fire to some loose paper, but this could not be confirmed.

Wonderful! all that wreck from one little match!

HIS car's in the repair shop and he will miss about two months of the best motoring weather—all because he asked his friend to hold the wheel a minute while he lighted his cigarette. The smash-up taught him something, anyhow. When the car comes back it will have a Cuno Electric Match on the dash for him, with its compact little ash receiver attachment, and another in the tonneau for his friends.

Pull out—light up—snap back—hand on wheel and eyes on road

That's all there is to it—and it's plenty.

Any garage man puts it on in less than an hour. Don't put it off—put it on!

SAYS RUHR IS FIRM IN WILL TO RESIST

Cuno Is Convinced Entire Nation Is Equally Determined in Opposition to French.

PASSIVE POLICY WILL GO ON

WILL PAY TO GAIN FREEDOM

This, French Say, Justifies Theory Germany Will Make Good When Convinced It Is Cheapest Way Out.

BERLIN, June 25 (Associated Press).—In a speech at the opening of the Agricultural Exposition in Koenigsberg, East Prussia, yesterday, Chancellor Cuno referred to the Ruhr and reparations problems in words considered to show little disposition on the part of the Government to compromise.

The Chancellor declared the spirit of resistance and the will to resist were as firm as ever among the Ruhr population. This convinced him, he said, that the entire German people would show themselves as unswerving in political and economic matters as the people of the Ruhr and the Rhineland.

Nothing had been left undone to find a reasonable, supportable and final solution of the reparation problem, he declared. The German memorandum had achieved, on the whole, what was expected, namely, that it would convince the world of Germany's honest desire to live at peace with her neighbors and not to promise reparations but to pay them by the exercise of the utmost strength of the German people, on the condition that the Germans should be able to say: "At the conclusion of these deliveries stands freedom."

Foreign press comment admitted that great progress had been made, he went on, although France was not yet ready for negotiations, and still demanded abandonment of the passive resistance, which, he asserted, had not been created by the Government's order but by the people's will. No Government could end this, and moreover, no German Government could wish to end it so long as its abandonment did not show a sure path to a solution of justice and equity.

"We shall reach this goal sooner," concluded Herr Cuno, "the stronger our people in the occupied territory show themselves and the stronger the united will of the people of unoccupied Germany proves to be."

Argue Cuno Justifies Poincare.

PARIS, June 25.—Herr Cuno's speech of yesterday at Koenigsberg is regarded here as of no consequence directly and of importance only indirectly, since the German Chancellor declared Germany intended to pay reparations "in order to free her territories and remove hindrances upon her economic life."

This declaration is interpreted by the French as justification of Premier Poincaré's policy, which is based on the conviction that Germany will pay when, and only when, she is convinced it is the cheapest thing for her to do.

Herr Cuno's statement that no German Government can stop passive resistance, as M. Poincaré demands, brings the reply here that passive resistance consists in idleness of the Ruhr workers, that Berlin pays them to be idle, and that if Berlin stopped paying them to be idle they would seek some one to pay them to work. Therefore the French say if Berlin stops paying the Ruhr idle and rescinds its orders for resistance, Paris will consider the German Government has fulfilled its part in meeting the French demand for an end of resistance.

It is said that in private diplomatic conversations with the London Cabinet M. Poincaré has stood firmly on his position that Berlin must cease paying passive resisters and consent to civilian occupation of the Ruhr before negotiations can begin. Inasmuch as active conversations are proceeding every day between M. Poincaré and Mr. Baldwin, it is believed that the British have stopped arguing those two points for the moment and that the two Premiers are discussing facts and figures of reparations.

Interfering with any program of larger British financial concessions to bring about a Ruhr settlement, Mr. Baldwin appears to be facing a British demand that England collect out of what is owing her what she will pay the United States. The French are pressing for a better bargain than that, which they refused when Mr. Bonar Law offered it in January.

And that seems to be about all there is to be said about the Prime Ministers' talks of the last week except that if they reach a point where an agreement looks possible there will be a conference on the subject. If there appears too little prospect of finding common ground the Premiers will probably not risk the failure of a public conference.

The Alleged Rhineland Report.

In regard to the so-called report of Commissioner Tirard to Paris, published in The London Observer yesterday, the Quai d'Orsay insists that M. Tirard never made any such report. The weakness in Mr. Garvin's indictment of the reported French efforts to separate the Rhineland appears to be the fact that M. Poincaré has recently refused several times to enter into relations with Hans Dorten, the separatist leader. Last month Dr. Dorten spent five days in Paris trying in vain to see the French Premier. There is no denying that the French would like to see a separate Rhineland, but it is said to be M. Poincaré's idea that the last way to get it would be for the French to take an active part in the agitation.

What The Observer published, French officials say, probably from German sources, might be a composition of reports by French agents, but that it would be difficult to support it as representing the policy of the Poincaré Government.

LONDON, June 25.—The Observer's disclosure of alleged secret relations between the French High Commissioner in the Rhineland and German subjects regarding attempts to create a separate Rhineland State was the subject of a question in the Commons today, put by Ramsay MacDonald.

Premier Stanley Baldwin replied that the Government had no knowledge as to the authenticity or reverse of the report in question, and that no representations would be made on the subject by Great Britain.

FRANCE GOING TOO FAR, IRVING T. BUSH THINKS

He Is Convinced She Is Trying to Ruin Germany and Cut Her Up.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, June 25.—Irving T. Bush of New York, just returned from Russia after carefully studying the situation in Central Europe, gave The Chicago Tribune the following signed statement of the result of his studies there:

"Despite the desire of the people of the United States to keep out of the muddy waters of Europe, I believe the time has come for America to express its moral convictions on the Ruhr situation.

"I know the people at home feel as I, that France is entitled to protection on reparations. If she maintains her right can only be enforced by crippling Germany to a point where it may become a public danger to the world, I believe public opinion will say she is going too far.

"I have reached the conclusion that she is endeavoring to ruin Germany and divide the territory into small States like the Balkans. We can only afford one set of Balkans. They produce all the trouble the world can take care of. I do not hold a brief for Germany, but every business man holds a brief of common sense. Common sense in this situation is that our children will pay for the hate France is breeding for the next generation.

"It is time at last to say stop and France should know exactly how we in the United States feel about pushing a defeated enemy to ruin."

CAPT. ROSE OF U-53 SEIZED BY BELGIANS

German Who Startled Newport in 1916 Is Cruelly Treated, Berlin Charges.

BERLIN, June 25.—Captain Hans Rose, Commander of the German submarine U-53, which surprised the world in October, 1916, by suddenly appearing off Newport, R. I., has been arrested by the Belgians and imprisoned at Sterkrade, according to Red Cross advices from the Ruhr, which assert that he is lying at the point of death because of maltreatment by the soldiers.

A German Red Cross delegate in the Ruhr reports that he was present at the jail when Captain Rose, whose home is in Essen, was brought in, terribly mishandled, handcuffed and suffering severe wounds in the head.

The delegate further reports that the new Belgian measures are endangering to the utmost the lives of Germans living in the Belgian zone.

Berlin Red Cross headquarters immediately relayed the report to the International Red Cross headquarters at Geneva, adding a protest against "this inhumane brutality" and an appeal for immediate intervention.

TREASURY REFRAINS FROM SEIZING SHIPS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The American Government will content itself—for the present at least—with the seizure of beverage liquor brought into the three-mile limit by foreign liners and not go to the extreme of seizure and confiscation of ships that carry intoxicants for beverage purposes into American territorial jurisdiction. But should the situation reach the point where the Government felt warranted in insisting upon ship seizure, there is little doubt that it would hesitate to take that step.

The official attitude was set forth today in this announcement from the prohibition unit of the Treasury Department:

"The Department has not insisted upon the seizure of the foreign ships that have brought liquors into American territorial waters for two principal reasons, to wit:

"First. The question involved concerning the liquors is whether they may be claimed by the foreign vessels, be used for medicinal purposes, and they are brought into our waters with an avowed purpose to test that question legally, and for this purpose the presence of the subject matter of dispute only, to wit, the liquors, is required;

"Second. For the reasons of delicacy involved, it being the purpose of the Department to proceed in an unobtrusive manner as is consistent with a proper enforcement of the law and thus avoid complications that might possibly be of a serious nature.'

Officials appear to be not worried over the possibility of "grave international complications" being precipitated by their action in the Baltic and similar cases.

York Anti-Saloon League in establishing a blacklist against the nomination of certain candidates for Governor next year, the Anti-Salon League of America is preparing to establish a blacklist to apply in the Presidential election next year. The name of Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama will head the list of Presidential candidates tabooed by the league.

Underwood on Blacklist.

According to reports which have reached the League and are credited by its officials, Senator Underwood will announce his candidacy soon after he returns from Europe this Fall and will promulgate a platform declaring for law enforcement, but favoring liberalization of the Volstead law to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer in States where the people shall declare by referendum that they so desire, and declaring also in favor of State option in the matter of State enforcement of prohibition. They declare that a platform of that character would place any candidate taking this stand on it under their ban as the worst kind of "wet"—a "wet" in disguise.

"There is only one stand a 'wet' can honestly and with profit to the cause take," said Wayne B. Wheeler, General Counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, who has been here for several days making prearations for the council of war. "As long as the Eighteenth Amendment remains in force he must stand for its enforcement, without subterfuge or mental reservation, and by the most effective agencies that can be devised for the purpose.

"The logical course for those opposed to prohibition is to work for the repeal of the amendment itself, not to bury enforcement acts, for it is absolutely certain that any one who attempts to bury prohibition while the amendment remains part of the Federal Constitution will himself be buried so deep that, speaking politically, he will be beyond digging up.

"The estimate made by wet politicians that Senator Underwood would poll a majority of all delegates in the electoral college on a wet platform is not well founded, as many Southern papers have declared that the sentiment of the South is against Underwood if he runs as a wet candidate or on a wet platform. The day has gone by when any man can be nominated for President who is opposed to the constitution and the legislation necessary to enforce its provisions.

Says House May Elect President.

"The election of the next President of the United States may be made by the House of Representatives. If the forces opposed to the International Court and the League of Nations place an independent ticket in the field next year, as they plan to do.

"This undoubtedly would result if the independent ticket should carry from three to five States. This would make the election by the House a strong probability.

"The Electoral College will meet in February following the national election next year. With no party having a majority, the election would be thrown into the House of Representatives, which would meet before March 4, the date for the inauguration of the President. Along political lines the House is extremely close, but on the wet and dry question the drys have about two-thirds of the memberships.

"Few Presidents have been chosen in this manner and the contest would be one of the most intense and interesting in the nation's history."

Canada Troubles League.

The fact that the western part of Canada has gone back on prohibition and provided for the sale of intoxicating liquor under Government auspices, in pursuance of a plan now in force in the Province of Quebec, has presented a new question to which the anti-saloon conferees will give serious thought. According to league officials, it will make prohibition enforcement much more of a problem than it has been in such States as California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

Commenting on the situation affecting the Government ban on sealed liquor aboard foreign ships, Mr. Wheeler said that undoubtedly it would be discussed during the meeting of the league State Superintendents.

"I have reason to believe," Mr. Wheeler said, "that the Government will stand firm for the honest enforcement of the law against both foreign and American ships that carry liquor within our three-mile limit. Whether we are dry or wet, we should stand for the right to enforce our laws within our territorial jurisdiction.

"I believe that most of the foreign governments will refuse to back up the owners of the foreign ships that are violating the prohibition law within the three-mile limit. But if they do give aid to these law violators the United States should stand steadfast for the enforcement of the law even against these Governments."

TWO MORE LINERS BRING IN LIQUOR

Tuscania Will Have to Start Dry on a Sixty-Five Days' Cruise.

OLYMPIC DUE TOMORROW

Big White Star Liner Has Sealed Supplies for Homeward Run—No Action Yet on the Paris.

The Anchor liner Tuscania and the French Line steamship Suffren arrived here yesterday with liquor stores and will be examined today by Health Officer Sprague, Thomas Whittle, Surveyor of the Port, and State Prohibition Director Palmer Canfield. These officials are now considering the cases of the liners Caronia, Cedric and the Fabre steamship Providence, which arrived with liquors on Sunday.

The Tuscania brought from Glasgow eighty-six bottles of Scotch whisky and eighty-nine bottles of assorted wines and spirits under seal as medical stores. She will sail on Saturday on a sixty-five days' cruise to the Mediterranean under charter to Thomas Cook & Son and will take on supplies of liquor at Gibraltar. Her passengers will also be able to get all the wine and other drinks they wish at Madeira, which is the first stop.

The Suffren from Havre had on board a considerable quantity of liquors under the seal of the French customs for the eastward voyage, in addition to the regulation supplies for the crew while in port. The sealed stores included 1,151 bottles of wines, 821 bottles of champagne, 55 bottles of gin, 18 bottles of rum and 9 bottles of whisky, which were all entered on the manifest filed by the captain at the Custom House. They will be dealt with Wednesday or Thursday, the customs officials said.

It was expected yesterday at the Custom House that Dr. E. K. Sprague of the Marine Hospital would give his decision in the case of the French liner Paris, which arrived on Saturday with a large quantity of liquors under the seal of the French Customs, but nothing was done. The Paris is due to sail tomorrow for Havre.

When the White Star liner Baltic sailed for Liverpool yesterday afternoon Captain John Roberts said that the passengers would be able to get Scotch whisky only by prescription from the ship's surgeon. The difficulty lies in the fact that the company's regulations printed on the passenger lists state that all medicines on the voyage are issued free. The same thing applies to the French and Italian liners with regard to the wine which is served with meals. The White Star liner Olympic, due tomorrow with a large quantity of liquors under the British Customs seal for the eastward voyage, will undergo the same ordeal as the Baltic, Cedric and Berengaria, it was said at the Custom House yesterday.

No word has been received yet from the Treasury Department as to the liquors seized from the foreign steamships and sent to bonded warehouses are to be kept permanently or temporarily. Customs officials said that all legal action concerning the seized liquors was in the hands of State Prohibition Director Canfield.

The capture of a former submarine chaser, alleged to have been in operation in the bootleg trade, and a cargo of liquor valued at $120,000, was reported yesterday to Coast Guard headquarters at the Custom House by the Revenue Cutter Seminole. The cutter made the capture off Atlantic Highlands after being compelled to fire its four-inch guns.

The alleged runner, now registered under the name, Mary E., Gully, was brought to after a chase of fifteen miles.

The Mary E. Gully's cargo included 1,500 cases of Scotch whisky, according to the reports turned in at the headquarters of the Coast Guard.

The members of the crew, who gave their names as John Grand, Harry Pierson, John Cook, John Drennan and Michael Kelly, were arraigned before United States Commissioner John N. Boyle and held in $5,000 bail for a hearing on July 9. The sixth defendant, Harry Jones, is said to be a patient in Bellevue Hospital.

An order directing that the Moulin Rouge Cave a Greenwich Village cabaret at 88 Washington Place, be padlocked as a public nuisance from next Monday to Jan. 2, 1924, was signed yesterday by Judge Learned Hand.

BIRKENHEAD TO URGE ACTION ON SEIZURES

Will Press Ship Liquor Case In Lords Today—Baldwin Upheld by Westminster Gazette.

LONDON, June 25 (Associated Press).—The Earl of Birkenhead today gave notice of his intention of putting forward a question in the House of Lords tomorrow, drawing attention to the seizure of liquor on British ships in American waters and asking the Government what it proposed to do.

LONDON, June 25.—Rear Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt has given notice of a question to the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs for Thursday, which suggests that as it takes exactly the same time to get from Europe to New York via Halifax and railroad as by the all-sea route to the first named port with the additional advantage that there are better berthing facilities at Halifax, so that ships can be turned round in less time, and that as international difficulties connected with immigration laws and other domestic legislation of the United States are constantly arising, the British Government should consider the advisability of recommending British steamships to make the Canadian town their port of arrival and departure.

At a conference of the National Commercial Temperance League at Bradford yesterday a resolution was carried calling on the British Government to prevent British smuggling of liquor into America. Prohibition was declared a miraculous success in America.

LONDON, June 25.—Commenting on Premier Baldwin's statement in Parliament today recognizing the right of the United States to break British Government seals on liquor stores seized on ships in New York, The Westminster Gazette says:

"That is the law and its statement removes any occasion for protest against the action of the United States authorities in breaking seals in British vessels.

As regards Lloyd George's references to the liquor question in his address at the Welsh Baptist Chapel yesterday, the same paper says:

"There is no need for his advice that this country should keep cool over America's drink question. Nobody will get excited over the inconveniences of the situation in New York. Least of all shall we challenge the right of the United States to make laws for its own territory and to see that they are observed. What is at stake is not prohibition, but a matter of good manners and international amenities."

The Evening Standard says it would be a misfortune if the people of the United States were misled into believing that Lloyd George represents any considerable body of British opinion. There is no need for him to counsel coolness nor to deprecate attempts to make mischief. Nobody is excited and we have seen no attempts to make mischief. No excitement is wanted, but with perfect courtesy and also with perfect clearness the British Government should possess the United States Government of the view commonly held in this country.

"We have no interest or concern as a people in the experiment of prohibition and it is not our business to give or to deny the chance for the dry law. Individuals hold all sorts of opinions on this subject, but unless we are mistaken, nine British men out of ten resent the irrelevant and arbitrary interference with their fellow-citizens going about their lawful business, and it would be no service to Anglo-American relations to allow Lloyd George's views to be accepted as completely typical of the nation."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 25.—No official statement was to be had today at the Quai d'Orsay whether the French Government would protest against the breaking of its seals and the removal of wines from the steamship Paris. The general attitude of officials is that England's backing down might be taken to indicate that the French intended to do something else.

It was said that the French Government had as yet no knowledge of the seizure on the Paris and that communication would probably be made to the headquarters of the French Line here, which would place the facts before the Government at about the same time its official report would be received from the United States.

Poincaré, it is said, would reach a decision when he had his reports before him.

The French Line said it had not yet decided whether it would continue sending liquor into American ports under seal.

A French statesman at the Quai d'Orsay offered the following suggestion this afternoon:

"Why don't you Americans dry up the sea, elect Henry Ford President and have him establish a bus line to Europe? You would put all our ships out of commission that way."

LORD ASTOR ASSAILS BRITISH LIQUOR TRADE

Accuses It of Anti-American Propaganda and Trying to Turn His Wife Out of Office.

LONDON, June 25 (Associated Press).—Lord Astor, speaking today before a charity organization on the subject of prohibition, said that ever since the United States had inaugurated its great experiment the British liquor trade had been carrying on anti-American propaganda.

He objected to the deliberate attempts to misrepresent everything associated with the United States. It was a tragic thing that while anti-British propaganda in the United States had ceased, people were working in England to misrepresent the attitude and actions of America.

Lord Astor charged that the liquor trade in England had a powerful political organization which was determined to turn Lady Astor out of public life.

BERLIN, June 25 (Associated Press).—Street fighting occurred in Eisleben, Prussian Saxony, between Nationalists and Communists on the occasion of the unveiling there of a memorial to the assassinated German Foreign Minister, Dr. Walter Rathenau, the Central News states.

Two of the demonstrators are reported dead and twenty-five seriously injured.

SAYS 'WET' REACTION IS CHECKED HERE

Commissioner Haynes Asserts City Police Are Co-operating in Dry Enforcement.

PADLOCK ACTION HELPING

Dry Chief Says He Was Told That the Bowery Was 90 Per Cent. Better.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A roseate picture of prohibition enforcement in New York in spite of the repeal of the Mullan-Gage law was painted today by Roy A. Haynes, the Federal Commissioner, who spent Friday night and Saturday in New York. R. Q. Merrick, the Zone Chief, who was in Washington today, added to Mr. Haynes's statement another, saying that the New York police were showing fine co-operation.

"The department has been studying and watching the course of events in New York carefully since the repeal of the State enforcement law," said Mr. Haynes, in a statement. "There are some evidences of newly established so-called soft drink saloons which, in effect, are the regular oldtime saloons, with all the outward trappings. This was a natural reaction, especially in the foreign sections.

"I was told the repeal of the State law was accepted by thousands as the annulment of all prohibition enforcement. In view of that situation the 'loosening up' has not been as marked as might have been expected, and I feel quite well satisfied with the deterrent influence which the excellent work being done by the Federal forces has had, not only among present violators but in certain quarters where soon after Governor Smith approved the repeal hope for widespread disregard of the Eighteenth Amendment may have been visualized.

"With the excellent co-operation prevailing between the Federal enforcement officials and the United States Attorney's office, and the speedy and heavy sentences being imposed by the Federal Court, the successful progress of enforcement work in New York City is acknowledged on every hand.

"I was present Saturday with the Assistant United States Attorney, United States Marshal, Deputy Marshals and Chief Yellowley, Divisional Chief Merrick, Director Canfield and other officials when the famous Knickerbocker Grill, on Forty-second Street, just off Broadway, was padlocked on order of the Federal Court for six months. The imposition of the padlock provision is having a very salutary effect everywhere, and especially in New York.

"A mission worker on the Bowery told me on Friday night that conditions there and in some of the other more populous and foreign sections of the city had improved fully 90 per cent. in the last two years, and that a trip through the Bowery, Chinatown, Little Italy and other foreign quarters would show a surprising lack of drunkenness and disasocial conditions in all these sections."

Smugglers Face Dropping Demand.

When asked about smuggling activities, the Commissioner replied:

"The rum-running season on the Canadian border is at its annual height. We are coping with that situation with a pretty satisfactory degree of success. The rum-running fleet off the New Jersey-New York coast has again about reached its previous maximum, seventeen or eighteen boats, offering poor quality synthetic whisky. This, of course, is represented to be Scotch.

"The large increase of activities of the various enforcement agencies on the waterfront, and the reported decreasing demand, because of inferior quality, and a constant increasing danger of apprehension, and heavier sentences in Federal courts, all have conspired to slacken business on the edge of the three-mile limit."

Ship Liquor Procedure Settled.

Commissioner Haynes also stated that the officials concerned in the seizure of non-medical liquor on the Baltic and the Berengaria proceeded along thoroughly prepared plans, and the attitude of the Government and the regulations are now so well understood that all parties concerned in the future will know exactly what to expect, and how to proceed, should similar necessity arise.

When questioned as to a change of policy on the part of the Federal forces in New York because of the repeal of the State enforcement law, Mr. Haynes said that the authorities had been making exhaustive study of the situation, and added that conditions alone could determine policies. He would neither affirm nor deny the current rumor of large forces from other States being sent into New York—adding, "It would, of course, be the height of folly to disclose any such plans, even though they were in the making, or in execution."

DECLARES NEW YORK IS OVERELECTRIFIED

NEW CITY LIFE PERIL SEEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 25.—New York is suffering from overelectrification, according to a French savant who just returned from America in bad health, which he attributes to the action on the enormous number of electric currents of New York on his nervous system.

Who this savant is is not revealed, but he has confided his case and what is believed to be its cause to the well-known scientific writer, Dr. Charles Nordmann, who in an article declares his belief that his friend's complaints are well founded. Neither Dr. Nordmann nor the sufferer from New York will go so far as to say that the inhabitants of that city are either all sick or all crazy as the result of the partial electrocution from which they suffer every day, but there is an implication in Dr. Nordmann's article that many may be thus affected.

Dr. Nordmann declares stoutly his opinion that the overelectrification of cities is undoubtedly affecting the nerves, health and brain capacity of city dwellers. Even though there is no direct contact between the people and the current conductors there is danger, he says, in the effect of the inducted currents on all neighboring objects.

The amount of vibration varies, as when, for instance, an electric lamp is switched on, a telephone unhooked, a trolley car passes or a subway train starts. It is in the variation of the intensity of those inducted currents that danger lies, says Dr. Nordmann. The human body receives them, and in New York, where steel is so largely used for house construction, the effect is even greater than in such cities as Paris. Nordmann cites as proof of his case results which have been obtained in the treatment of patients suffering from arterial tension.

These sufferers are placed in a kind of metallic cage, but without contact, while high-frequency currents are passed through the metal. The effect of this treatment is very marked on the temperature of the subject, on the nutrition of tissues and on the arterial tension.

But this effect, which may be good for those suffering from arterial pressure, says Dr. Nordmann, is almost certainly bad for those in normal health. Electric currents have variable action on nerves, muscles and even thoughts. In some cases they induce sleep, produce giddiness, reduce pain or diminish nervousness. But all that depends on the direction of the current, its voltage and its length of duration.

A town full of people acted on by an enormous variety of currents of different voltages and different duration and forever changing are entirely at the mercy of change in the matter, and, while some may benefit from the galvanization and darsonvalization which is produced by their living amid so much electricity others very probably are daily suffering electrocution.

One conjecture here is that the savant who is suffering from his experiences in New York is Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute. Dr. Nordmann is not in Paris tonight to give confirmation to this conjecture, but Dr. Carrel is believed to be the only person whose experience fulfills the conditions mentioned in Dr. Nordmann's article. He arrived here last week from New York. It is known that he was worn out and went to Brittany for a rest two days after his arrival.

New York Physicians Skeptical.

M. Nordmann's article was received with amusement and skepticism by physicians in New York who were informed of its nature last night.

Among those who discussed it were Dr. R. F. Cristell, neurologist at Bellevue, Dr. H. W. Wildman, psychiatrist at that hospital, and Dr. A. C. de Graff of its surgical staff, who has experimented in arterial work. All three thought there was not one chance in a thousand that induced electrical currents in a great city affected its population, though they admitted that much had been done in the way of treating cases of high nervous tension with electricity.

They thought that if the city's electricity did have any effect at all it would be physical rather than mental, but they had found no cases in their experience to indicate that there was any such effect, nor did they know of any such having been reported.

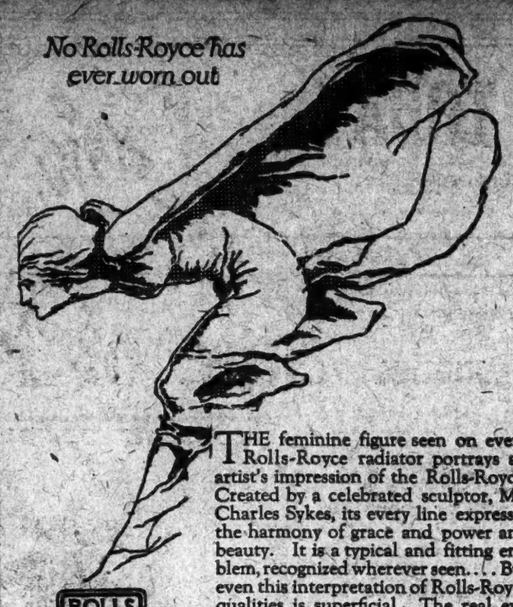
In his charge to the Grand Jury, Justice Wagner said that the Governor had appointed the Extraordinary Special and Trial Term of the Supreme Court "because it appeared to his satisfaction that the public interest demanded it." The Governor directed that the Grand Jury be drawn, the Justice continued, "to serve for the purpose of acting on such charges as may be preferred before it against any person or persons, growing out of an alleged blackmail against certain person or persons which preceded the death of one Clarence E. Peters, and certain charges growing out of, or based upon, the killing of said Clarence E. Peters on May 15th or 16th, 1922, and for such other business as may be brought before it."

He added that if "any additional subjects germane to the matters under investigation arise, the Court will instruct you upon such occasions, and inquiry upon such additional subject matters may then be undertaken by you."

Three witnesses, so far as could be learned, appeared before the Grand Jury yesterday afternoon. They were Frank Collins and Harry Green, former members of Troop K, New York State Troopers, who reached the scene on the lonely Chappaqua Road soon after the discovery of the body of Peters, and Duncan Rose, White Plains druggist, one of those early on the scene.

Attorney General Sherman declined to name the witnesses summoned from Haverhill, Mass., friends and relatives of Peters, who are expected to disclose important facts in connection with Peters's arrival in New York. It was said that an attempt would be made to show that Peters did not arrive in this city until a few hours before he was killed, and that he could not have been a member of the party which fired on Walter Ward on a lonely road near Port Chester on the night of May 14. Ralph Ward in a special proceeding last year testified that his brother had been fired upon by three blackmailers, one of whom was Peters, as he was driving in his motor car near Port Chester two days before the body of Peters was found.

There was considerable speculation yesterday as to what part George S. Ward, father of Walter, would play in the deliberations of the Grand Jury. It was recalled that Mr. Ward was out of the State during the sittings of the May Grand Jury which indicted his son.



THE feminine figure seen on every Rolls-Royce radiator portrays an artist's impression of the Rolls-Royce. Created by a celebrated sculptor, Mr. Charles Sykes, its every line expresses the harmony of grace and power and beauty. It is a typical and fitting emblem, recognized wherever seen. . . But even this interpretation of Rolls-Royce qualities is superficial. The real evidence of its greatness is demonstrated in a type of service that is unknown to any but a Rolls-Royce owner; in an economy of operation that is the proof of perfect building; in a length of life that is without precedent. . . . The man who drives his Rolls-Royce for ten years thinks that its full perfection has been revealed to him. Ten years later, with the same car, he still may derive new meaning from the phrase, "the perfect instrument for locomotion."

Inaction is thought by many persons to be carefulness, when it is simply procrastination.

People make up their minds as to a course they will pursue, but often think it will not matter to wait another day. But how often it happens that they forget, and often days pass, and finally what they from the first intended to do is done in a hurry that spoils it all!

June Clearance Sale!

500 Lamps—500 Shades
All at Half Price

Not often in this or any store come such sweeping offerings of lamps as this, both as to price—for every lamp and shade in the Sale is at half or less—as to quality, as to variety in design, style and color.

A Wonderful Opportunity for the country house which needs the soft light of lamps for every room; for the city house which in this sale may exercise its thrift and foresight in acquiring lamps—at half—for next winter's use.

Floor Lamps, $7.50 to $25
were $15 to $50
Tall and medium sizes, of wood in polychrome, mahogany and black-and-gold finishes.

Adjustable Wooden Bridge Lamps, $8.75
were $17.50

Shades to go with them, $6—were $12

Chinese Porcelain Table Lamps, $18.75
were $37.50
Of Chinese porcelain in mirror back, 27 in. high, gilt metal bases, sliding adjustable rod to take shade at any height, two lights. Very slight imperfections in the porcelain—mostly small specks which pass unnoticed—cause these lamps to become part of the sale.

1440—Satin Striped Broadcloth	$4.00
1140—Fine Poplins—white and tan	$3.50
1200—Colored satin-striped Broadcloth	$3.50

Every shirt is made to our own standard. There are no "fish-tails"—skimpy shirts which bind and cause discomfort.

The Story Is Briefly This:

A shirt-maker whose yearly business with Wanamaker's is greater than that with any other store recently bought a new factory where shirts of the higher grades alone are manufactured. He came to us with this proposition:

"I want to introduce my new line to New York in a big way—and I'd rather put it in Wanamaker's than in any other store. To do this, I'll make the shirts to your order and give them to you at a lowered price."

We are passing on this concession to our customers, as shown in the above table of grades.

Sizes are correctly proportioned. Every shirt is center-pleated. Buttons are firmly sewn. In those shirts which are collar-attached, the collars fit correctly and comfortably.

The English broadcloth shirts may be had in collar-attached or neckband styles, in tan or white. In gray or blue, they come in the neckband style only.

The satin-striped broadcloth may be had in tan, blue, gray or white.

Poplins are in plain white or in tan.

In the Silk Shirts there are over 30 patterns—striped of various colors and widths on white backgrounds.

Flannel shirts are collar-attached or in the neckband style, and show a wide pattern range in striped effects.

The shirts of fibre silk (artificial) are for the most part striped, but there are many checks, also.

Sizes and sleeve lengths for men of all builds.

Cool, Inexpensive Dresses

A variety of satisfying excellence in sizes for both Women and Misses

Does it really pay to have Summer frocks made when fresh, new models are coming in daily, and going out at prices as little as $3? . . . Does it pay to spend the time and the energy to make a simple little frock when something better may be had at the same cost? This is part of the every-day service rendered by this better kind of Downstairs Store.

Miss 14 to 20

—will be interested in:

COLLEGE TRUSTEE CONFERENCE URGED

SCORES PUBLIC ATTITUDE

Deplores Current Theory That 'Only Good Trustee Is Blind Trustee.'

A defense of the college trustee and a recommendation that his power and influence be given a wider scope, form the basis of a statement issued yesterday by the Institute for Public Service, of which Julius H. Barnes is Chairman, and which includes in its list of officers William H. Allen, William C. Blakey and Gaylord C. Cummins.

"The present trouble," says the statement, "lies in the theory which leaders of higher education have been fixing in the public mind with respect to the position of trustees. The current theory is that the only good trustee is a blind trustee. They are not expected to know what is done in their name. They are expected to raise money, select an executive and back him. In fact, there is a tendency, especially among higher education faculties, to embrace the cult that trustees ought to have nothing to do except raise money."

Declaring that the isolation of the trustee class is a chief reason for this attitude of educators, the statement urges a conference of the five thousand or more trustees of colleges, universities and professional schools in the country. "These men," declares the statement, "are responsible for property worth a billion dollars and for annual economic outlays by students and colleges that total a billion dollars. Yet there has never been a gathering of these trustees, nor has any method been worked out by which they can communicate with one another, ask questions and exchange experiences. Though legally responsible for the way in which higher education uses its opportunity, they are very largely disfranchised. A world conference on education is being held this week at Oakland. Yet it is doubtful if five out of five thousand higher education trustees have thought of that conference as being even remotely related to their trusteeship."

"The difficulties touched upon by former President Meiklejohn of Amherst and the many editors who are supporting his disparagement of trustees are too important to be left unanswered. Trustees have no moral right to dodge their responsibility for seeing the Presidents and Faculties know the best that is being done in education, that they study their own efficiency and ask whether they are doing what they have contracted to do for 500,000 young people and for national welfare. Many of them face backwards, asleep at the switch. The trouble is not that trustees are too busy, as Dr. Meiklejohn says, for busiest men are the very men who are best equipped to deal with new issues for which they are responsible. The real trouble, as we have said, is the popular attitude toward trustees as mere money-raisers."

BERNHARDT LIBRARY GOES TO BOOK LOVERS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 25.—Booklovers beat professional buyers from the field today at the sale of the library of Sarah Bernhardt. Just as was the case during the sale of the great actress's jewels, souvenir hunters rushed prices high above the intrinsic value of the objects offered.

Most of the books contained authors' dedications, some of them in verse and all in such terms as made the flyleaves as valuable as the books themselves from the point of view of the bibliophile.

D'Annunzio's "Martyrdom of St. Sebastien," which was valued at 500 francs, fetched more than double that price after five minutes of bidding. "La Parisienne," of Henri Becque, went from 200 to 1,100 francs with the same rapidity, while works of the younger Dumas fetched 3,200 francs.

Mme. Bernhardt's library consisted of 540 volumes, almost all dedicated by their authors.

PARIS, June 25 (Associated Press).—The first day of the sale of Sarah Bernhardt's library realized 69,187 francs. The highest price paid was for two volumes of the portraits of great men, dated 1786. These brought 5,600 francs.

TROOPS PARADE IN DUBLIN.

Cosgrave Reviews Biggest Demonstration in rFee State's History.

DUBLIN, June 25—(Associated Press).—The biggest military parade in Dublin since the establishment of the Free State occurred today. Thousands of troops, representing all branches of service and accompanied by several bands, marched from the army headquarters to the Government buildings, where President Cosgrave took the salute.

SECOND FLOOR

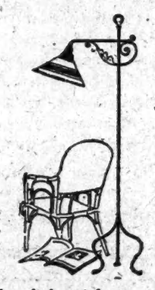
Brass Lamp $2

A steeplejack lamp, clamped on a bar, a rod, a bedpost, and the base that unscrews holds it. A slot in the bottom permits it to be suspended from a hook or it will serve as a table lamp. A very ingenious adjustable shade will drop the light wherever wanted. Such a serviceable lamp for camps, bungalows and summer homes of all kinds.

SEVENTH FLOOR

Iron Lamps

For the Veranda, $5.50



These lightweight, attractive wrought iron lamps with slender shaft, adjustable arm and parchment shade, are just the thing for summer verandas and living rooms. They are so easily moved about and afford such a good light. The shade has a colored band and is 12 inches in diameter.

FIFTH FLOOR

Indo-Persian Prints Copied

Among the most charming arrivals of the summer season in the Upholstery Department are these reproductions of Indo-Persian prints in thirty-five color combinations. They make summery costumes for garden and seashore, hangings, slip-covers and bedspreads. 36 inches wide, 85c yard. See the exhibit of these in one of our Fifth Avenue Windows.

FIFTH FLOOR

Fibre Furniture $76

A straight arm chair, rocker and couch make the ideal group for the average porch. This set of fibre is unusually attractive and comfortable, as you see in the illustration. The design of the cretonne is interesting in character and color. The seats have spring cushions resting on spring seats and the fibre is finished in fawn. Many other porch and lawn sets in a wide choice of colors.

Special Purchase of

Couch Hammocks $17.50

Couch hammocks—comfortable havens on porch or lawn. Decorative spots of color. These hammocks have mattresses and backs button-tufted with roll edge, covered in attractive duck in grey, green or khaki. Complete with hanging chains for porch suspension, and tension springs. Lawn stands and awnings extra.

Added to this unusual offer we have selected twenty designs in imported cretonnes from which you may select a pattern and we will cover your hammock at an additional cost of $2.25.

FIFTH FLOOR

Beach Umbrellas

Reduced to $3.75

Made of heavy canvas in plain colors and vivid stripes such as Harvard Crimson and white, orange and black, green and white. The shade is 6 feet in diameter and has an adjustable wooden handle.

When folded, these umbrellas are very compact. They are, also, excellent shades for the tea table out on the lawn or in the garden.

LINER BREAKING UP ON BERMUDA REEFS

PASSENGERS TAKEN OFF

High Sea Running, but Loss of Life Is Not Feared—The West Kebar Is Also Disabled.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 25.—Passengers on the Royal Mail steamship Caraquet, which went aground today on a reef twelve miles north of Bermuda, have been taken off the ship by tugs, it was announced at the company's offices.

Mail has also been removed and no casualties were reported. The vessel is fast breaking up, it is said.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, June 25 (Associated Press).—The Caraquet went on the reefs at daylight today.

The Caraquet, a vessel of 4,898 tons gross, was built in 1894 at Belfast.

BOSTON, June 25.—The United States Shipping Board steamer West Kebar, bound from Hamburg and Antwerp for Montreal, is disabled off the coast of Newfoundland with a loose propeller, according to radio dispatches received today by Rogers & Webb of Boston, the company operating the freighter. The shipping board steamer Chickasaw, Hull for Boston, has picked up the signals and is going to the assistance of the West Kebar.

The disabled freighter was reported drifting in an east southeasterly direction at a rate of two miles an hour, but in little immediate danger.

SEEKS LIQUOR CONFERENCE.

Canada Asks United States to Discuss Cross-Border Shipments.

OTTAWA, June 25.—The Canadian Government has invited the United States to send officials here at the close of the present session of Parliament to discuss further co-operation concerning shipment of liquor across the border, Premier King announced in the House of Commons today.

The Premier said the Canadian Government had recently received a communication from the United States authorities asking if it were possible for Canada to assist in preventing the export of liquor to the United States. The reply forwarded was a statement of the law as it at present exists, and nothing was said as to the Government's policy in the matter of further co-operation.

"So far as the policy of the Canadian Government is concerned," said the Premier, "we have every desire to co-operate with the American authorities, as we would hope for them to co-operate with us in securing the observance of our law."

Beats Fallen Horse, Fined $25.

Max Lerner, a peddler, living at 751 Fifth Street, Manhattan, yesterday was fined $25 by Magistrate Folwell in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, on the charge of cruelty to animals. He was accused of beating his horse when it collapsed because of the heat. Several persons who saw Lerner beat the horse are said to have unharnessed the horse, placed Lerner between the shafts and forced him to pull the wagon.

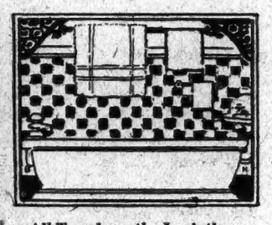
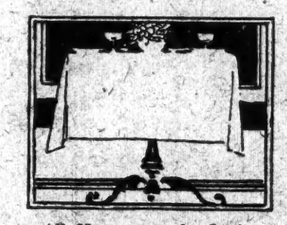
Gimbels and the Leviathan

All The Linens And Domestics On The S. S. Leviathan Furnished By Gimbels : Direct Contractors To The United States Shipping Board

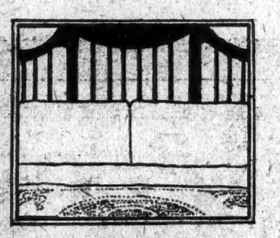


All Towels on the Leviathan, 110,100 in all, were furnished by the premier mills of Ireland and America by Gimbel Brothers, New York.

Ready! The great ship swings at her moorings. Perfect as the perfection of a superbly faceted jewel. All honor to the great American gentlemen who plan the wonder of her. And mighty pride to the American organizations who have borne their part in the execution of the mighty plan. And to Gimbel Brothers, New York, direct contractors to the United States Shipping Board for all steward and furnishing supplies.



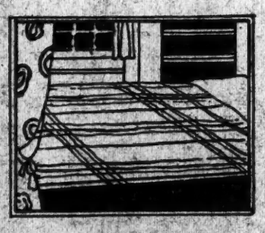
All Napery on the Leviathan, 9705 tablecloths, 66,292 napkins, 4350 table-tops, were furnished from the premier mills of Scotland, Ireland and America by Gimbels, New York.



3500 of the Bedspreads in use on the Leviathan were furnished from the premier mills of America by Gimbel Brothers, New York.

But this is about the Linens and Domestics of the Leviathan. If there were room for the telling, what a tale we could tell you here! An Irish tale, the romance of it written large in crested linen, mile on mile. More linen in one special order than Ireland ever made before! And an American travel tale. A romantic tale too, though of the unromantic: America's best in blankets: in sheets: in spreads. High qualities. Huge quantities. Larger production in many cases than ever attempted by American mills. But why stress the immensity? Or the excellence? They had to be good, these furnishings. And great also. For America's greatest ship.

All Bed-linen on the Leviathan, 21,796 sheets, 18,600 pillowcases, all told, furnished from the premier mills of Ireland and America by Gimbel Brothers, New York.



All Blankets on the Leviathan, 9851 in all, were furnished from the premier mills of America by Gimbel Brothers, New York.

MANY SWINDLES REVEALED

Radicalism Bred by Fraudulent Bankers and Agencies and Other Groups of Grafters.

Radicalism and hatred are bred in the hearts of many immigrants arriving here because they are permitted by the State and National Governments to fall victims to all kinds of swindlers and grafters who prey upon their ignorance, according to representatives of scores of organizations who attended a hearing yesterday by the joint legislative Committee to Investigate Exploitation of Immigrants. The hearing was held in the Aldermanic Chamber at the City Hall. Senator Salvatore A. Cotillo, Chairman of the committee, described recent cases of immigrant exploitation that had come to his attention.

Swindling steamship ticket agencies, employment bureaus, lodging houses, pseudo-banking institutions and various other groups of grafters who victimize unsuspecting immigrants from the time they leave Ellis Island until they begin to remit funds to needy relatives in their native lands were denounced by the spokesmen of the different organizations. Curbs of one kind or another were proposed.

Senator Cotillo's committee includes Senator Henry G. Shackno and Assemblymen John J. O'Connor, Russell B. Livermore and Nelson W. Cheney. As a result of the hearing, Senator Cotillo will appoint a general advisory council of representatives of social agencies and immigration experts to assist in gathering first-hand evidence regarding exploitation and to advise regarding remedial legislation. The legislative committee adjourned its first hearing with a request to the organizations to submit all available data bearing on the question by Sept. 1.

Urges a Guide Service.

The committee heard, among others, Miss Virginia Murray, Secretary of the New York Travelers' Aid Society. She said there were so many swindlers awaiting an opportunity to exploit newly arrived immigrants that a guide service was necessary to aid the immigrants in running the gauntlet. She proposed that guides be furnished to take care of the immigrant as soon as he started from Ellis Island, through the Barge Office, and until he was placed under the protection of some recognized agency.

Mary Frasca, director of the Mulberry Community House, told of the suffering and bitterness caused by the recent failure of the ticket agency operated by the Tisbo brothers, Vincenzo, Francesco and Vito, who disappeared with about $60,000 of the funds of depositors, who understood that the steamship agency run by the Tisbos was a sound banking house.

Hugh Frayne of the State Federation of Labor said that nowhere was the immigrant worker preyed upon with less conscience than in some of the fake employment agencies, demanding exorbitant fees and failing to provide remunerative employment.

Edwin C. Rybicki, representing the Polish Democratic League, said that an investigation by that organization had disclosed that the swindling agents of concerns whose business is to victimize unlettered immigrants were sent to hang out around the railroad terminals and the waterfront.

Morris Bernstein of the People's Immigrant Society said that one of the greatest businesses of exploitation was in the remittance of money by immigrants to their relatives in the old country. "We became interested in this phase of immigrant exploitation three or four years ago, when our attention was called to the case of an immigrant who had sent $50 to relatives in a foreign country," he said. "A check-up of the remittance disclosed that only $4 of the $50 was paid to the remittee."

Grafting by Hackmen.

Nathaniel Phillips of the League of Foreign-Born Citizens told how he had found that grafting and exploitation was carried on even by hackmen who picked up immigrants at the Barge Office and elsewhere.

Headquarters of the advisory council to be appointed by Senator Cotillo will be in the offices of the New York City Council on Immigrant Education, 244 Madison Avenue, which represents the social agencies working among foreigners. Senator Cotillo requested that communications regarding the investigation be sent to J. B. Buell, Executive Secretary of the organization, at that address.

TO CONSULT MELLON ABOUT ELLIS ISLAND

British Officials Will Confer With Secretary When He Reaches London, Commons Is Told.

CAPTAIN MAKES CHARGES

Unnamed Traveler Tells of Being Placed in Wire Cage and Stripped for Examination.

LONDON, June 25 (Associated Press).—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, will probably be consulted by British officials upon his arrival here with regard to alleged indignities forced upon British subjects landing at Ellis Island, the House of Commons was informed today by Ronald McNeill, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The subject was brought up by Captain Viscount Curzon, Conservative Member for the South Division of Battersea, who called attention to the case of an unnamed English mercantile captain who, he said, was made to land at Ellis Island on April 28, placed in a wire cage with thirty foreigners, and afterward forced to strip for examination although his passport was in perfect order and he had been told by the American Consul that there would be no difficulty.

Under-Secretary McNeill, replying to the member, said he would gladly receive the captain at the Foreign Office if the latter desired to tell of his case. He thought there was apparently ground for representations to the American Government, provided the Captain allowed his name to be used.

Mr. McNeil added that, in the absence of any guarantee that innocent travelers would not be subjected to these indignities, he could only repeat that the real remedy was for British subjects to refrain from going to the United States.

Viscount Curzon suggested that the Government get in touch with Secretary Mellon upon his arrival to see if it was possible to arrange to avoid such treatment, and Mr. McNeill said that would probably be done.

HEAR SOVIET TORTURED ARCHBISHOP TIKHON

Letts Get Report That His Sufferings Impaired His Reason When He Offered Submission.

LONDON, June 25.—A Reuter dispatch from Riga says it is generally believed in the Latvian capital that Archbishop Tikhon, former Patriarch of All Russia, was in a state of mental irresponsibility, due to tortures inflicted upon him, when he was induced to sign a letter to the Soviet authorities declaring his readiness to swear allegiance to the Government and asking that the letter be used in his forthcoming trial.

A dispatch to The Associated Press from Moscow last Saturday said Archbishop Tikhon from his prison cell had addressed a letter to the authorities in which he blamed the monarchists for his past activities, for which he expressed regret, and announced his willingness to swear allegiance to the Government.

GOT THE TIMES BY AIR.

Dixville Notch (N. H.) Visitors Able to Read Latest Edition at 11:30 A. M.

Summer guests of the Balsams at Dixville Notch, N. H., had the novel experience yesterday morning of reading the latest edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES only a few hours after the papers had come off the presses. By train the morning papers do not reach the New Hampshire resort until late in the evening, so J. J. Lannin, proprietor of that hotel and of the Garden City (L. I.) Hotel, decided to experiment with aerial transportation.

The first try-out was made yesterday, when a land plane took off from a flying field at Garden City at 5:30 A. M. At 11:30 copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES and of other newspapers were being bought by eager readers, who found them displayed on the newsstand at the Balsams.

Mother Sees Son Drown.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., June 25.—A man said by the police to be Frank Beam, 20 years old, an employe of the Hudson-Manhattan tubes and living on 138th Street, Manhattan, was drowned yesterday while swimming in Lake Hopatcong. His mother, Mrs. Emos Beam, was an eyewitness to the drowning.

REFUGEES RETURN AS ETNA SUBSIDES

RELIEF FUNDS POURING IN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CATANIA, June 25.—All danger to Linguaglossa may be said today to have disappeared and the town will certainly be spared unless there should be a renewal of violence in the eruption of Mount Etna, which is unlikely.

Some activity is reported at the main crater, eight or ten miles above the craters at Monte Nero and Monte di Ferro, which were responsible for the flow of lava that threatened Linguaglossa. Lava from the main crater would have to pass over so many miles of bare rock before reaching any inhabited or cultivated zone that no apprehension is felt on that score, at least for the time being.

The return of Linguaglossa's inhabitants continued throughout yesterday. They set to work putting their town in order again, so that now it presents a spectacle of busy activity. The people still have to depend for all their food upon outside sources, and it is being brought to them by the army and Fascisti National Militia.

Money, which is being collected all over Italy for reconstruction and relief, is beginning to pour in. The rebuilding of the roads and railways which have been destroyed will probably be undertaken within a few days.

Lava Is Cooling Fast.

The movement of the lava near Linguaglossa is now down to about one yard an hour. Its heat is also much diminished. When a boulder is detached from the edge of the field of lava and rolls to the ground it can almost be touched with the bare hand.

Happy faces can again be seen in Linguaglossa, and laughter can again be heard there. With the departure of the danger of annihilation every one feels as if a weight has been lifted. Those who have had their vineyards and fields destroyed are not so happy, but even they are relieved that at least their houses have been spared.

In Catania, Linguaglossa and other places solemn masses of thanksgiving have been celebrated and devoutly attended by almost the entire population. Everybody seems pervaded by a desire to settle down to work and repair as far as possible the damage which has been done.

Offerings Cover Saint's Statue.

As the river of lava halted right at the gates of Linguaglossa, its inhabitants consider this to be a miracle worked by their patron saint, Egidio. His effigy in the church has been covered with votive offerings of jewels, gold and silver trinkets and votive candles burn all around it.

A scientific expedition which examined the lava up to Monte Nero reports that liquid lava is still flowing, but at a greatly reduced speed. The craters are now emitting large volumes of smoke and ashes, which the wind carries off to sea. Experts declare that this is a good sign, because the emission of much smoke and ashes unaccompanied by a plentiful flow of lava is usually an indication that an eruption has played itself out.

They are not much concerned over the eruption at the main crater. Whenever a new crater is formed somewhere on the slopes of Etna and gives forth a violent eruption it is always accompanied by activity at the main crater.

Eruption Was in Huge Volume.

The stream of lava extends now for about eight miles from the eruptive mouth. It varies in width from only a few hundred feet at its narrowest point to a mile or so at the widest.

The average depth is hard to judge from superficial surveys and will not be known until more accurate studies have been made. It is therefore impossible for the time being to arrive at any even approximate estimate of the total volume of lava which has been disgorged, but it certainly is several hundred millions of cubic feet.

The heat of the lava during the first few days burned everything on each side of the main stream for a distance varying from 100 feet to several hundred yards. Where it passed through the pine groves the damage was even more extensive, for they caught fire, spreading destruction to greater distances.

Hundreds of tourists from all parts of Italy and elsewhere in Europe continue to witness the spectacle of Etna in eruption. Stringent regulations have been issued for those in the neighborhood of the scene of the disaster, both because they are apt to interfere with relief work and because in their fever for collecting souvenirs they have been picking vineyards and trees to bits. The desire seemed to be to pick branches from trees and carve on them the name of the locality and the date.

Don't Swat the FLY!

How in the wide world did the idea ever start that we should be complacent when we had swatted the fly—crushed him—and perhaps left his germ-reeking remains hanging somewhere? Did it ever occur to you that the fly not only carries disease germs on its feet but may have on and in its body as many as thirty million bacteria?

Think of your home getting its ventilation through screened doors and windows on which billions of germs may have been spread with that supposedly splendid device, the fly swatter!

Flies have been implicated in the spreading of infantile paralysis, typhoid, scarlet fever, measles, smallpox, erysipelas, anthrax, and even tuberculosis!

Don't swat the fly. Don't have flies. On your own premises prevent the breeding of flies—destroy their eggs. And those that get into your house, kill cleanly. Do you ask how? With Preventol, the wonderful insecticide that is sprayed.

You can't imagine anything more simple to use than Preventol. Close up tightly one room at a time and then spray well. That's all there is to it. In five short minutes every fly will be dead—not swatted, not mangled or smeared, but killed cleanly—and the carcasses, with all their disease-carrying possibilities, can be swept out of the house.

And don't forget to liberally spray with Preventol any nearby places where flies may breed—garbage pails, refuse heaps, and dark corners of stables and out-buildings. A single fly in six weeks' time can be responsible for several hundred pounds of flies, and around your garbage pail there may be thousands of fly eggs. These, the Preventol spray will instantly destroy. Here is the real way to begin ridding your premises of flies. (Preventol, too, is an efficient deodorant.)

Preventol is a general insecticide

Sprayed into cracks and crevices Preventol brings cockroaches and bed bugs out into the open where another shot instantly finishes them. And when sprayed in your closets twice a month Preventol kills moths and destroys their eggs.

Preventol will not stain or harm wall paper, woodwork or the most delicate fabrics. In fact, Preventol is harmless to all except insects. Insects have a peculiar breathing apparatus and in a mechanical way Preventol suffocates them.

Mosquito-free, Fly-free vacations!

Imagine what Preventol will mean to you at the summer home or camp! Take Preventol with you and before you go have your rugs, draperies and closets sprayed well with Preventol to kill and keep out the moths.

Preventol, the super-insecticide, has been needed for centuries. The thought of modern homes being infested even occasionally with disease-carrying scavengers, and parasites and destructive moths, is preposterous.

The Preventol combination package (pint can and sprayer) is now selling at the special price of $1.00. Get one of your druggist today. Refills for less in pint and quart sizes, and larger sizes for hotels, restaurants and institutions. Should you be on vacation or where you cannot get Preventol, write the Davies-Doherty Sales Co., 132 W. 42d St., New York.

HARDING FORECASTS NEW COAL SOLUTION

Speaking in Cheyenne, He Indicates His Commission Will Bring Understanding.

OPPOSES NATIONALIZATION

Declares Operators Are Equally to Blame With Workers for the Strike Last Year.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 25 (Associated Press).—In a discussion here today of the nation's coal problems, in which he mentioned the industry, the consuming public and the Government's interest in all phases of coal operations, President Harding recorded himself as being opposed to "nationalizing the mines" and declared that the United States Coal Commission would bring the country "a new understanding" of the problem and point out a solution "in behalf of a vital public interest."

Mr. Harding spoke from the observation platform of the car in which he came here from Denver to his first Wyoming audience. He also mentioned the problems of the live stock producers of the State, the wool interests, and called attention to relief measures which he said Congress and the War Finance Corporation had given after war's inflation and later deflation.

In developing his principal theme, the coal problem, Mr. Harding referred to the strike of last year, asserting his opinion that many mine operators were as much responsible for that situation as the men who went on strike.

The biggest need of the world today, the President said, was work, adding that the world has no use for a "loafer, big or little, "whether commanding capital or directing labor."

Continuing Mr. Harding said:

"A few years ago, one of your Wyoming statesmen made the astounding statement that your State alone contained enough coal to supply the entire land with fuel for four centuries to come. Whether the statement was extravagant or not, it was at least an intimation of your mineral resources of which the nation at large had never dreamed.

"How incomprehensible, indeed, are your limitless possibilities, and you are but one of many States of seemingly incomparable material riches. Let us hope that the genius of statesmen and the common sense of business may be combined to solve the problems of transportation and distribution so that your wealth may be made an asset to the nation as well as the State.

"It may seem a far cry to talk about the coal problem in Wyoming, but it is one of the pressing problems of the country. In New England today there is anxiety about next Winter's fuel supply, traceable to the experienced hardships of last Winter. That severe trial to New England in particular, followed the coal and railway strikes, when Winter came on with inadequate supply and insufficient transportation facilities.

Points to Coal Commission.

"The Government is not blind to the situation or deaf to appeals. It is doing everything possible so far as authorized by law to dispel public apprehension. Under the authority of an act of Congress, the United States Coal Commission, made up of able and earnest men, has been engaged in a thorough investigation of this vital problem and will report to the Congress next December. It is going thoroughly into the labor controversy, studying living conditions and the community life in the mining regions, ascertaining facts about the inadequacies which prevent prompt distribution, inquiring into engineering problems and the economic errors indirect to our development, looking to excesses in profits reflected in inordinate charges for coal, and preparing an exhaustive report on the entire industry. It will be revealing and, we hope, remedial. We shall know the facts about a basic industry, which is the source of peril to the nation's industrial life, and a more or less continuous threat to our domestic comfort, sometimes a menace to life and health.

"It is too early to say whether the commission will suggest plans of permanent cure which the Congress will adopt. I do know that it will bring us to a new understanding of a problem which must be solved. We shall have a publicity which will make greed impossible and point the way to solve a question which must be answered in behalf of a vital public interest.

"Doubtless there will be a recommendation of vast storage during seasons of light consumption to guard against the heavy needs in Winter or in suspended production.

"Probably there will be recommendations for enhanced distribution, the need for which is already proven. There may be revelations as to cost of production, which will destroy price-making abuses through insistent public opinion. I hope for the revelation of the economic blunder in operating mines half and quarter time, by which the higher labor costs are made necessary.

"Meanwhile, we shall better guard against inconvenience and hardship if the consuming public will help as best it can, without expecting the Government to assume all the responsibility.

"If the coal-consuming world would buy coal during the periods of scant consumption it would guard itself against price panics and dangerous shortages when consumption is at the peak. In the hope of lower prices, the buying is postponed and that very postponement in contributing to a decided price increase. There is need for some individual initiative and responsibility in preparing for the wintry days to come. There is a mistaken notion that somehow the Government may wield a magic wand or strike with the iron hand, and produce cheap coal. It can do neither. You can no more enforce the mine worker to produce coal than you can the farmer to grow wheat or corn or wool. We saw that erroneous belief exploded a year ago.

Operators Equally to Blame.

"Many mine operators, who were as much responsible for the strike as the workmen who struck, insisted that under law enforcement they could produce all the coal that was needed. The law enforcement was provided but no coal was produced. There can be no coal mining in free America under force of arms. But if we understand the situation fully and the offer justly, and men accustomed to produce coal will not work to meet the public need, the public will produce their successors.

"The common weal transcends every other interest and puts aside every obstacle. We will find the solution. I hope we shall find it without further hardships or endangered life or menaced industry. But we shall not find it in nationalizing the mines. That would be only another step to the national paralysis which a sane America will everlastingly avoid. Nor shall we solve it by maintaining a basic industry like that of bituminous coal production, under a plan of operation, which affords the mine worker only a hundred or a hundred and fifty working days a year. The normal man, aspiring for himself and his family, cannot live that way even though he is paid what is seemingly a generous wage, because his wage days are not ample for a life of honest industry and becoming thrift.

"Such a problem is very insistent. It cannot be dodged nor solved in demagogy. It demands our best thought and all our courage. Let us hope that in the search for a way to full justice in dealing with coal, we may find a suggested plan for dealing with kindred problems which are menacing our industrial peace and hindering our industrial peace and hindering our full accomplishment."

The President's arrival at Cheyenne was signaled in advance to the waiting crowds through an aerial escort of five United States mail airships which met the train about 20 miles from the city and followed the tracks, flying high above the train, and dropping roses about the moving cars.

Speaks to Crowd at Greeley.

The largest gathering to greet the President on the trip from Denver was at Greeley, Col., where the Chief Executive made a five-minute talk. Noting that Greeley was a State educational centre, he asserted that "we are going to have some of these days a real department of education and public welfare."

"I hope that realization will come before the next Congress closes its long term," he said. "I do not want you to misunderstand me; I do not favor the Federal Government taking upon itself that responsibility for education which belongs to every community in the United States because whenever a community loses interest in and concern for its educational activities there is not anything to hope for in this Republic of ours.

"I have not come to talk politics to you, but, as you know, there has been considerable discussion recently as to the high cost of sugar, and a good many people have found fault with the President because he did not exercise the authority recently conferred upon him by Congress to raise or lower tariff duties to meet existing conditions. I at once caused an inquiry to be made into the sugar situation, and I became persuaded that a modification of the sugar tariffs, so far as the President had authority, would have little to do with a decrease of price to the American consumer, but might destroy the American sugar industry itself, to which the American consumer must look for stabilized prices in the future. I believe with all my heart in ample protection to the American sugar industry, because in my opinion American self-reliance in the production of sugar will make us free from the greed of great sugar producing countries of the world."

Text of President's Speech On 'Dry' Enforcement

My Countrymen:

It has been said that "Of the making of books there is no end." Quite as truthfully it might be paraphrased, "Of the making of laws there is no end." We Americans undoubtedly hold all records for the making of a multiplicity of laws, State and national. If we were as assiduous about obeying and enforcing obedience to them as we are in demanding and enacting them, there would be no particular occasion for me to address you today on the general subject of law enforcement. We all recognize that to secure effective administration of the laws, to establish in the public mind an attitude of willing acceptance and obedience to law, is the most impressive mark of a civilized community.

Laws, of course, represent restrictions upon individual liberty and in these very restrictions make liberty more secure. The individual surrenders something of his privilege to do as he pleases for the common good, and so organized society is possible. It is successful just about in proportion as laws are wise, as they represent deliberate and intelligent public opinion, and as they are obeyed. Civilization had to travel a long way before it came to be commonly accepted that even an unwise law ought to be enforced in orderly fashion, because such enforcement would insure its repeal or modification, also in orderly fashion, if that were found desirable.

At this point it is worth while to raise a voice in protest against the vast volume of half-baked criticism that is constantly aimed against Americans on the ground that they are alleged to be an undisciplined and rather lawless community. The criticism, of course, arises out of the fact that during the period of a very short national life, during which the currents of human affairs and interests have moved more rapidly than in any other period of history, we have been under the necessity to establish institutions, laws, modes of administration, which would meet not only the requirements of a new community established in a new world, but would permit adaptation to rapidly changing conditions. It comes also of the very erroneous impression of many nationals that our liberty is a license instead of guaranteed freedom under the law.

Older countries have had the privilege of developing laws and institutions slowly, gradually, painstakingly, through multiplied centuries in which change was commonly extremely slow. America had to build on the foundation of long-established European models not always adaptable to our requirements and therefore necessitating many experiments in modification and readaptation. Moreover, we started our experiment just at the time when the old medieval order was being changed at high speed by the processes of the industrial and social revolution which marked emergence from the later middle ages into the onrushing era of modern industrialism, modern science and modern democratic procedures in government.

Problems of a New Country.

The founders of our country were compelled to establish institutions here in a time when their whole inheritance of intellectual, moral, political and industrial traditions was being wrenched by the most amazing revolution that human society has known. In the circumstances, their achievement in laying the foundation, and our later one in building our present superstructure upon it, represent an accomplishment I believe without parallel. Thus viewed, I think we will find all justification for satisfaction in our progress thus far, and confidence in an assured future.

Our problems are the problems of a relatively new country and of a new form of political organization in a time of social flux. We shall not succeed if we attempt to solve them all at once; but no more shall we succeed if we assume to ignore their existence, to shut our eyes to the fact that they are before us. The very basis of our political establishment is the idea of a dual sovereignty, of the States and the nation; the idea of concurrent authority and concurrent responsibility. That is so elemental in our system that to do away with it would amount to demolishing our whole scheme of government.

Certain functions and responsibilities have been imposed upon the National Government, while others have been reserved to the States. Between these two authorities there will always be unavoidably something like a twilight zone. Personally, I have never liked that phrase. I have regarded it as a peculiarly unfortunate and misleading description. The intermediate zone which receives light from two sovereign luminaries ought to be the best, not the worst, illumined region. I believe it can be made exactly that if we will but realize the necessity for real co-operation between national and State authority, if we will only develop effective means for the exercise therein of concurrent jurisdiction.

Concurrent Jurisdiction Problem.

The problem of concurrent jurisdiction is not a new one brought to us with the Eighteenth Amendment. It is as old as the Federal Government. It has required to be dealt with by Congress and Legislatures, by executives and by courts, in a multitude of relations to commerce, finance, transportation and indeed the whole realm of concerns in our complex society. It has demanded our attention in all the multitude of issues ranging from the regulation of trusts and transportation, and even of certain relations with foreign Governments, to the proposal for a uniform statute of marriage and divorce.

There have always been those who insisted that particular policies could not be carried out because of the conflict of jurisdictions; but experience has proved that whenever a given issue became so acute that evasion was impossible, procedures have been devised for dealing with it. Whoever will go back to the debates over the enactment of the Anti-Trust law, or the discussions of the Interstate commerce measures, must recognize that these were but varying phases of the same general question that comes before us in connection with the enforcement of the Prohibition law.

A good deal of useful accomplishment toward uniformity and clarification of State and national laws has been effected through the efforts of the American Bar Association. This, of course, has been an unofficial effort—a labor of love and patriotism conducted by men especially qualified for its direction. It has seemed possible that something rather more formal and official might be evolved from these beginnings, which should help in perfecting the coordination. President Roosevelt recognized this possibility when he called a council of Governors to consider problems then demanding harmonious and uniform treatment. Under the present administration a similar course has been adopted in bringing together the State executives for consideration of methods to give full force and effect to the concurrent authority of States and nation under the Eighteenth Amendment.

We have dealt upon the same general principle in fixing a program for the utilization of the waters of the Colorado River. Indeed, I have thought these conferences contained the germ of an idea which may some day grow into a useful auxiliary to our constitutional system; a formal council of co-ordination, representing State and national Governments; authorized to examine into particular needs in this area, to devise projects in co-ordinated action, and to propose them formally to the Congress and the Legislatures. Without possessing any powers of legislation or of mandatory initiation, such a body might render an advisory service which, if made permanent and continuing, would conceivably be of great advantage.

Deals With Volstead Act.

But for the present there are immediate problems before us which cannot await the possible creation of any such slow-moving mechanism of philosophic consideration. The prohibition amendment to the Constitution is the basic law of the land. The Volstead act has been passed, providing a code of enforcement. I am convinced that they are a small, and a greatly mistaken, minority who believe the eighteenth amendment will ever be repealed. Details of enforcement policy doubtless will be changed as experience dictates. Further, I am convinced that whatever changes may be made will represent the sincere purpose of enforcement, rather than moderation of the general policy. It will be part of wisdom to recognize the facts as they stand.

The general policy of the States to support the prohibition program, and to co-operate with the Federal Government regarding it, is attested by the fact that almost unanimously the States have passed enforcement laws of their own. A difficulty, however, arises at this point. A good deal of testimony comes to Washington that some States are disposed to substitute their own police authority in this matter, and to turn over the burden of prohibition enforcement to the Federal authorities. It is a singular fact that some States which successfully enforced their own prohibition statutes before the eighteenth amendment was adopted have latterly gone backwards in this regard.

Laxity of State Authorities.

Communities in which the policy was frankly accepted as productive of highly beneficial results, and in which there was no widespread protest so long as it were merely a State concern, report that since the Federal Government became in part responsible there has been a growing laxity on the part of State authorities about enforcing the law. Doubtless this is largely due to a misconceived notion, too widely entertained, that the Federal Government has actually taken over the real responsibility. The fact is quite the contrary. The Federal Government is not equipped with the instrumentalities to make enforcement locally effective. It does not maintain either a police or a judicial establishment adequate to or designed for such a task. If the burden of enforcement shall continue to be increasingly thrown upon the Federal Government, it will be necessary, at large expense, to create a Federal police authority which in time will inevitably come to be regarded as an intrusion upon and interference with the right of local authority to manage local concerns. The possibilities of disaster in such a situation hardly need to be suggested. Yet it is something that we must recognize as among the menaces in this situation.

The Federal Government ought to perform, in connection with the enforcement of this policy, those functions which are obviously within its proper province. These are compliance in all its aspects as it relates to international commerce, the importation and exportation of liquors, the collection of Federal revenue, the prevention of smuggling, and in general the enforcement of the law within the proper realm of Federal authority. But the business of local enforcement, by States and cities, ought to be in the hands of the State and local authorities, and it should be executed in all sincerity and good faith, as other laws are presumed to be executed.

No Federal Relaxation.

What I am saying must not be construed as indicating any relaxation of the National Government's purpose to do its full duty in this matter. I have no doubt that if the burden is cast, in undue proportion, upon the national authority the Federal Government will, not only under this Administration, but under whatever others may come in the future, assume and discharge the full obligation. But I am pointing out that this ought not to be made necessary. The national policy ought to be supported by the public opinion and the administrative machinery of the whole country. For myself, I am confident that we are passing now through the most difficult stage of this matter, and that as time passes there will be a more and more willing acceptance by authorities everywhere of the unalterable obligation of law enforcement. The country and the nation will not permit the law of the land to be made a byword.

The issue is fast coming to be recognized, not as an issue between wets and drys, not a question between those who believe in prohibition and those who do not, not a contention between those who want to drink and those who do not; it is that being rallied above all that, to recognition as an issue of whether the laws of this country can be and will be enforced. So far as the Federal Government is concerned, and I am very sure also, so far as concerns the very great majority of the State Governments and the local governments, it will be enforced. A gratifying indeed it may fairly be said an amazing progress has been made in the last few years toward better enforcement.

It is a curious illustration of loose thinking, that some people have proposed, as a means to protecting the fullest rights of the States, that the States should abandon their part in enforcing the prohibitory policy. That means simply an invitation to the Federal Government to exercise powers which should be exercised by the States. Instead of being an assertion of State rights, it is an abandonment of them; it is an abdication; it amounts to a confession by the State that it doesn't choose to govern itself but prefers to turn the task, or a considerable part of it, over to the Federal authority. There could be no more complete negation of State rights.

Assails Policy of Nullification.

The National Government has been uniformly considerate of the sensibilities of the States about their rights and authorities. But when a State deliberately refuses to exercise the powers which the Constitution expressly confers on it, it obviously commits itself to a policy of nullifying State authority, the effect of which we are reluctant to conjecture.

The policy of nullification has never appealed strongly to the American people. There are some historical records regarding efforts of States to nullify national laws, but the spectacle of a State nullifying its own authority, and asking the national sovereignty to take over an important part of its powers, is new. When the implications of this strange proposal are fully understood by people and parties devoted to preserving the rights of the States, the new nullificationists, I venture to say, will discover that they have perpetrated what is likely to prove one of the historic blunders in political management.

I am making my appeal in this matter to the broadest and best sentiments of law-abiding Americans everywhere. We must recognize that there are some people on both sides of this question in whose minds it is absolutely paramount. Some would be willing to sacrifice every other consideration of policy in order to have their own way as to this one. This constitutes one of the most demoralizing factors in the situation.

Extremists Keep It in Politics.

It was very generally believed that the adoption of the constitutional amendment would take the question out of politics. Thus far it has not done so, though I venture to predict that neither of the great parties will see the time, within the lives of any who are now voting citizens, when it will declare openly for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. But despite all that, the question is kept in politics because of the almost fanatical urgency of the minority of extremists on both sides. Unless through the recognition and acceptance of the situation in its true light, through the effective enforcement of the law by all the constituted authorities, and with the acquiescence of the clearly dominant public opinion in the country, the question is definitely removed from the domain of political action, it will continue a demoralising element in our whole public life. It will be a permanent bar to the wise determination of many issues entirely unrelated to the liquor question. It will be the means of encouraging disrespect for many laws. It will bring disrepute upon our community, and be pointed to as justifying the charge that we are a nation of hypocrites. There can be no issue in this land paramount to that of enforcement of the law.

It is easy to understand the conditions out of which much unrest has developed, but it is not easy to comprehend so much of complacency amid a developing peril. I want to give warning against that peril.

Many citizens, not teetotalers in their habits, lawfully acquired stores of private stocks in anticipation of prohibition, pending the ratification of the amendment and the enactment of the regulatory laws. Many others have had no scruple in seeking supplies from those who vend in defiance of the law. The latter practice is rather too costly to be indulged by the masses, so there are literally American millions who resent the lawful possessions of the few, the lawless practices of a few more, and rebel against the denial to the vast majority. Universal prohibition in the United States would occasion far less discontent than partial prohibition and partial indulgence.

Impairment of Moral Fibre.

It is the partial indulgence which challenges the majesty of law, but the greater crime is the impairment of the moral fibre of the Republic. The resentful millions have the example of law defiance by those who can afford to buy, and are reckless enough to take the risk, and there is inculcated as contempt for law which may some day find expression in far more serious form.

I do not see how any citizen who cherishes the protection of law in organized society may feel himself secure when he himself is the example of contempt for law. Clearly there is call for awakened conscience and awakened realization of true self-interest on the part of the few who will themselves suffer most when reverence for law is forgotten and passion is expressed in destructive lawlessness. Ours must be a law-abiding republic, and reverence and obedience must spring from the influential and the leaders among men, as well as obedience from the humbler citizen, else the temple will collapse.

Whatever satisfaction there may be in indulgence, whatever objection there is to the so-called invasion of personal liberty, neither counts when the supremacy of law and the stability of our institutions are menaced. With all good intention the majority sentiment of the United States has sought by law to remove strong drink as the curse upon the American citizen, but ours is a larger problem now to remove lawless drinking as a menace to the republic itself.

There is another phase of law-observance to which reference is impelling. I am thinking of the law of the golden rule, a statute from the Man of Nazareth, who brought new peace and new hope to mankind, and proclaimed service to men the highest tribute to God.

Service is both the inspiration and the accomplishment of quite everything worth while which impels us onward and upward. With service which the Nazarene would approve are associated all our ideals and our finer aspirations. We accept the doctrine for ourselves, as we ought, because we must be firmly established and healthfully and hopefully strong ourselves before we can be effectively helpful to others.

Appeals for World Court.

But I believe the law of service demands our larger helpfulness to the world. No, I do not mean entanglement in Old World politics or sponsorship for the adjustment of Old World controversies. I do not mean the commitment of this Nation to the promotion and preservation of international peace, to the judicial settlement of disputes which, unless settled, lead to added irritation, strained relations, and ultimately to war.

I would like the United States to give of our prestige, our influence and our power to make the International Court of Justice an outstanding and universally accepted agency of judicial determination of justiciable questions and the peaceful way to international settlements. It is too much to say that such a court will give a guaranty against war, but it will prove the longest step toward war prevention and to maintain peace since the world began.

In such a thought is concern for our own country no less than anxiety for a world which is finding readjustment difficult. I am thinking of more than our own freedom from conflict with all its attending burdens and sorrows. I am thinking of our America having a commitment to an enabling enterprise to save us from the reaction to mere sordid existence, and to keep our hearts aglow while we serve as vanguard in the march of civilization.

World War Raised Patriotism.

The World War was a frightful calamity, from which the earth will not have fully recovered in a century to come. Nearly five years have passed and peace is not yet secure. Our own cost was beyond an understandable appraisal, but sometimes feel it was worth much of its cost because it brought an American awakening and revealed the soul of the Republic. We experienced the supreme commitment. We saw our America ready to do or die for our concept of civilization and its guaranties. It exalted us and made us a better, a more patriotically devoted people. I would like to go on, with soul aflame in eagerness to aid humankind, while promoting security for ourselves.

This is no under appraisal of the essentials of material existence. We may rejoice in the flood tides of material good fortune, we may becomingly boast the measureless resources of the Republic, through God's bounty in creation and man's genius in development, but we aren't living the becoming life unless we are seeking to advance humankind as we achieve for ourselves. I would like the ages of envy and hate, and conquest and pillage, and armed greed and mad ambitions to be followed by understanding and peace, by the rule of law where force had reigned, the decisions of a World Court rather than the decrees of national armies, the observance of the golden rule as the law of human righteousness and the wail of human suffering and sorrow lost in the glad rejoicings of the onward procession of mankind. If we observe the law of service, if we heed our finer impulses, if we keep alive the soul which we revealed in our national defense, we will add to security for ourselves and give of our strength to this ideal world advancement.

HARDING PLEDGES DRY ENFORCEMENT

will prove the longest step toward war prevention and maintained peace since the world began."

12,000 Hear His Speech.

The President's address was delivered before an audience which filled Denver's Municipal Auditorium, where the Democratic National Convention of 1908 was held, to its capacity of 12,000 persons.

Prior to making his appearance there soon after noon the President was the central figure in a motor car procession through the heart of the city and its residential section to give the people an opportunity to see him.

All along his ten-mile tour of the streets, President Harding, with Mrs. Harding seated beside him in an open motor car, was cordially received. There was much hand-clapping and waving of flags and handkerchiefs as the President appeared, with cheers at those points where the throngs were thickest. When he entered the Auditorium, the large audience rose and made the President know he was welcome.

There were more cheers and vigorous hand-clapping when the President was formally introduced.

In some remarks, preparatory to the presentation of President Harding, Governor Sweet endorsed the President's stand for the World Court of Justice and asserted that this country would take its place among the nations building the foundation of enduring peace.

That there is considerable sentiment in Denver for the President's stand was manifested by the hearty approval which the audience gave to Governor Sweet's statement. Later, when the President reiterated his World Court policy a portion of the audience applauded several of his utterances. From the outset of his address it was apparent that there was considerable friendliness for Mr. Harding among his 12,000 auditors.

Refers to Former Visit.

Departing from the printed copy of the speech before him, he made some pleasant references to Denver and Colorado, advised the Denver "newspaper boys" to print in a "box" the prayer of the Rev. Dean Brown of the Episcopal Church, and told of a previous appearance in the Auditorium, when he was a political campaign speaker. The audience laughed and applauded when the President said that when he stood before on the same platform "You only gave me half the hail."

The President wandered again from his prepared address when he told something about the manner in which the Government at Washington was being conducted. Evidently relieved in getting away from the radio receiver directly in front of him in order that his address could be heard throughout the auditorium and broadcast through the country, the President talked extemporaneously in a happy informal manner which caught the fancy of the crowd. His references to the successful efforts to turn a potential treasury deficit into a surplus and to other endeavors to prevent increase in taxation were heartily applauded.

Mr. Harding's declaration for law observance and law enforcement in connection with the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act pleased a considerable proportion of the audience and was applauded. His expression of belief that the Eighteenth Amendment would never be repealed got a round of hand-clapping. Everything of a similar nature said by the President brought approval. The hand-clapping was by no means general, but it was sufficiently widespread among that large gathering to give encouragement to the speaker.

SMITH SILENT ON CHALLENGE.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 25.—Governor Smith returned from French Lick, Ind., today, after a two weeks' vacation, "to go to work; not to talk politics."

"Nothing to say now," asserted the Governor questioned if he had any reply to President Harding's statement at Denver that the repeal of the Mullan-Gage Prohibition Enforcement law was a "blunder of political management."

To repeated queries as to progress or delay in his "presidential boom," the Governor simply replied "nothing to say," or "it's bunk."

MEETS CONGRESSIONAL PARTY.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 25 (Associated Press).—The executive and legislative branches of the Government met today in the plains city of Cheyenne and for a few hours almost as much of the United States Government was centred here as in Washington.

President Harding and his party, including two Cabinet members, Secretaries Wallace and Work; Speaker Gillett and Admiral Rodman arrived at 5 o'clock and found greatly to their surprise that three hours earlier the Congressional party from Alaska had reached Cheyenne. Immediately there was what might be termed a homecoming between the two groups of travelers.

WILL STICK TO MARION.

Harding Sends Message That He Will Not Change Residence.

MARION, O., June 25.—Explicit denial was made today by President Harding that he intends to sever his relations with Marion as a citizen. One of the press reports, sent out last week, when The Marion tSar, Mr. Harding's paper, was sold, hinted that the business deal might mean that the President would not return to Marion to reside. The following telegram received today by George E. Van Fleet, editor of The Star, is believed to be the President's first definite statement as to his intentions:

"I note in the press statements that my sale of a controlling interest in The Star means the severance of my relations with Marion as a citizen. Please publish an explicit denial. Such an announcement is of no particular interest to anybody, excepting my lifelong friends of Marion and myself, but I do wish it understood at home that I have never entertained a thought of changing my residence. The ties of a lifetime are not so easily severed."

AMERICANS TO NAME WORLD COURT CHOICE

NOTICE SENT BY LEAGUE

Washington Forwards Invitation From Sir E. Drummond to Root, Straus, Gray and Moore.

The four American members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague—Elihu Root, Oscar S. Straus, Judge George Gray of Delaware and John Bassett Moore, who is now serving as a member of the World Court—have been notified by Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the Council of the League of Nations, that they are expected to nominate a new member of the International Court of Justice. The vacancy caused by the death of Judge Barbosa of Brazil is to be filled.

The notice was forwarded through the State Department. It did not meet with the delay encountered a year ago by a similar invitation sent to the Permanent Court of Arbitration members to make their first nominations for Judges of the International Court of Justice.

The first notice, it is now disclosed, was sent to the four members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration in June, 1921, when it was held up in some manner in the State Department. Rumors concerning failure of the State Department to forward the invitation varied widely. Friends of the League said they had heard it was pigeonholed by a high official, while others declared it was misplaced.

Failure of the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration to acknowledge the invitation occasioned inquiries by the Secretary of the League Council after a long lapse of time and with the time limit for making nominations to the International Court of Justice close at hand.

To make sure the four members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration would forward their World Court nominations in time for the League Council to act on them, the Secretary of the Council sent a second notice direct to Mr. Root, Mr. Straus, Judge Gray and Mr. Moore.

After receiving the direct notification, the four American members finally received the first invitation through the State Department. It is understood the invitation was forwarded after inquiries concerning it were made at the State Department.

The notice that has now come to the American members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration to make nominations for the World Court vacancy was dated June 10.

The nominations must be made before the middle of August, in time for the Assembly and Council of the League to vote on them at the election in September. All delegations to the Permanent Court of Arbitration have the privilege of making two nominations for the existing World Court vacancy.

Deny Delaying Invitation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Denial was authorized in an authoritative State Department quarter tonight of a report from New York to the effect that when the first notice was sent to Elihu Root, Oscar S. Straus and other members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague to nominate the first American member of the World Court, Secretary Hughes had "pigeonholed" the notice, with the result that the Secretary of the League of Nations, after thirty days, found it necessary to send a second notice direct to Mr. Root and the other American members.

From the same authoritative sources the statement was obtained tonight that the notice for the first nomination several years ago did not come to the attention of Secretary Hughes, but "the accident was overlooked." In the State Department, and that as soon as it was brought to the attention of Secretary Hughes it was immediately forwarded with explanation and in sufficient time to permit the nomination to be made, had that course been thought to be advisable.

When the informant of THE NEW YORK TIMES was asked whether there was any delay by the State Department in forwarding the recent notice of nomination of the successor of the South American Judge on the World Court, he replied that there had been no delay.

The notice for the making of nominations for the successor of Epitacio Barbosa, to fill the vacancy now existing in the World Court, said THE NEW YORK TIMES informant, was sent to Mr. Root and the other American members of The Hague Court of Arbitration as soon as it was received some time ago.

THOMAS DAWSON DIES IN DENVER HOSPITAL

This Makes Third Fatality in Auto Wreck in Connection With Harding Visit—Craig Likely to Live.

DENVER, Col., June 26.—Thomas F. Dawson, Colorado State Historian and well known newspaper man, died this morning in a hospital at 4:40 o'clock, the third victim of the automobile accident in Bear Creek Canyon yesterday. Mr. Dawson was with the group of newspaper men in President Harding's party, which arrived here yesterday morning.

Donald A. Craig, Washington correspondent of The New York Herald, the fourth person in the automobile, will probably recover. At the hospital today, it was said Craig had spent a comfortable night.

Yesterday's tragedy threw a pall over today's ceremonials in the President's honor, and deeply moved President Harding, who was inclined to defer the processional exercises on today's program, but as there was no time to give notice to the public, with consequent disappointment to the tens of thousands of people lining the route fixed for the Presidential parade, he yielded to the wishes of those who advised adherence to the program.

BELGIAN CABINET MAY STAY.

Premier Theunis Expects to Arrange Compromise With Opposition.

BRUSSELS, June 25 (Associated Press).—Premier Theunis, who has been charged with reconstituting the Cabinet, following its resignation over the question of the use of the Flemish language in the University of Ghent, is expected to complete an arrangement under which the old Ministry will remain in office for the time being, with the reorganization to come later.

The Premier is understood to be confident of reaching an agreement with the Opposition for the use of the French language in Ghent University, and also providing for twelve months' military service instead of fourteen, as he had proposed.

Canadian Distillery is Burned.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 25.—A distillery warehouse at Corbyville, housing 6,000 gallons of denatured alcohol and a large amount of proof spirits, was destroyed late yesterday by fire set by lightning. The Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, owner, estimated the damage at more than $1,000,000.

"The question I cannot answer"

THE nearest I can come to explaining the ability to select tobacco is to say that it is a certain ability to tell by sight, or touch, or smell, what is fine tobacco and what is not.

When I was a youth, employed in a cigar factory, I had this peculiar ability. And when I became a cigar manufacturer it proved to be of inestimable value in securing the finest tobacco for La Palina.

There are times when I feel that this instinct has temporarily deserted me. Sometimes I will refuse for several days to look at any tobacco rather than make a selection when I am uncertain of myself.

The methods employed in making La Palina are equally important. Men who have served this company for years train each cigar-maker. Each one must know exactly how to combine the tobaccos that produce the La Palina flavor and how to arrange the leaf tips so that this flavor lasts as long as you smoke the cigar.

Every member of this organization works for the satisfaction of La Palina smokers. Because I know this to be true, I confidently say: If you will smoke one La Palina you will join the ranks of those who have made it the leading high-grade cigar in the United States.

Awakening New Interest in Mazola

OFTEN a check up on a well known, presumedly well distributed product reveals a surprisingly thin coverage. Then it is that a new sales vision—a new sales punch—a new sales idea is invaluable.

WHAT GREATER SALES BUILDER for "Mazola" than a consistent, hard hitting newspaper campaign. Such a campaign not only keeps present users sold, but talks to tens of thousands of new buyers; renews dealer and jobber co-operation and creates a new demand in this great responsive territory, of zone 7. (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin).

The most effective way to awaken new interest, (which is bound to result in greater sales), is to tell your story consistently in The Chicago Tribune. In this great advertising medium you reach one-fifth to four-fifths of the families in 502 towns of 1,000 population or over. You influence 137 cities and towns of 5,000 population and over. What a coverage this is.

YOU CAN TELL YOUR STORY just as effectively in Laporte, Ind., or Rockford, Ill., Escanaba, Mich., or Clinton, Iowa, as you can right in the city of Chicago, and you can tell your story at a surprisingly low cost.

When you consider the cost of a campaign in The Chicago Tribune as compared with national magazines, the coverage cost is enticingly low.

Compare the following on the milline basis—

Saturday Evening Post	5.06
The Literary Digest	6.48
Ladies' Home Journal	6.51
Good Housekeeping	$ 8.49
Pictorial Review	6.00
Harpers Magazine	21.41

(From June 1923 issue of Standard Rate and Data Service.)

TODAY SALES MANAGERS KNOW that volume can be increased only by actually building up consumer demand. This creation of demand is highly effective through territorial selling such as is offered by The Chicago Tribune. In this way, compact units of able-to-buy people are reached at the lowest sales cost. The enthusiastic interest and support of the jobber and dealer automatically follows.

An advertising campaign in The Chicago Tribune will put new life, new interest and new vitality behind your product. You can influence a territory rich in wealth, high in buying power, and which represents one-sixth of the total population of the United States.

EVERY MANUFACTURER KNOWS the fine effect on a sales organization of such newspaper advertising. This is tangible advertising that the men see and read about day by day as they call on the trade.

In any representative city or town in Zone 7 you can analyze the direct sales influence of The Tribune on jobber, dealer and consumer.

The Chicago Tribune is organized to help you win this peerless market and with the proper advertising and selling plan marshaled against this eighteen million population area, profitable sales are the inevitable result.

SCORES OF OUR BEST KNOWN ADVERTISING successes have been built through just such territorial advertising, as you will find week after week in The Tribune with its 550,000 daily and its 900,000 Sunday circulation. In fact The Tribune has become one of the world's greatest barometers of advertising.

We will work with your sales manager to co-ordinate your sales and advertising effort in this great market. The Tribune has men trained not only in advertising, but also in merchandising. Every one of them has directed sales campaigns in the Chicago Territory and knows by repeated contacts with jobbers and retailers what can be done and how to do it.

Remember, The Chicago Tribune dominates and influences and directs this tremendous, five-state market. Write for a Tribune man to call.

THE SCREEN

A Revival.

PASSION, with Pola Negri, Emil Jannings and others, a revival of the story of Mme. du Barry, directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Capitol ballet corps, special ensemble of mixed voices and soloists. At the Capitol.

"Passion," the German production which was presented here two and a half years ago with marked success, is being revived this week at the Capitol, and with all the experience that must have been gained during that period this picture stands the test of time and holds its own with any photoplay yet produced. It is true that the director plays with French history, but the story of the little French milliner and her conquest of Louis XV. makes a fascinating drama.

Pola Negri is charming as the scheming, heartless flirt, known as Mme. du Barry. She has never played a rôle better than she does the one in this film. The scenes follow on as if they had been made in the same time that it takes to screen the production. Mlle. Negri's spontaneity is convincing, and the use she makes of her eyes elicits sympathy for those who fall in wild admiration before her charms. No time is lost in getting the story running. From the first instant Pola Negri appears the interest is whetted. If one has seen the production before, then there are certain sequences to which one looks forward, wondering, perhaps, how they will seem after two and a half years. To the writer they were just as excellent as in 1920.

Nothing could be more charming than the interrupted luncheon where the French milliner has to conceal herself behind a screen and where she eventually meets one of her many paramours. The scene where the King kisses Mme. du Barry's foot is wonderfully well directed. Incidentally, the same idea was copied in "Bella Donna," but the censor would not permit it to pass.

Whether French Kings, or Louis XV. especially were given to playing blind man's buff does not really matter. But it must be admitted that by putting in such a sequence in "Passion," Ernst Lubitsch, the director, accomplishes a good deal. He shows the foolishness of the King.

Lubitsch is remarkably careful about his sets, the narrow streets with steps being exceptionally well done, giving a fine opportunity for two characters.

The scenario is carefully mapped out with whimsical twists and a strong dramatic climax. Mlle. Negri is careful about her make-up, but she does seem to have put a little too much color above her eyelids. She makes the same mistake in "Bella Donna."

Emil Jannings as the king is an artist throughout the picture. First, he is seen looking through his lorgnette at the little milliner, who is seated on a bench in the royal garden, and later when he meets her he plucks from her corsage the roll of parchment she wishes him to sign for du Barry. He looks full of admiration for the girl. Lubitsch scorns to think that the King ever bothers his head about affairs of state. Mme. du Barry dominates Louis, eventually meeting her doom at the hands of the mob as "the wickedest woman of France."

"Passion" is well worth seeing again. It is an admirable production with splendid acting.

DIVORCE, with Jane Novak, John Bowers, James Corrigan, Edythe Chapman, Margaret Livingston, Freeman Wood and others. Adapted by Andrew Bennison, directed by Chester Bennett; "The Educator," with Lloyd Hamilton. At the Rialto.

"Divorce" is obviously a main title picked to sell the film, which is being featured this week at the Rialto. The story is just what one might expect, and the sub-titles are so exasperatingly wooden that it is a relief when the production comes to an end. Andrew Bennison is credited with the scenario and the picture was directed by Chester Bennett. It is hardly possible that either of these two will earn any laurels for their work.

It is one of those photoplays where the husband's name is Jim and his wife's name June. Jim is employed by his father-in-law and works his way to a responsible position. He is an ungrateful individual, easily flattered, who falls an easy victim to a beguiling female. He stays out at night with the brunette, and when he returns home he tells his wife it is only 12:30 when she has just looked at the clock marking 3:30. While he is out there is pictured the wife waiting with her good little boy, who hates "the big giant success," which his mother tells the child keeps his father from home. There is the scene with the husband dining at a fleshy restaurant, followed up with a sequence of the wife and small son at their table, and then a "shot" of the vacant chair. After the wild night Jim and June have breakfast together and Jim gets up when they have finished and pulls back his wife's chair.

Jim Parker, to give him his full name, is played by John Bowers, who in moments of perplexity always fumbles with his cigarette case. One could forgive the first few scenes in which he does this, but when it happens in every scene where Jim is thinking over the other woman it becomes irritating.

The director has tried to get as much sympathy as possible with Dick, the little son. The boy has a toy bear that turns somersaults, and the child is constantly amusing it.

It is rather ludicrous when Mrs. Parker appeals to her father to help her about her husband. The old man has a bright idea—to let the young man resign. Hence the sub-title has the wife's father saying to Jim: "Don't you think this job is too small for you?"

Parker immediately resigns, discovers that the brunette cares not a whit for him if he has not a good position, so that she can wheedle money out of him, and then learns that no firm is anxiously looking for his services. Meanwhile Mrs. Parker and her son leave the big house in which they have been living and eventually, after Jim has found out that "a mansion without love" is not as good as a cottage with love, he returns to his wife and boy.

Jane Novak as Mrs. June Parker is pretty and makes the most of her unsatisfactory part. Margaret Livingston, as the brunette—Gloria Gayne—is appealing, but all of the players appear to be somewhat listless, undoubtedly realizing that there is absolutely nothing they can do to make a hit in "Divorce."

CHICAGO CIVIC OPERA DEFICIT IS $351,718

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Although the first season of the Chicago Civic Opera Company finished with a loss of $351,718.58, the Trustees at their annual meeting today described it as the most successful financially in the history of operation in Chicago. The total receipts for the ten weeks in Chicago and three weeks on the road were $68,091 greater than the preceding season, and the prediction is that they will be still larger next season.

The deficit is to be made up among the 2,200 guarantors of the company who will be taxed only 70 per cent. of what they pledged at the beginning of the season. Twenty-six operas were presented last season and seventy-two performances were given, five more than the preceding year. Plans for the coming season are for eighty-five performances. The ten weeks in Chicago is to be extended to eleven and a half weeks, and the road tour, which lasted three weeks last season, also is to be prolonged.

The Chicago performances netted $757,770.23, while the income from the road tour totaled $22,436.89. Balanced against the total receipts, $964,507.12, were expenses amounting to $1,316,925.70.

Mr. Insull was re-elected President and General Charles G. Dawes Vice President. L. E. Kuppenheimer was elected Vice President to succeed Richard T. Cranem Jr., who resigned. Charles L. Hutchinson and Stanley Field were re-elected Treasurer and Secretary, respectively.

G. O. P. WOMEN TO ENTER NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Adams Directs Each State Committeeman to Choose Woman As Associate Member.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Each member of the Republican National Committee was requested today by Chairman Adams to appoint a woman in his State to serve as an associate member of the committee.

Announcement of this action was made in this statement, issued from committee headquarters:

"John T. Adams, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, today requested each member of the National Committee to appoint, as early as possible, a woman in his respective State who will serve as an associate member of the Republican National Committee. This action is in accordance with a plan agreed upon by President Harding, Chairman Adams, Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Vice Chairman of the Republican National Executive Committee, and Hamilton Kean of New Jersey, Chairman of the subcommittee appointed by the National Committee to canvass the situation.

"The plan as agreed upon has been approved almost unanimously by the members of the Republican National Committee."

Republican Party leaders in New England at a recent conference at Boston went on record as approving the appointment of women as advisers to the National Committee.

FOR READIER EXCHANGE OF PLAYS WITH LONDON

Anglo-American Theatres Corporation Formed to Eliminate the Huge Bonuses.

Formation of the Anglo-American Theatres Corporation, which has for its object a readier exchange of plays between the English and the American stage, was announced yesterday by A. H. Woods. Mrs. Woods, who returned from London last week, said yesterday that the chief effect of the new arrangement would be the elimination of the huge bonuses that producers are now required to pay for overseas successes, which, in turn, would mean international production on a larger scale. The agreement, all the details of which are now settled, will be definitely closed in the near future.

Under the terms of the agreement a group of American producers will have options on the plays produced by certain English managers, and vice versa. Mr. Woods names as his associates Sam H. Harris, Arch Selwyn, Martin Herman, and Crosby Gaige. Mr. Herman is a brother of Mr. Woods and associated with him, while Mr. Gaige is a partner of the Selwyns.

The English producers concerned are William Cooper, Director of Apollo Theatre Co., Ltd.; Chairman Gaiety Theatre Co., Ltd., Director George Edwardes (Daly's Theatre), Ltd., Director Musical Plays, Ltd.; Robert Evett, Managing Director George Edwardes, Ltd.; William Clifford Gaunt, Director Amalgamated Cotton Mills Trust, Ltd.; Thompson Jowett, Chairman British Industrial Corporation, Ltd., Director Grossmith & Malone, Ltd.; James White, Chairman of Committee Imagine, Director Beecham Trust, Ltd., Chairman George Edwardes, Ltd.; Right Hon. Lord Ashfield, Chairman Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd.; Lord Lurgan, Director Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, Ltd.; Lord Taynham, Director Theatre Royal, Manchester, Ltd., and George Dance, theatre owner and theatrical producer.

The theatres controlled by members of the company in New York are the Apollo, the Eltinge, the Selwyn, the Sam H. Harris and the Times Square, and the five Chicago houses are also under their control. The English members control the Adelphi, the Duke of York's, Daly's, the Empire, the Gaiety, the Lyric, and the Prince of Wales.

The new arrangement is not a partnership, Mr. Woods declared, and the various members of the company will have no interest in the plays and theatres of the others.

BORDEN HARRIMAN ON STAGE

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 26.—Borden Harriman, son of Mrs. Oliver Harriman of New York City, arrived here today to join the Wood players, a stock company under the management of Leonard Wood Jr., son of Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Governor General of the Philippine Islands. Young Harriman recently appeared in a moving picture.

William A. Williams, Harvard, '16, another member of the company, which is to feature here for a week in "Up the Ladder," with which the Wood Players will open in Lancaster, Pa., Monday, July 2, at the Fulton Opera House. The Wood Players have been playing Fall River for the last three weeks at the Empire Theatre, with Mr. Williams as leading man.

The Fall River company is to be retained here for the Summer and Mr. Wood has an option on the theatre for the Winter season if his venture proves successful. Up to date though, the theatregoers of this mill town have not taken very grudgingly to "Getting Gertie's Garter" and "The Meanest Man in Town," which the company has produced. Manager Wood is going to try them with plays of the "thriller" type and intends to test how his ideas of stock work out in other places, with Lancaster, Pa., for a fresh start.

Manager Wood's company is an independent venture at this time. He intimated today that he would soon incorporate, his New York office is at 96 Wall Street, he says.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Take a Chance," a musical comedy tested on the road in the Spring, will be brought to New York next season by Harold Orlob. Alison Skipworth has been added to the cast.

Luella Gear will have a rele in "Poppy," in which Madge Kennedy will make her musical comedy debut in the Fall.

B. S. Moss's new Castle Theatre at Long Beach will be opened on Thursday night.

"Go-Go" was transferred last night from the Thirty-third Street Theatre to the Apollo.

"Connie Goes Home," a comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter, was produced for the first time in Atlantic City last night.

"The Breaking Point," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, was given its tryout production in Washington last night.

"Wise Youth," by an unnamed author, will be produced by John Henry Mears next season, with Marian Mears, James Dyrenforth and Theodore Westman Jr. in the cast.

REVISED "FOLLIES" SHOWN.

Ann Pennington and Ilse Marvenga Among the Additions.

With a record of a year's run behind him—something hitherto unheard of for a "Follies"—Mr. Ziegfeld last night fortified his entertainment for the Summer by the addition of divers players and features. Thus bulwarked, the current "Follies" will continue to divert New York until the first week in September, when it will strike out for Boston. The New Amsterdam, simultaneously, will receive the 1923 edition.

A few weeks ago Eddie Cantor succeeded Will Rogers in the New Amsterdam proceedings, and last night the further additions included Ann Pennington, a singer from Europe named Ilse Marvenga, a knockabout trio from England, new faces in the chorus, and three of Mr. Haggin's striking tableaux. Of these the most popular last night was Miss Pennington, back once more in the environment that first ushered her to fame.

Mr. Ziegfeld was so unfortunate as to reveal his revised "Follies" upon one of the hottest nights of the year, with the result that an uncomfortable audience arrived at the theatre apathetic and continued so. Accordingly, they paid scant tribute to the various beauties that Mr. Ziegfeld caused to be unfolded before them. Nevertheless—making only the traditional reservation as to humor—the "Follies" continues to be gorgeous entertainment.

ROMEYN P. BENJAMIN ACTOR

Romeyn Park Benjamin, son of the late Park Benjamin, and a brother of Mrs. Enrico Caruso, will make his professional stage début in Stamford next Friday night, when he will appear in one of the leading rôles in "The Earthquake." The play is the first production venture of William A. Brady Jr., and is the work of Theodore A. Liebler Jr.

The company will include Ann Andrews, Mr. Kerrigan, Albert Andruse, Beatrice Prentiss, and others.

Mrs. Fuller's $118,000 Suit Postponed.

The hearing of the case of Mrs. Elisabeth Fuller, mother of Edward M. Fuller against Benjamin F. Feiner, of the law firm of Feiner & Maass, 23 Exchange Place, and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, for $118,000, was put over until Wednesday, June 27 at 2 o'clock. The case came up yesterday before Referee Ely Rosenna, at 68 Park Row. Handwriting experts will be called to testify as to the authenticity of the signatures of two notes which form the basis of the claim.

MUSIC NOTES.

S. P. Goldman's band program in Central Park last night included a new march, "On the Mall," dedicated to Elkan Naumburg.

The Hamilton Community Council in West 145th Street has a free concert tonight by Edna Fields and the Coolidge Trio.

W. C. Carl, organist of the Old First Church, will sail on the Tuscania next Saturday for a Mediterranean cruise.

MME. WALSKA IN PARIS OPERA DEBUT TONIGHT

Says She Has Sacrificed Social Life for Her Art, but Admits Stage Fright Over 'Rigoletto.'

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 26.—Mme. Ganna Walska, wife of Harold McCormick, will make her début tomorrow evening at the National Opera here in Verdi's "Rigoletto." She will have with her in the cast Smirnoff, Russian tenor; Schwarz, Russian baritone, and Mlle. Darbeil of the Opera company. In preparation for the event Mme. Walska has been giving interviews to the French press, and she will have the encouragement before the event of reading many complimentary columns.

In one of these interviews the débutante insists fervently her preference for her name Ganna Walska. "Don't call me Mrs. McCormick," she asked her interviewer. "I am appearing at the Opera under my own name. It was by whisper that Mrs. McCormick gave the interview so as not to fatigue her voice. "For me," she said, "tomorrow evening's performance is one of the greatest events of my life, for I love only music. Nothing else has any attraction for me. During this past week of social gayeties I have refused every invitation so as to be able to devote all my time and strength to my art."

Such self-abnegation has drawn great praise from Mme. Walska's interviewers, who write enthusiastically of her words: "I am preparing myself for this performance as for a religious ceremony. I am sacrificing all this vain and empty social life for song, for it is only in song that one finds joy and satisfaction."

Mrs. McCormick let fall a word of judicious praise for the Paris public, "so tasteful, so artistic and so appreciative of great music," but confident as she is, ambitious as she is and filled as she is with the sense of her mission to sing, she confessed to interviewers that she was afraid. "It is the first time I have sung 'Rigoletto'," she said, "and I confess I have—what's the word?"—and the interviewer supplied it—"le trac," which in plain English is stage fright. She is counting on Schwarz and Smirnoff to help her keep up her courage and that seems only an uncertain quantity in the present, although pains have been made to insure an immense success.

After her single appearance at the Opera, time, Walska intends to sing "Rigoletto" in London and then, with these two successes behind her, she is going back to Chicago to meet her husband and once more, on 58st. 7, face a Chicago audience.

FASCISTI SWEEP ELECTIONS.

Other Parties Fail to Vote in Some Italian Districts.

NOVARA, Italy, June 25.—The Fascisti candidates in the municipal elections throughout this province yesterday were chosen without opposition, as the Socialists, Catholics and Liberals abstained from participating.

LEGHORN, Italy, June 25.—In the municipal elections held yesterday 70 per cent. of the electors cast their ballots. The Fascisti candidates received an overwhelming majority of the votes. Leghorn, formerly was a Socialist and communist stronghold.

SILKWORTH RESIGNS AND SELLS HIS SEAT

stain could not explain why Fuller & Co. had issued a check for $525 out of the firm's mysterious "Account 600," but said later, "It is possible that Fuller asked me for a loan of $500, but you'll have to ask Fuller about that."

Referee Coffin here interposed to inform Rothstein that Fuller had refused to testify about that check on the ground that it might degrade and incriminate him, and Rothstein replied: "I wish I could induce him to tell all about it. This matter has caused me considerable embarrassment. My dealings with Fuller & Co. were straight and aboveboard. I don't want to hide anything from you."

Mr. Kohlman brought out that $75,478.08 had been paid out from "Account No. 600." The largest payment was in Liberty bonds worth $56,925.83, but there was nothing to show to whom the bonds went. Mr. Kohlman stated that $15,025.25 had been paid to "J. J. Brady." Rothstein admitted that he knew Brady, but denied that Brady received the money for him.

When the proceeding began in Referee Coffin's office at 217 Broadway, Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants baseball club, and Thomas M. Foley, ex-Sheriff and for many years Tammany leader of the First Assembly District, were present under subpoena. They were followed into the referee's office by Fuller, who is a prisoner in Ludlow Street Jail for contempt of the Federal court, and who, with his partner, William F. McGee, was sentenced two weeks ago to Sing Sing for bucketing.

Stoneham and Foley were excused from giving further testimony at the inquiry until Tuesday, July 24, and Fuller was called to the witness chair. He told Referee Coffin that he no longer was represented by William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee, who were his attorneys in previous hearings and in the three trials of Fuller on bucketing indictments.

Harold A. Content then told the referee that he and his partner, Charles H. Griffith, had been retained by Fuller on Saturday, but that they had not had time to consult with their client about testimony he was to give in the investigation.

"This is rather surprising," interjected Referee Coffin. "Fuller's counsel stated to Judge Nott when Fuller and McGee were arraigned for sentence before Judge Nott in General Sessions that Fuller was penniless and poverty-stricken. Now he has brought in eminent counsel." Turning to Fuller, the referee added: "Do you have to consult your counsel to tell your creditors about the conduct of your business and the whereabouts of the assets of your firm?"

"I want to talk to my counsel about the case generally," replied Fuller.

"There is no generally about it," retorted the referee. "This is merely a matter of assets; there are no criminal proceedings here." Fuller replied:

Hints at Criminal Proceedings.

"But there is apt to be a criminal proceeding as the result of this hearing."

After Fuller had admitted knowing Rothstein, the referee asked: "Did he have an account with E. M. Fuller & Co?" Before Fuller could answer Mr. Griffiths interposed with the statement that it was not fair to examine his client before he had had an opportunity to confer with him, and when the referee insisted on an answer, Fuller said: "I refuse to answer." When Fuller would not state whether his answer would degrade or incriminate him, the referee announced that he would postpone further questioning of the bucketing broker until 2 P. M. tomorrow.

Mr. Kohlman protested and explained that he had to appear in another court.

"This court is the United States Court," said the referee, "and it must function. We cannot wait because an attorney is engaged elsewhere. If you are not satisfied with the ruling, your course is clear to you."

Stoneham and Foley had not left the room and when Mr. Kohlman said he would like to examine Foley next week, the referee declared that neither Foley nor Stoneham could be examined until July 24.

"This is an outrage," declared Mr. Kohlman.

"Watch your step," admonished the referee.

Rothstein was called to the stand, and after he had testified as to the loans from Fuller the referee asked:

"It is reported that Fuller laid considerable sums of money with you as wagers on horse races. What have you got to say about that?"

"I'll have to refuse to answer that question on the ground that it would degrade and incriminate me," said Rothstein.

"Charges have been made that Fuller took considerable money from Fuller & Co. and lost it on the race tracks," went on the referee.

"Why, I always thought he was a very good player," answered Rothstein. "I understood that he often won a lot of money."

"Then you refuse to give us any information on any wager on race horses made by Fuller on the ground that to do so would degrade and incriminate you?" asked Mr. Coffin.

"Yes; much as I would like to tell you," was the reply.

Denies Interest in Fuller Firm.

"Are you prepared to tell the court," interposed Mr. Chadbourne, counsel for the Fuller creditors, "that you had no interest in Fuller & Co.?"

"Absolutely none," said Rothstein.

"Did you ever talk to Stoneham or Foley about Fuller & Co. needing money?"

"Of course not," the witness replied. "I've known Stoneham a long time, but I hardly know Foley."

"Did you know that about a month before Fuller & Co. went into bankruptcy McGee settled a large amount of money on his wife?" he was asked.

"I know nothing about that," replied Rothstein.

Rothstein was questioned at length about a report that he and others had combined to defray the expenses of the criminal proceedings against Fuller and McGee, and he declared that he gave no money to either of the brokers after their indictment.

"Did anybody approach you and ask you to contribute toward their legal expenses?"

"I don't know whether they did or not," answered Rothstein.

"This witness is palpably evading your direction to answer questions," said Mr. Chadbourne. "He is assuming a bland-like attitude in professing not to understand the simplest words in the English language."

Taking a new tack, he asked: "Did you ever place any bets for Fuller at the race tracks?"

"You wouldn't call that a business, would you?" was the answer. "That would be conferring a personal favor."

"Where did you get the Liberty bonds that you put up as security

GIANTS BEAT PHILS WITH RALLY IN 9TH

MEUSEL SCORES FINAL RUN

Grosses Plate on Kelly's Single, and Scott Is Credited With Victory, 11 to 10.

The Giants almost lost a ball game at the Polo Grounds yesterday, which, however, isn't as startling as the fact that the Phillies almost won one. It was a rare treat for the Phils to get as close as they did—two runs ahead of the champions up to, but not including, the ninth inning.

In the ninth Giants took successive and successful pot shots at two Philadelphia pitchers, scored three runs and snatched away an 11—10 victory. The ease and adeptness, not to say calmness, with which the Giants did their final game-rescuing stint made it look almost prearranged. The more so because an inning before they had looked and dawdled and let the Phils score seven runs for a two-run lead.

"Did it just to make the game interesting," said the Giants' supporters scoffingly, after Kelly had giggled in the Ninth and the danger was all over.

Preceding Kelly's final effort the champs delivered eight big Bertha ruffles that effectively cleared the landscape of all Philadelphians. It was smashing hitting. Bancroft soaked a liner over the shortstop's head for two bases, this being the initial volley. Young Travis Jackson, who is still a new Giant but not so new that he regards it into the program, punched a smart line single to centre. The ball was missed by Bancroft, who had started back to second, fearing that Wrightstone would catch it, and who therefore went no further than third on the hit.

Joe Frisch was next in line, and the best player in the National League poled a long single to centre—a beautiful hit that scored Bancroft and sent Jackson to second. Meusel's attempt at a sacrifice was wrecked when Jackson was forced at third, but Young hit one just as hard and long as Frisch, only to fight field. Frankie came in from third with the tying score and Meusel had plenty of time to make third.

Kelly Chooses to Single.

That made it easy for George Kelly. A single or a sacrifice fly was needed. George chose the former and lined a brisk hit over second base, and that was the end of it.

The Giants hit faster than Arthur Fletcher could rush pitchers from the bull pen. Big Wilbur Hubbell was in the box at the start of the ninth, but after Bancroft and Jackson had hit safely Fletcher sent in Whitey Glazner, a good pitcher, to try to smooth the heavy waters. Inasmuch as Frisch, scoring unmolested Whitey's first clean singles, his first aid work did the Giants more good than the Phils.

It was a lackluster game—slow, drowsy and spotty both. The Giants suffered as much as their rivals in playing and looked like a second-division outfit, loafing palsably after they had obtained a big lead and thought the game as good as in. In the eighth they recede pictures. Five runs behind, 8 to 3, the Phils broke loose and almost won the game. Cotton Tierney started with a homer. Lee singled, Henline forced him, but Holke doubled and Rapp singled.

After the Rapp episode, John McGraw motioned Arthur Nehf to come out of there, and Bill Ryan was called in from the bull pen. Differing from his star Nehf walked the first batter and pleased with such eloquence that John J. let him go out again for another fling.

The first decision, however, was the latter. Wilson, batting for Clarence Mitchell, dumped a bunt which Jackson couldn't field, and on the hit Holke scored from third, making it 8 to 6.

Ryan was then summoned in earnest, and he made Mokan ground to Bancroft, who juggled and filled the bases. Much excitement and thrill in the stands when Cy Williams, who has been out with an injury, strode to the plate to bat for Parkinson. But Cy spoiled a dream of the setting by lofting a foul to Kelly. Almost out of the woods, Ryan walked Walker, forcing over Rapp, and then the demon Tierney, who had already hit a homer in the inning, smashed a double against the left field wall, clearing the bases and placing the Phils two notches in front.

Giants Score Seven in Third.

Seven runs in an inning is scrambled baseball, and it happened twice in this sun-baked and dizzy afternoon. In the third, with the score 1-0 against them, the Giants turned the same trick. With one out Hank Gowdy tripled to left centre. Nehf walked and Bancroft drove Gowdy in with a fly. Jackson's fly to right on second. A pass to Frisch filled the sacks, and another to Meusel pushed over a run. Young bunted safely down third base way, Jackson scoring, and then Kelly delivered a sizzling hit to right, intended to bring in Frisch and Meusel. Kelly stole second, while Young stayed at third, and the two of them hurried in on O'Connell's single.

In the next inning Tierney's single, a triple by Lee and Henline's double—all with nobody out—gave the Phils two runs, but the Giants got one back in their half when Jackson's shot fly fell and rolled for a triple. Frisch followed promptly with a single to right.

After that nothing until the Phils' big rally in the eight and the Giants' bigger rally in the eighth. Jack Scott pitched the last inning and got credit for the victory.

Caught at the Plate.

The first thing Glazner did when he relieved Hubbell in the ninth was to catch Jackson asleep off first. So, at least, it seemed from the stands, but Bob Hart, after first starting to raise his hand, lowered it and signaled "safe." He didn't look any too sure about it, and the Phils raised a fuss over the decision.

Hank Gowdy caught his first game in a Giant uniform here since the recent trade. He holds up the pitchers well, does Hank, but there was little to hold up yesterday.

In the ninth Scott got out of a hole luckily. With men on third and second Mokan tried to dodge a wild one and his bat barely touched the ball, Gowdy catching it for a third strike, which retired the side.

Mokan wouldn't believe the bad news when informed by Umpire Moran.

Young staved off oodles of trouble in the seventh by running far toward the side line, at top speed, catching Mokan's short fly with outstretched glove.

Seven straight for the Giants!

Tierney made only two singles, a double and a homer, scored two runs and drove in four others. That was all.

Frisch's three hits sent him past Charley Grimm in the batting records and only a stride or two behind Zack Wheat, the leader.

BABE RUTH, UNHURT, REPORTS TO YANKEES

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 25.—The great Babe Ruth mystery was solved this afternoon, and the report received by Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees last night to the effect that the slugger had been injured in an automobile accident proved unfounded when the famous home-run hitter reported to the leader of the American League champions. Ruth's explanation of his failure to reach New Haven for the Yankees' exhibition game there yesterday afternoon was simple enough.

"I overslept," he said, "and thought I could get to New Haven quicker by automobile than by train. I made the trip once in less than three and a half hours, and, forgetting it was Sunday, figured that I could do it again.

"The traffic was too heavy for me to make good time, however, and it was after 5 o'clock when I reached Hartford. I then decided that I could not get to New Haven in time for the game, so I turned around and went to my farm at Sudbury, Mass., for the night. I came into Boston early this morning and spent the morning at the ball park tinkering with my car."

The Babe also expressed keen regret at his failure to reach New Haven, which resulted in the refunding to the fans by the officials of the New Haven club of the extra admission fee charged with the understanding that Ruth was to appear in the line-up of the Yankees.

Officials Here Profess Ignorance.

Officials of the Yankees in this city professed to know little about the details of the Babe Ruth case yesterday. Business Manager Ed Barrow said he had called Miller Huggins by long-distance phone yesterday morning but had learned only that the manager had not yet seen Ruth to get the player's side of the story.

It was understood in baseball circles that Barrow and President Jacob Ruppert were to have had a conference at the stadium yesterday to discuss the episode and decide what action should be taken if any. Barrow, however, declined to say last night that any action in the way of a suspension, fine or reprimand would have to come from Huggins, club officials not being disposed to take a hand.

There was a widely circulated report yesterday, however, that Ruth had been fined $1,000 by Huggins, but Barrows declared he knew nothing about it. He also denied having been informed by the New York club that the Yankees' share of Sunday's receipts would be cut $1,000 to $2,000 because of Ruth's failure to appear.

REDS DEFEAT CUBS ON DUNCAN'S HOMER

Each Team Makes Two Circuit Clouts, but Cincinnati Triumphs by 6 to 5.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Home runs by Hargrave and Duncan put the Cincinnati Reds out in front and they defeated Chicago, 6 to 5, today. After the Reds had tied the count, Statz's home run put Chicago ahead. The Cubs lost the advantage in the next inning on Hargrave's homer with a man on.

Duncan's home run in the seventh inning proved the winning marker, as O'Farrell hit a home run in Chicago's eighth.

JONES IS DRIVEN TO COVER

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 25.—With Babe Ruth back in the line-up this afternoon, the Yankees scored an overwhelming victory over the Red Sox in the third game of the series. The final score was 14 to 6. It was the third successive triumph for the Hugmen over the Boston club. The New Yorkers went on a rampage in the late innings, scoring seven runs in the seventh and five more in the ninth.

Ruth played a brilliant game. He drove out two hits and drew two passes in six trips to the plate. He also made a sensational catch in the fourth inning when he grabbed Burns's liner with one hand while running at top speed.

For six innings the game was a pitching duel between Sam Jones and Bill Piercy, the latter a former Yankee. Piercy weakened in the seventh, however, and retired in favor of a pinch hitter after the Yankees had scored seven runs in this inning. Jones, who threw his right shoulder out, while pitching to Harris in the fourth, continued in the game until the eighth and then was batted out of the box. Bob Shawkey finishing for the champions.

Yanks Make Seventeen Hits.

Seventeen hits, for a total of twenty-five bases, were made by the Yankees, and, barring Shawkey, every man in the New York batting order made at least one safety. Hofmann led the attack with a sacrifice fly, a triple and a double in five times up. He scored two runs on his own account and batted in four, three of the latter resulting from his triple with the bases filled in the seventh inning.

Both Piercy and Jones were good at the start and either side scored in the first two innings with one run in the third, however. Witt drew a pass and went to second on Dugan's single to centre. Ruth took a ponderous swing at a three-ball pitched and fell writhing to the ground, a foul tip caromed off his own right sock. He quickly recovered, however, and brought Witt home with the first run of the game on a single past Burns. Dugan went to third on the play and was left stranded there when Harris climbed the embankment in left to make a fine catch of Pipp's long fly.

There was no further scoring until the sixth, when the Yankees tallied again. With one out in the sixth Meusel singled to centre, advanced to second on a wild pitch and stole third as Ward walked. Scott beat out a bunt, Ward advancing to second, but with Burns and Piercy both hanging at the plate in anticipation of an attempted squeeze Meusel wisely remained on third. Hofmann then chased Harris up the embankment for a long high fly, Meusel scoring and Ward and Scott advancing a base each after the catch. Harry prevented further scoring in this frame by fanning Jones.

Red Sox Tie Score.

In the second half of the sixth Collins led off with a single to centre, and, following Flagstead's fly to Ruth, Burns bounced a single through the box. Harris filled to Meusel, but Devormer cracked a double to left and drove the tying runs across.

Then came the seventh and seven runs for the champions. Witt filed to Collins, Piercy passed Dugan, Ruth and Pipp. Meusel batted into a force out at second, but defeated his attempt to double Him at first and Dugan scored. Ward singled to centre, scoring Ruth and Piercy filled the bases by muffing Burns's throw on Scott's bounder. Hofmann tripled, clearing the bases, and subsequently scored himself on Jones's double to left. Witt then came to bat for the second time in the inning and doubled over third, scoring Jones. Dugan's fly to Flagstead ended the inning.

In the second half the Red Sox scored two runs on a pass to Fewster, Mitchell's single and Collins's double, and in the eighth they counted for one more on singles by Devormer, Fewster and Lefty O'Doul, pinch hitter.

Fullerton pitched the ninth and the Yanks scored five runs at his expense. Scott started with a single to left and went to third on Hofmann's double to right. Shawkey bunted safely, scoring Scott, and Witt doubled to left, scoring Hofmann. Dugan's sacrifice fly brought Shawkey home. Ruth drew a pass and following Pipp's fly to Harris Meusel tripled to centre, scoring both Witt and Ruth. He tried to stretch his hit into a homer and was caught at the plate.

M'TIGUE IS BEATEN BY TOM LOUGHRAN

BERNSTEIN STOPS JACKS

Junior Lightweight Titleholder Knocks Out Australian in Fifth at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Mike McTigue, light heavyweight champion of the world, was outpointed tonight by Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, according to the majority of the newspaper men at the ringside, who gave the champion only two out of eight rounds. Except in the sixth and seventh rounds McTigue appeared listless and was hit almost at will by the Philadelphian.

McTigue appeared awkward and displayed anything but championship form. In the first two rounds he landed only four blows and they did no damage.

Not until the sixth did he show any aggressiveness. Then he sailed into the Philadelphian and sent several hard lefts and rights to the face and body which stunned Loughran.

The champion also had the better of the seventh round and earned an even break in the eighth, the experts said.

In the earlier rounds, however, Loughran clearly outpointed and outboxed the title-holder. The Philadelphian carried the fight to him in every one of the first five rounds and sent home nearly twice as many punches as McTigue.

At one point Loughran's rain of lefts and rights appeared to have McTigue groggy, but he rallied and weathered the storm. It was McTigue's first appearance in the ring since he won the title from Battling Siki in Dublin last St. Patrick's day.

Jack Bernstein, junior lightweight champion, tonight knocked out Freddy Jacks of Australia, in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round bout. The fight was the last preliminary to the bout between McTigue and Loughran.

Bernstein was the aggressor from the start, landing blows almost at will. The Australian came up in the fifth round visibly weakened from the beating he had taken, after a series of blows to the head and body Bernstein landed a hard left in the stomach which sent Jacks down for the count.

In another eight-round preliminary Clonie Tait, Canadian lightweight champion, outpointed Johnny Clinton of Brooklyn, in the opinion of the majority of newspaper men at the ringside. The fight was fast and hard.

Eddie Wagner and Bobby Barrett, both of this city, won the other two eight-round preliminaries, the former outpointing Earl Baird of New York and the latter defeating Johnny Donnelly of Uniontown, Pa.

AMATEURS BEAT PROS IN AIRPLANE GOLF

Triumph by 1 Up in Experimental 9-Hole Match in Chicago—Game Is Condemned.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Airplane golf was played successfully for the first time today at the Olympia Fields Country Club to celebrate the opening of its fourth 18-hole links, making it the largest golf club in the world. A team of nine amateurs defeated nine professionals one up in the nine holes of match play. Two balls were dropped from an airplane as near as possible to each hole and an amateur and a professional stationed at each green holed a ball from where the dropped ball landed.

The amateurs used twenty-five strokes and the professionals twenty-six, allowing the amateurs to win in medal score also. The best score was two strokes, which was tallied five times. There were two holes in four, while all the rest were made in three, showing the accuracy with which the balls were dropped from the plane.

The aerial driving was done by Rockwell Stephens, Carying eighteen golf balls, half marked with green ribbons a yard long and the other nine by red streamers, the plane swooped as low as the forested preserve of the courses would permit. Two balls, one green and one red, were released as the biplane sped at seventy-five miles an hour over the first hole. One fell on the putting green, while the other all but disappeared in the deep rough to one side. The beribboned pellets were replaced with unadorned balls, and the golfers played the terrestial strokes.

The balls did not cut into the turf, the ribbons forming a sort of parachute to lessen the force of gravity. By accident the professionals were handicapped for the green ribbons, which marked the pellets intended for them, were a trifle wider than the reds. The stiff breeze caught the wider ribbons with great effect, carrying them in almost all instances further from the flag than those bedecked with the narrower red streamers.

Many members of the club condemned the game as a distortion of golf, that would ruin the courses and wreck the finesse of the players who participated.

TO PASS ON STATUS OF LEONARD TODAY

State Commission Will Decide Whether Champion Is Under Contract to Meet White.

More than the usual degree of interest will be attached to today's meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission, which is scheduled to be held in the commission's offices in the Flatiron Building at 10:30 o'clock this morning. The routine business will be handled, then the Commissioners will settle down to the big work of determining the status of Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion.

Leonard is scheduled to meet Lew Tendler of Philadelphia in a fifteen-round bout to a decision under the auspices of the Cromwell A. C. at the Yankee Stadium on the night of July 23. Tex Rickard, promoter of the Garden and at Boyle's Thirty Acres, asserts that he has a prior claim to the services of Leonard. Rickard maintains that he holds a contract for a match with Charley White, which originally was scheduled for New Jersey on Oct. 3, 1922.

The New Jersey boxing body, through its official spokesman, Platt Adams, already has decided that Leonard must meet White in New Jersey before boxing Tendler or face a suspension in that State. Billy Gibson, manager of Leonard, contends that the contract does not hold and gave a half dozen reason to sustain his contention. Rickard declares that he has every legal right to the match and is going to see his way through to the finish.

U. S. JOCKEY RECOVERING.

McGee, Hurt in Grand Prix, May Resume Riding in a Few Days.

PARIS, June 25 (Associated Press).—Matt McGee, the American jockey, ranking second on the French list, who was thrown heavily in a jam at the post in the Grand Prix de Paris yesterday, is less seriously hurt than at first thought, it developed today. It is expected McGee will be able to resume riding within a few days.

Frank O'Neill, the American who had a nasty spill in April and has been long in convalescing, has now completely recovered and will return to the track at Maisons-Laffite tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., June 25.—There will be a novelty in the transportation service between the town of Shelby and the arena when Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons meet on July 4. The vehicles will not be of a new and different color, but will be of a kind Broadway hasn't seen since Greenwich Village was uptown. Low Loder of Glasgow, Mont., will operate three bulletproof, double-deck, four-horse stage coaches "right out to the big battle," and he assures each customer a good ride.

SHELBY PROMOTERS SMILE: RAIN CEASES

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., June 25.—Dan Tracy, chief executive of the Dempsey-Gibbons bout to be held here July 4, got back to Shelby today after a week-end visit in Great Falls. Mr. Tracy said that he had no announcement to make at this time concerning the payment of the $100,000 due Dempsey on July 2 as the final instalment of the champion's $310,000 guarantee, but that he expected there would be no difficulty in raising the money. He said that the general feeling toward the bout in Great Falls was optimistic and that with the return of sunny weather he looked for a capacity crowd. It is expected that a full statement concerning the financial standing and ticket sale will be given out on Wednesday or Thursday of this week when the unsold tickets are recalled from the district agents.

The clear, cool weather not only encouraged the officials of the bout, who look for it to bring many tourists into Shelby, but it gave Gibbons the first chance he has had to train in his open-air stockade for some time. The challenger's training rig was open to the sun today, for Manager Kane had the roof removed, and Gibbons, stripped to the waist, boxed eight rounds under the conditions which are likely to prevail when he meets the champion. There were also some new features to the afternoon workout.

Johnny Kilbane, who recently lost his featherweight title to Eugene Criqui at the Polo Grounds in New York, refereed the last bout of the four, and Matt Moore, a newcomer in camp, boxed Gibbons for two rounds. Last week Moore, who is a Minneapolis middleweight, defeated Jack Reddick, claimant of the Canadian middleweight title, at Moosejaw, Canada. But if one had to judge from Moore's showing against Gibbons the Canadian championship cannot be of much value. During most of the two rounds he was in the ring Moore didn't even know where Gibbons was, much less was he able to hit him.

As usual, Gibbons got his best workouts from Jimmy Delaney and Tillie (Kid) Herman. Against these two the challenger plainly put on full speed, but the result was not quite so convincing as it had been on other days. Delaney and Herman solved Gibbons's style. Either that or boxing in the sun troubled the big fellow. Whatever the cause, both these boxers found him easier to hit and Herman, especially, landed frequent blows to the body.

The Herman contest resulted in a great deal of infighting and so far Gibbons has shown no great inclination to work on his opponent's body, confining himself chiefly to jabs and hooks to the chin. Referee Kilkenny, who was in the great deal of infighting, and so far Gibbons with a critical eye, but declined to make any prediction as to the St. Paul boxer's chance of winning the championship.

The afternoon session began with the customary posing for the movie and still photographers and presumably interest in the bout is increasing, for there were just twice as many of the "just one more please" boys on hand as on any previous day.

DENIES THAT HAGEN COMPLAINED ABROAD

Manager of Star Says Americans Received 'Sporting Deal' in British Open.

When Robert Harlow, manager of Walter Hagen, returned yesterday from Glasgow on the Anchor liner Tuscania he was much concerned over the statements attributed to Hagen on his arrival here last week that the British were unsportsmanlike and he did not wish to go back to the other side.

"American golfers had a splendid time in England," said Harlow, "and received a fair and sporting deal in the championship matches. During the contest in the British open," he continued, "there was keen competition and intense interest on the part of the galleryites, but at no time was there any display that would cause Hagen to make such unfortunate remarks."

The champion's chief complaint was that the Scottish Contest Committee at Troon barred the use of the punched-faced iron clubs at the eleventh hour, which greatly handicapped the American professionals, who are accustomed to use them. Harlow did not discuss this issue, but said that he had nothing but praise for the way the British had welcomed the United States entrants.

CRUSINBERRY GOLF VICTOR.

Has Best Card in Newspaper Club Play at Belleclaire.

James Crusinberry led a field of thirty newspaper men yesterday in the semi-monthly invitation tourney held by the Newspaper Golf Club at Forest Hills Field Club, Belleclaire, N. J. Crusinberry turned in a card of 90, 28—62. Close behind him came A. Kennedy with a score of 86, 21—65. Sweet finished third with a card of 100—34—66 and Lester Rice was next with 98, 30—68. P. L. Campbell ranked next to Rice with a score of 96, 28—68.

MISS COLLETT TO PLAY.

Miss Sterling Also to Compete in Buffalo Tourney Today.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 25.—Foremost in the field entered for tomorrow's qualifying round of the Buffalo Country Club's women's invitation golf tournament are Glenna Collett of Rhode Island, national woman's champion; Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago champion; Alexa Stirling of New York, Louise Fordyce, Ohio champion, and Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia. Miss Collett and Miss Stirling are the favorites.

Four-Cornered Match to Be Feature at N. Y. Velodrome.

A four-cornered match race will feature the cycling program at the New York Velodrome tonight. Alfred Goullet, Willie Spencer, Pete Kempen and Orlando Piani will be the contestants. The race will be run in four heats.

JERSEY PHYSICIANS PASS JESS WILLARD

READY FOR FIRPO BATTLE

One-Time Titleholder Confident of Beating South American—Weighs Only 240 Pounds.

Jess Willard, the giant Kansan and former heavyweight champion of the world, yesterday passed his physical examination in Jersey City. At the end of a searching test that lasted more than forty-five minutes the three physicians engaged by the New Jersey boxing Commission declared him to be "free from any physical defects."

The last hitch in the match between Willard and Luis Angel Firpo, which will be staged at Boyle's Thirty Acres on Thursday evening, July 12, was removed when Willard successfully passed the severe physical test. It had been reported that Willard was lucky to pass his examination shortly before his match with Floyd Johnson and for that reason the New Jersey Boxing Commission was more than insistent that Willard submit to a thorough physical test.

The examining physicians were Dr. Theodore L. Lemmers, Dr. Howard R. Dukes and Dr. F. M. Child. Dr. Thomas Kilduff, one of the Boxing Inspectors of Hudson County, also witnessed the examination.

The report signed by the three physicians follows:

This is to certify that we, the undersigned, on this day made a physical examination of Jess Willard and find him free from any physical defects.

Eyes, ears, nose and throat, normal.
Lungs and heart, normal.
Heart pressure, systaltic, 121; diastaltic, 80.
Weight, 246 pounds.
Age, 38 years.
Extremities, normal.
Joints, normal.
Respiration, 18.
Temperature, 98.4.

Willard Returns to Yonkers.

Frank Flournoy, one of the men associated with Tex Rickard in the promotion of the Willard-Firpo bout, accompanied Willard to Jersey City. After the physical test Willard returned to his training quarters at the Columbus Sporting Club, Yonkers. He will continue to do his work there until the day before the bout.

Willard seemed more than pleased with the result of the examination. He said it would encourage him to go ahead with his training with renewed vigor, for he sees a real way now open to get a return match with Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight title.

"I will be in condition when I step into the ring with Firpo," Willard said yesterday. "The examination shows that I am not bluffing and that I am ready. I have never seen Firpo box, but I am not underrating him. I plan to put him away just as quickly as possible, and the sooner I do it the easier it will be for me to get into the ring with Dempsey. I have been told that Firpo is a rough fellow and a man who can punch. I have showed that I can take a punching and I likewise have showed that I can hit pretty well myself."

Frank Coultry, another official associated with Rickard, was well satisfied with Willard's showing before the New Jersey Commissioners. "We knew that Willard was in great shape," he said, "but when such a qualified body of men as the three physicians who examined him pass upon his physical fitness and say he is 100 per cent., then there is nothing left but to made ready for the battle. I never saw Willard in better shape. He has taken his training more seriously and his one ambition is to win back that title. He is confident he can do so and he often has said in the past two years that all he wants is just another meeting with Dempsey. If he can beat Firpo he surely will have his ambition realized."

Willard's Weight Surprises.

Another thing that surprised boxing followers yesterday was Willard's official weight of 246 pounds, which is two pounds under the figure he scaled for his bout with Floyd Johnson on May 12.

Firpo yesterday held a conference with Rickard which virtually will be his last appearance at Madison Square Garden until after the Willard bout. Firpo, who arrived here a few days ago from Mexico City, has been doing some light training in the Garden gymnasium, but yesterday training quarters were selected at Long Branch, the home of his trainer, Jimmy DeForrest. Today Firpo will leave for his Jersey camp and he will do his work at the Ocean View A. C. Jack McAuliffe 2d, of Detroit, who was knocked out by Firpo at the Mills Fund show, also will train at Long Branch. McAuliffe will box Floyd Johnson in the semi-final to Willard and Firpo.

Firpo yesterday announced his weight as 216 pounds, which is four pounds heavier than when he faced McAuliffe on May 12.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J. June 25.—K. O. Phil Kaplan of Jersey City and Eddie Shevlin of Boston fought a twelve-round draw at the Broad A. C. before a crowd of 5,000 fans here tonight.

Shevlin was superior at boxing but from a fighting standpoint Kaplan was better. Kaplan punched hard and he had Shevlin bleeding from the mouth during most of the bout.

Thirteen Million Francs Bet On the Six Grand Prix Races

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 25.—Thirteen million francs were bet on the six Grand Prix races at Longchamps yesterday. On the Grand Prix itself more than five millions changed hands. More than nine hundred thousand francs in admissions were paid, and a large part of the throngs which saw the races did not pay because it watched from without the enclosure.

DEMPSEY HAS DAY OF COMPLETE REST

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 25.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, enjoyed a day of complete rest today. The titleholder did not turn a hand at gymnasium work or training exercises. Out of bed early, Dempsey departed immediately after breakfast for the city and spent his day touring the town, meeting admirers, visiting friends and otherwise passing the time in idle relaxation from the tedious grind of preparing for his coming scrap with Tom Gibbons.

The champion remained in town until shortly before dinner, when he returned to the training camp a mile from the city limits. He was accompanied on his jaunt by the faithful "Jerry the Greek," his trainer.

Dempsey was a conspicuous figure in town. Wherever he went he was the object of many curious eyes. At the Rainbow Hotel and at the Park Hotel where he stopped to greet friends and had short conversations, little groups gathered standing off at respectable distances and surveying the laughing lone and sturdy figure of the champion with manifest admiration.

Dempsey paid no attention to the curious except to reply with a friendly nod of the head or a cheery "Hello, there," whenever one of the timorous stepped forward to pass the time of day with the man whose activities on July 4 will monopolize the attention of millions throughout the world.

Wray Out of Hospital.

Dempsey intended on the trip to town to visit the local hospital where Big Ben Wray was confined over the week-end with a broken jaw received last Friday when Dempsey crashed his mighty left fist against the jaw bone. The champion discovered upon his arrival, however, that Wray had been removed from the hospital.

The leading question from Dempsey's friends concerned his condition. Some wanted his view on the approaching bout in Shelby. To the first query Dempsey's reply was, "I feel fine, never better. I'm in great shape." And he looks and acts as if everything he said was gospel truth. To the second question Dempsey's response was a shrug of the shoulders. He becomes decidedly reticent when this topic is broached. But his shrug of the shoulders speaks eloquently of the confidence he feels of winning.

Dempsey, in response to a question on his plans for training tomorrow, said he would indulge only in light work. "I may box four or six rounds against the little fellows. Just light exercise. No heavy work," was the reply of the champion.

This program of light work, it is expected, will be followed until Dempsey concludes his training with a workout next Sunday afternoon. The two days before the day of the bout will be devoted solely to rest for the title holder.

Kearns on Mysterious Errands.

Jack Kearns, manager of the champion, was busy about town all day on mysterious errands, supposedly in connection with the bout, but when finally cornered late in the afternoon Kearns declared he had nothing new to announce. The delay in arranging for the disposition of the fight moving picture rights seems to have nettled Kearns considerably after the difficulty encountered in collecting Dempsey's second $100,000. He reiterated that he had not yet arranged for the film details and added that he had not heard of any arrangements having been made for the pictures.

Asked if he had received any definite information on the present financial condition of the bout, Kearns replied in the negative. This inquiry of the champion's manager was prompted by persistent reports here that difficulty is being experienced in raising the final $100,000 instalment of Dempsey's $300,000 guarantee, but Kearns professed ignorance of any positive information on the matter.

When asked if he planned to visit Shelby within the next few days Kearns replied rather indefinitely that he might take a run up there in a day or so to see how things are shaping up.

Dan Tracy, manager of the bout, left here last night for Shelby. Before departing Tracy declared he expected by tomorrow or Wednesday to be in a position to make a definite announcement of a satisfactory financial condition for the bout. Tracy has recalled all tickets which have been distributed throughout this country and Canada. After Wednesday it is understood tickets for the bout will be available only at fight headquarters in Shelby and at the Commercial Club in this city.

JEROME BOXES TONIGHT.

Will Meet Hausner in 12-Round Bout at Queensboro Stadium.

Frankie Jerome of the Bronx will appear in one of the twelve-round feature bouts at the Queensboro open air stadium in Long Island City tonight when he engages Jack Hausner of the east side. In the other twelve-rounder Jack Mars of Long Island City will take on Tommy Noble, the English featherweight.

Bobby Bolin and Bobby Doyle will clash in a six-round preliminary. Two four-round bouts also are scheduled.

JOCKEY DIES FROM FALL.

LITTLE CELT WINS AQUEDUCT FEATURE

Little Celt, S. McNaughton's chestnut son of Celt and Little Flower, yesterday afternoon proved the best in the field of four that started in the Africander Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth at the Aqueduct track. Little Celt, with 115 pounds on his back, took the lead from the start and Sande sent him along in front all the way. A length behind J. S. Cosden's Golden Rule chased the leader the entire distance and was still a length in the rear when Little Celt passed the winning post. H. C. Fisher's Hyperion was three lengths behind Golden Rule, taking the short end of the purse from R. L. Gerry's William Tell by two and a half lengths. The race was run in the good time of 1:45, being worth $1,340 to the owner of the winner. Little Celt was held at the almost prohibitive odds of 2 to 5. Golden Rule being second choice at 10 to 1.

For the first day of the week and one of the hottest of the season, there was a large crowd in attendance. It was not a day for favorites, however, as only three rewarded their backers during the afternoon.

One of the surprises was the victory of Mrs. E. M. Brown's Amor Patriae, a gelded son of Colin and Masque, in the Rockaway Selling Stakes over the six-furlong route. The public had evidently forgotten that Amor Patriae was one of the fastest two-year-olds out last season, as there was very little play on him. He opened at 10 to 1, went as high as 15 and closed at 12 to 1. A large share of the money went on W. C. Clancy's Hullabaloo at 4 to 5, while the Quincy Stable's Frank G. which beat Hullabaloo by a neck in the Hollis at Belmont Park, was second choice at 3 to 1.

M. Fator held Amor Patriae behind the early pace until they turned for home. In the stretch runs the gelding came with a great rush to beat Frank G. by a neck, Hullabaloo, which set the pace to the stretch, weakened in the last sixteenth and was a length and a half behind Frank G. at the finish. The race was run in 1:13 and was worth $2,375 to the owner of the winner.

RAIN MARS OPENING AT WIMBLEDON NETS

U. S. Tennis Stars Idle as World's Championship Play Starts in England.

SOUTH AMERICANS BEATEN

WIMBLEDON, England, June 26 (Associated Press).—The long-heralded opening of the world's tennis championships on the turf courts of Wimbledon today was pretty much of a washout. From the scheduled starting time at 2 o'clock this afternoon until somewhat after 3 o'clock there was a constant and chilly mist or drizzle, so that when finally the pale green tarpaulin was peeled off the darker green court within the great stadium there was only enough daylight left to last through one of the four feature matches which had been placed on the card for the opening day.

None of the candidates from the United States got his shoe soles damaged a foot, none changed from street attire into tennis garb. Most of the competitors sat shivering among the overcoated multitude in the stands.

Two South Americans Lose.

Two of the South Americans, however, both members of the Argentine Davis Cup team, got started. Also they got stopped. One of them, A. J. Villegas, was beaten by Commander J. M. Hillyard, Secretary of the Wimbledon Club, 6—2, 6—2, 7—5. The other Argentinian, W. Robison, fell down before S. M. Jacob, captain of the British India Davis Cup team, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4.

A. Godfree, England, won from Nicholas Mishu, the Rumanian star, on the closely cropped centre court by a score of 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3, 6—7. Mishu amused the crowds with some of his freaks and his customary antics, but, aside from his efforts and Godfree's good play in winning, it was a sad and soggy afternoon for the thousands of tennis fans, many of whom had been turning out to courts despite the bad weather in the hope of seeing Vincent Richards, William M. Johnston and Francis T. Hunter perform.

Most of the spectators remained to the end, nursing their hopes. A majority of them spent the time in the queues in front of the tea tents and other places where thirsty might be quenched. Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the American champion, spent the entire afternoon knitting on a sweater in the stand, while Miss Dorothea Lambert Chambers, the world champion, chilled hither and yon and back in the stand, chatting in two or three languages with new friends and old.

Whatever the weather may do, it cannot mask the people who are in charge of the tournament. Already they have decided the number of matches that are sufficient for any one day, and they are going to play it out on that line if it takes all day. Also the rules governing present championships can be characterized as Summery, for the more it rains the longer the tournament is going to last. The season tea tickets already good for Monday or Tuesday might happen making one day additional to the program as at present arranged.

Americans to Play Today.

Tomorrow's weather permitting, the trio of stars from the United States who have come to England in quest of the men's championships will play on the centre court. The real battle of the day is expected to be that between Richards and Jean Washer of Belgium. Washer is a hard-smashing, left-handed player. He holds the championship of Belgium and is considered one of the finest players the Continent has developed. He is large and sturdy. Johnson will have as an opponent E. Higgs, England, and Hunter will play E. Flaquer, the Spanish Davis Cup star.

Richards and Mrs. Mallory, who were paired for the mixed doubles, have scratched out of that event. They decided that each will have enough to do to play in the singles and in the men's and women's doubles.

MISS MACDONALD WINS IN CONN. TENNIS PLAY

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., June 25.—Miss Mayme MacDonald of Seattle, Pacific-Northwest champion, was the victor in a tennis upset this afternoon on the courts of the New Canaan Country Club when she defeated Mrs. Edward P. Raymond in the first round of the Connecticut tennis singles championship by 6—3, 2—6, 6—2. The match was hard fought throughout, but Miss MacDonald outsteadied her rival.

Nearly every game went to deuce, with both players remaining in the back court most of the time. Mrs. Raymond is a former state champion and in the absence of Miss Helen Gillieudeau, who is not defending her championship, had been seeded in the upper half with Miss Lillian Scharman of Brooklyn in the lower half.

The summaries:

First Round—Miss Mayme MacDonald, Seattle, defeated Mrs. Edward Raymond, Hartsdale, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2; Mrs. Edward Merr, Waterbury, defeated Miss Elizabeth Ferris, Stamford, 6—4, 6—2; Mrs. Louise Wilson, Rye, won from Miss Prescilla Baldwin, Mount Kisco, by default; Miss Corse Baker, Orange, N. J., won from Miss Diana Capes, West Side Tennis Club, by default; Mrs. J. T. Collingwood, Staten Island, defeated Miss Martha Wilsonn, New York, 6—2, 6—1.

Lower Half—Miss Lillian Scharman, Brooklyn, defeated Miss Gilda Townsend, New York, 6—2, 6—2; Mrs. Benjamin Briggs, West Hampton Lide, defeated Mrs. Percy Wilhoeme, New York, 6—4, 6—2; Mrs. Roberts, Ridgefield, defeated Loretta Coons, Tompkins Cove, N. Y., 7—5, 6—4; Mrs. John Bailey, West Side Tennis Club, defeated Mrs. F. L. Baldwin, 7—5, 6—4; Mrs. John Bailey, West Side Tennis Club, defeated Mrs. F. L. Baldwin, New Canaan, 6—3, 6—2; Miss Mary Case, Norfolk, defeated Miss Dorothy Strand, New York, 6—0, 6—4; Miss Amy Welcott Litchfield, defeated Mrs. H. T. Eaton, New Canaan, 6—3, 6—2.

HELEN WILLS COMING EAST.

To Leave California July 2 to Play in Women's Tennis Events.

She is planning to participate in the women's tournaments at Westchester, Seabright and Nassau and the women's national championship at Forest Hills.

ORANGE COUNTY FOUR WINS

The Orange County polo four won a close and exciting victory in the first match with the Flamingos for the Third Waterbury Challenge Cup competition for which started at the Meadow Brook Club field, Westbury, L. I., yesterday. The victory was by the scant margin of one goal, the final count being 8 to 7.

National Tennis Association To Oversee College Tourneys

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Jurisdiction over national intercollegiate tennis tournaments with the exception of the right to accept or reject entries, in future will be placed in the hands of the National Lawn Tennis Association. A resolution providing for this transfer of authority was adopted tonight at the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Association. The right to accept or reject entries was retained by the college body.

Another resolution adopted provides that in future tournaments only eight players shall be seeded. Officers were elected as follows: President, F. T. Anderson, Columbia; Vice President, Lewis N. White, University of Texas; Secretary, E. W. Wilson, University of Chicago, and Treasurer, F. T. Osgood, Dartmouth.

VOSHELL IS VICTOR OVER DR. ROSENBAUM

Enters Semi-Finals in Queensboro Title Tennis—Kynaston Advances.

S. Howard Voshell won his fifth round match in the third annual lawn tennis tournament of the Kew Gardens Country Club, Kew Gardens, L. I., for the Queensborough championship yesterday and was the first competitor to reach the semi-final bracket. His success came at the expense of Earle C. Backe in the fourth round and Dr. William Rosenbaum in the fifth, both of which matches Voshell captured in straight sets. Percy Kynaston, the defending titleholder, continued to advance, eliminating E. W. Feibleman in the fourth round.

Neither of these two players were forced to extend themselves in order to gain headway yesterday. Voshell easily won his fourth round match against Backe at 6—1, 6—1, and had little more trouble in disposing of Dr. Rosenbaum at 6—1, 6—4. His cross court volleying kept each of his opponents scurrying to make their gets which when accomplished left them out of position. Kynaston won his match from Feibleman at 6—4, 6—1. Feibleman gave the champion slight opposition in the first match, but Kynaston was playing well within himself, extending his strokes to their full power only on rare occasions.

The only match which was carried to three sets for a decision yesterday was the fourth round meeting between Hugh Oakley and Henry C. Tremaine which the former finally won after dropping the first set at 9—7 by taking the final two sets at 6—3, 9—7. The last set was probably the fastest and most closely contested of the day as both players were working for the advantage at the net. Oakley's work at close quarters told in the end when he took the two final games.

The play in the singles will continue tomorrow with the semi-finals being scheduled to take place on Thursday. Today the doubles matches will start with Zenso Shimisu and S. Howard Voshell the leading pair entered. Voshell is still limping from the injury he received in the Metropolitan championship tournament but is maintaining his winning ways by his excellent placements and powerful service.

The summaries:

Fourth Round—S. Howard Voshell defeated Earle C. Backe, 6—1, 6—1; Hugh Oakley defeated Henry C. Tremaine, 6—9, 6—3, 9—7; Leonard Knox defeated Charles H. Wood Jr., 6—4, 6—4; Percy Kynaston defeated E. W. Feibleman, 6—4, 6—1; W. M. Fischer defeated S. Onda, 7—5, 6—3; Douglas Major defeated B. Aitsburry, 6—1, 6—1.

ORSER AND PHILLIPS VICTORS AT TENNIS

Special to The New York Times.

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 25.—Two New York players reached the semi-final round of the national interscholastic lawn tennis championship begun here today in conjunction with the intercollegiate title play at the Merion Cricket Club. Ten entrants started in the tournament this morning, two of them from California.

The New York survivors are Horace Orser of Stuyvesant High School and E. R. Phillips of Staten Island Academy. John F. Whitbeck, who attends Loomis School in Windsor, Conn., is an occupant of the semi-final bracket with Charles Watson of Andover. Tomorrow Orser will meet Whitbeck and Watson will face Phillips.

Orser and Watson were compelled to go through two rounds to gain their semi-final bracket, the other two drawing byes in the first round. The Stuyvesant High School youth first disposed of Milton Hofkin of Philadelphia at 6—1, 6—3, after which he put out Alan Herrington of Los Angeles at 6—1, 6—4. Watson advanced at the expense of Harold Reese Jr. of Concord, N. H., at 6—0, 6—2, and Conrad Bryant of Los Angeles at 7—5, 6—3, 6—4.

The summaries:

First Round—Horace Orser, Stuyvesant High School, New York, defeated Milton Hofkin, Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—3; Charles Watson, Andover, defeated Harold Reese Jr., Concord, N. H., 6—0, 6—1.

Second Round—John F. Whitbeck, Loomis School, Windsor, defeated Carl Schuster, Horace Mann High School, New York, 6—4, 6—2; Orser defeated Alan Herrington, Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—4; Watson defeated Conrad Bryant, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—3.

Third Round—E. R. Phillips, Staten Island Academy, New York, defeated Joseph Alhausen, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—0, 7—5.

MUNICIPAL NET PLAY TO START NEXT WEEK

Elimination Tourneys to Be Held in All Boroughs—Finals in Central Park.

The Greater New York Municipal Tennis Championship tournament will get under way next week, according to the plans announced last night by Major A. P. Simmonds, Chairman of the Public Parks Tennis Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the U. S. L. T. A. A borough park championship tournament will be held in each of the five boroughs and is scheduled to start about July 1, according to the plans. The winners in both the singles and doubles competition will meet in each of the boroughs in elimination tourneys, and the finals will be staged on the Central Park courts on July 29.

The winners in the finals of the singles and doubles on the Central Park courts, which is equivalent to the Greater City championship, will be sent to St. Louis to represent Greater New York in the National Municipal championships which will begin at Forest Park on August 6. The national tournament is under the auspices of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Much interest has been created in the coming tournament. More than three hundred entries have been received from the Manhattan district alone, it is stated. It is the plan to lose no time in running off the matches. Play will start early each day and continue until sundown, it is believed, as this plan will be necessary to dispose of the numerous contestants.

ONLY 16 SURVIVE IN COLLEGE TENNIS

COLUMBIA MEN PLAY WELL

Special to The New York Times.

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 25.—The tournament for the annual intercollegiate lawn tennis championship began this morning on the courts of the Merion Cricket Club, with the strongest entry, even mustered from the colleges and universities of the country, in addition to the seven members of the visiting Oxford-Cambridge University combination. By nightfall, after two full rounds of play had been completed under the direction of Dr. Philip B. Hawk and Colonel John D. Kurtz, there were but two Britishers numbered among the sixteen survivors of the original field of 64, and many of the stars in national intercollegiate ranks had fallen by the wayside.

E. F. Hegburn and W. S. Watt of Oxford were the only two of the English collegians to reach the third round. M. D. Horne of Cambridge fell before the brilliant tennis of Philip Neer of Stanford at 6—3, 6—4; Captain J. N. Lowry of Cambridge was put out by John E. Howard of Princeton at 7—5, 7—5; Frank Anderson of Columbia eliminated J. J. Lazard of Oxford at 6—3, 6—4; G. Ramaswami of Cambridge fell before Richard Lewis of Princeton at 6—4, 7—5, and A. N. Wilder of Cambridge was put out by David Conrad of California at 7—5, 6—1.

Only One Columbian Beaten.

The representatives of Columbia University made an exceptionally fine showing, only one man of the four entered failing to survive the two rounds of play. This was Dick Marshall, who lost to W. W. Ingraham of Harvard in the first round at 6—2, 6—2. Gerald Emerson, captain of the Blue and White, defeated Lewis N. White of Texas at 6—4, 6—4, and had little more trouble in disposing of Dr. Rosenbaum at 6—1, 6—4. His cross court volleying kept each of his opponents scurrying to make their gets which when accomplished left them out of position. Kynaston won his match from Feibleman at 6—4, 6—1. Feibleman gave the champion slight opposition in the first match, but Kynaston was playing well within himself, extending his strokes to their full power only on rare occasions.

The only match which was carried to three sets for a decision yesterday was the fourth round meeting between Hugh Oakley and Henry C. CHANTILLY, France, June 25 (Associated Press).—Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago scored an easy victory over Miss Mae Farlane of England, 9 up and 7 to play, on the first day of the women's international golf championship here today. She will meet Mlle. Gaveau, for several years champion of France, in the second round tomorrow. The entries of Mrs. A. B. Graves and Miss Fairbanks, American residents of France, were scratched. Mrs. Hammer and Mrs. Waddell, the other Americans, drew byes.

MET. JUNIOR GOLF DRAW ANNOUNCED

Pairings and Times Named for Qualifying Round to Start on Thursday.

The pairings and starting times of entrants in the metropolitan junior championship at the Garden City Golf Club beginning Thursday were announced yesterday by Charles W. O'Connor, Secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association.

At the same time it was announced that all of Thursday will be devoted to the qualifying round, the match play not starting until Friday. This change was made because of the big field. The final will be played Saturday at eighteen holes. Another change in the program was to move the driving contest, originally scheduled for Friday afternoon, to the forenoon after the finish of the qualifying round.

Thirty-four pairs will start in the qualifying round Thursday, beginning at 7 A. M. and continuing at five-minute intervals until 11:50.

CHICAGO GOLF TEAM WINS HARDING TROPHY

New York Third in Intercity Team Match—Public Links Play Opens Today.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The fourman team from Chicago with an aggregate score of 311 gained possession of the Warren G. Harding Trophy for a year by winning the intercity golf match staged today on the East Potomac Park course here as a preliminary to the national public parks tournament which opens tomorrow.

St. Louis with 317 finished second. Other teams, with their scores, ranked as follows: New York, 320; Boston, 321; Pittsburgh, 332; Milwaukee, 336; Buffalo, 337; Philadelphia, 339; Newark, N. J., 341; Washington, 348; Toledo, 351; Dayton and Bridgeport, Conn., 353 each; Detroit, 359; Worcester, Mass., 360; Toronto, 366; Hartford, Conn., 391.

The cup won by the Chicago team was donated to the United States Golf Association by President Harding as a permanent trophy to be awarded each year to the winner of the intercity match held on the eve of the national public links tournament.

The tournament will get under way tomorrow with 131 entries. A first day qualifying round of thirty-six holes will trim the entrants to thirty-two, who will begin match play Wednesday.

Use of steel shaft clubs during the tournament was barred under a decision announced today by the United States Golf Association officials in charge of the competition here.

THREE GOLFERS IN TIE.

Hold Qualifying Cards of 75 in Trans-Mississippi Play.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 25.—Seven golfers only were able to break an 80 today in the first half of the qualifying round of the Twenty-third Annual Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament at the Minikahda club course here. Three of them turned in cards of 76 and the others made 78s.

James Manion and R. E. Bockemkamp of St. Louis and J. A. Kennedy of Tulsa, Okla., State champion, tied with the low score. Eddie Held, National Public Course champion and Donald Anderson, both of St. Louis; J. W. Radick of Omaha and R. G. Hapgood of Minneapolis were tied with 79.

The round was played over a course soaked by two days of rain.

FATHER-SON GOLF FINISHES IN A TIE

Chapmans and Banckers Divide Low Net Honors in Play at Sleepy Hollow.

KNAPPS SCORE LOW GROSS

Former Champions Have Card of 86, Coming In in Par—Sweetsers Beat McMahons.

Special to The New York Times.

SCARSBORO, N. Y., June 25.—A pair of Connecticut players and a pair from New Rochelle finished in a tie for chief honors in the eighth annual father and son golf association tournament over the Sleepy Hollow Country Club links today, J. D. Chapman and his son, J. D. Jr., of Greenwich and W. F. and W. W. Bancker of Wykagyl each finishing with net scores of 68. The last-named pair had a 17 handicap, while Chapman and his boy, who is not yet 19 years old, had a stroke more. The credit for the best gross score went to E. S. Knapp and E. S. Jr., of Westbrook, who had a 78. Their handicap was 2. Knapp and his son, who won a year ago, went at a 43 clip for the first nine, but after that never made a mistake, finishing the inward journey in 36.

Their card read as follows:

Out .....5 5 4 5 4 5 4 5 4—41
In .....4 5 3 5 4 5 4 5 4—37—78

UNFAIR TO MR. HARDING.

"Verify your references" is a good rule, and the League of Nations Non-Partisan Association, with some newspapers, would have done well to follow it in their comments on the President's speech at St. Louis. They indignantly charge him with having said: "The League of Nations is as dead as slavery." Then they proceed to demonstrate that the League is very much alive, or at least able to say with the Irishman that if it is dead it is not conscious of it. But Mr. HARDING did not, in fact, say what is alleged. His exact words were: "The issues of the League of Nations is as dead as slavery." He obviously referred, as the context shows, to the possibility of such an issue in American politics. His contention was that it could not be brought up again "in the face of the overwhelming verdict of 1920." He may be wrong about this, but those also are wrong who force upon his language a meaning that it did not have.

On the whole subject it is easy to corner the President with quotations from his speeches in 1920, as also with the assurances that were given in his name by ardent supporters of his candidacy. But that has nothing to do with the proper understanding of what he is now driving at. He has his heart set on our getting into the World Court, by some means or other. He is willing to let the Senate plaster the Protocol all over with reservations. This is his great concession to the Republican objectors, whom he is so anxious to keep in harmony with the party. But after yielding almost everything to them in this way, he still knows that they, or some of them, have an invincible repugnance to any instrumentality connected however remotely with the League of Nations. So he seeks to quiet their fears by asserting that there is no chance whatever of our being got into the League through the door of the World Court. That was his sole intent in asserting that the issue of the League is in this country as dead as slavery.

Even from the point of view of his own purpose, the phrase was unfortunate. But this is no reason why what he said should be misinterpreted. It is entirely possible to hold that the President's argument was unconvincing, but that furnishes no excuse for failing to perceive exactly what his argument was.

THE COUNTRY FOR CITY CHILDREN.

Sweltering days and stifling nights plead of themselves the special need of encouraging in every possible way those organizations which make it possible for children to get out of the city for a week or two. In days such as we have had the discomfort and actual suffering of children penned up in crowded tenements is acute. Cramped quarters, bad air and no place to play but the overcrowded streets make the hardships of Summer even worse than those of Winter. No swimming, except for an occasional surreptitious dip in a forbidden fountain, or a brave plunge into the filthy waters of the Hudson or East River; no shade from anything but buildings and the rare remnants of a scant tree; no breezes that are not poisoned with fumes or stenches—this is the lot of the city's children in Summer.

It is only natural that under present conditions the various charitable associations are besieged with appeals to send children to Summer camps. Fortunately, many organizations have the facilities to care for them, but they are in need of funds to meet the hot weather emergencies. Space does not permit the naming of them all. The Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor expects to be able to care for 7,000 children and their mothers at its camps on Staten Island, and in New Jersey and New York. The Henry Street Settlement has two camps for boys and girls; the Gramercy Boys' Club will take several hundred boys to the Ramapo Mountains; so also the Sheltering Arms, the Music School Settlement, the Woman's Hospital and the Hudson Guild will take their quotas. The Boys' Club at Avenue A will also receive many youngsters at its Long Island camp. At these different places the children will have a breath of country life and a chance to store up a little extra vitality. For many of them this is their first sight of the country; and for all it is a grand and glorious vacation. The joys of grubbing in the clean dirt, of going barefoot in the grass instead of on scorching pavements, of having real water to play in, are only counterbalanced by the excitement of making the acquaintance of a real cow, and getting to know the pigs, and learning that there are more wonders in the world than are to be found within the walls of a city street or back yard.

These organizations need money. Many have endowments, but it is expensive to transport and to care for the fortunate youngsters who can get away. One dollar will provide for a child and its mother for one day at most of these institutions. All of them will be only too grateful for contributions of any size at the present time.

THE ANTHRACITE PROBLEM.

In the anthracite coal regions it is predicted that the mine workers will at Scranton today ask for an increase of from 10 to 20 per cent. in wages. Their present contract, which expires on Aug. 31, is the same working agreement of the period just after the war which the miners struck against last Summer but decided to accept again after five months of idleness. Their loss in wages was enormous, consumers paid heavily in increased prices for anthracite, and it was only by using bituminous and other substitutes that householders endured the rigors of a severe Winter. The privations of the fuel shortage in 1922-23 caused a great deal of sickness as well as discomfort. To another siege of the kind it was felt that the country should not be exposed. President HARDING appointed a commission to study the anthracite and bituminous industries. A reorganization plan is expected from the commission before long.

At the Scranton conference the mine workers will undoubtedly record their dissatisfaction with the present working agreement. They will probably renew most of the demands of the Shamokin convention in January, 1922. Among them were a 20 per cent. increase of wages, an eight-hour day and full recognition of the union. The conference will be an overture to negotiation with the operators, whose side of the case will be presented to the public by the National Coal Association. Recently it voted half a million dollars to be spent upon an educational campaign.

What the consumers would like to know is whether they will have to pay higher prices for coal if wages are advanced. Public opinion calls for a constant supply of coal at a reasonable price, a fair return to capital and no more, and adequate wages for the miners. The latter say that their compensation spread over the year is not in excess of $1,500; moreover, they say that the hazard involved in their occupation entitles them to something in addition to a "living wage." They contend that the profits of the operating and transportation companies are large enough to provide the increase they believe to be their due. Here the interest of the consumers comes in. They wonder why the profits of the coal and transportation companies should not in part be applied to the scaling down of cost to them. The rejoinder of the companies would be that if the price of coal is cut others interested with them in the industry should share it, the mine managers, the wholesalers and retailers.

According to an estimate furnished the Coal Commission by the mine workers, a ton of coal (including steam sizes as well as domestic) cost $5.20 at the mine during the Winter of 1922-23. The operators added for selling expense and profit $1.61, and the railroads charged $2.95 for transportation to New York City. The cost per ton to the wholesalers was $9.76, while the charge of the wholesalers and retailers "together" was $3.79. So that the consumer paid $13.55. He, noting that the highest figures in the computation were for the railroads and the dealers, would naturally conclude that they should contribute to a scaling down in price to the ultimate buyer. This price of $13.55 to him was an averaging of prices of all varieties of coal. Last Winter a gross ton of furnace (egg, stove and chestnut) often cost him $16.37.

When the report of the Coal Commission is made it will doubtless cover every interest which profits by the industry. The cost of a ton of coal from the mine to the consumer should be given in figures that cannot be challenged. The high mining costs of the independent companies as compared with those of the railroad coal companies should be accounted for. The "fair return" of operating, mining, transportation and distribution should be indicated. And a plan of reorganization to stabilize the industry ought to be presented.

PHRASES THAT WIN ELECTIONS.

If words are sometimes half battles, phrases are occasionally whole victories. This is especially true in politics. He who can frame a popular "ory" for a party need not care what its principles are. And if a happy or lucky expression often wins votes in shoals, an indiscreet saying by a public man may insure the success of his opponents.

Precisely this is what happened last year in the general election in England, according to the present Prime Minister. Speaking at Oxford a couple of weeks ago, Mr. STANLEY BALDWIN declared that the Conservatives won their majority in Parliament owing to a phrase used by Mr. LLOYD GEORGE. It was of six words only. While the millions of unattached voters were wondering for whom they should vote, they opened their newspapers one morning and read that Mr. LLOYD GEORGE described BONAR LAW as "honest to the verge of simplicity." Thereupon the British people said, to quote Mr. BALDWIN'S old-fashioned language, "By Gos, that's what we've been looking for."

It may be doubted if the utterance by Mr. LLOYD GEORGE actually had so great an effect as that attributed to it by the Prime Minister. When forced to quit office, nothing that Mr. GEORGE could say in the campaign greatly mattered. His fortunes had ebbed so rapidly that his most fiery efforts could not persuade the public that he was anything but an extinct volcano. His phrase about BONAR LAW may have won a few votes for that leader, but could hardly have been a decisive factor in the contest. The main thing that the people wanted was a change of Government, and they were helped to it by Mr. LLOYD GEORGE to this extent at least, that he put up a sort of signboard notifying people that those who wanted honesty and simplicity would be well advised not to vote for him.

THE PRESIDENT ON ENFORCEMENT.

It seems difficult to say anything new about the enforcement of the Volstead act, but Mr. HARDING succeeded yesterday in saying some things that are new to most of us. The glorious old maxim, "Let Uncle Sam do it," tends to prevail even in States with the longest orthodox Dry record:

> Communities in which the policy was frankly accepted as productive of highly beneficial results, and in which there was no widespread protest so long as it was merely a State concern, report that, since the Federal Government became in part responsible, there has been a growing laxity on the part of State authorities about enforcing the law.

This shows that even States sound in prohibition doctrine and practice are not inclined to work hard the concurrent power which they have embodied in statutes. Why should they put their hands into their own pockets when the big, fat Federal cow will stand so docilely for milking? Besides, great, wicked Wet States will have to pay the larger share of the costs of Federal prohibition, as they do of everything else. This admission of weakness on the part of States that have been so furious in denouncing New York's "nullification" of the Volstead law ought to be pondered by moderate prohibitionists.

The State of New York refused to exercise the concurrent power. The President ingeniously calls this refusal the "nullification" by a State of its own authority. It is thus a negation of State rights not to help the Federal Government in doing within the State what the State doesn't want done. Leaving the region of political and constitutional casuistry, we must all recognise, with the President, "the unalterable obligation of law enforcement," and most of us will probably agree with him that the Eighteenth Amendment will never be repealed. He foresees changes in details of prohibition enforcement "rather than modification of the general policy."

Yet, without some modification, is the Volstead act likely, in some great States at least, to be supported by public opinion? This language might have come from an anti-prohibitionist:

> Many citizens not teetotalers in their habits lawfully acquired stores of private stocks, pending the ratification of the amendment and the enactment of the regulatory law. Many others have had no scruples in seeking supplies from those who vend in defiance of the law. The latter practice is rather too costly to be indulged by the masses, so there are literally American millions who resent the lawful possession of the few, the lawless practices of a few more, and rebel against the denial to the vast majority. Universal prohibition in the United States would occasion far less discontent than partial prohibition and partial indulgence.

Well, that's what we've got; and what the resentful millions resent is the definition of intoxicating liquors in the Volstead act. So long as the act stands it should be enforced to the utmost possible extent; but so long as both parties, not from conviction but from political prudence, a judgment or misjudgment of the prevailing popular sentiment, stand against the introduction of common sense into the national prohibition law, so long will the breaking of that act continue to be regarded by millions of intelligent and otherwise law-abiding men and women as a joke, a bit of cleverness, a sort of superiority. That is a regrettable frame of mind. We hope it will pass; but wise legislators should take note of it thoughtfully.

THE BULGARIAN OUTLET.

By way of livening up the approaching end of the Lausanne conference—if indeed this eternal institution is approaching its end—Foreign Minister KALLOFF of Bulgaria has sent a note to the delegates suggesting that they carry out that provision of the Treaty of Neuilly which promised Bulgaria an outlet to the Aegean. Mr. KALLOFF says that an outlet through the territory of a foreign State is "illusory." Well, it was not stipulated in the treaty that Bulgaria must have a corridor to a port under her own sovereignty. It was understood that Bulgarian commerce was to find a way out via the railroad that goes from the Bulgarian frontier past Adrianople to Dedeagatch. Dedeagatch is held by the Greeks and part of the railroad has been ceded to the Turks. As things go in the Near East, this is a pretty poor outlet.

A better one would be through a railroad built down to Kavalla, but animosities between Greeks and Bulgars have not yet permitted that. Bulgaria rightly demands a privilege promised in the treaty. Yet if the Allies give this new Government of dubious antecedents what they denied to STAMBULISKY, the pacifist, they will be repeating the error that has so bedeviled the exterior and interior political relations of Hungary. Mistakes have been made all along the line; the least disadvantageous way of repairing them now would be the exertion of pressure on Greece—and on Turkey, if that were possible—to insure that the outlet to Dedeagatch through Greek and Turkish territory shall not be illusory.

A GOOD SPORT.

English cynics who have come to believe that international sporting contests only embitter hands across the sea are too quick despairers. Mr. WALTER HAGEN now deposes that his recent remarks have been "misinterpreted." He did not mean that he would never compete in England again. He only meant he would not compete next year, the expense of annual visits being too great. Every second year will see, so to speak, his wig upon the green.

Meantime, his charges of bad sportsmanship on the part of the English golf authorities have been largely explained away. By immemorial custom the Championship Committee meets once a year, and so could not have been expected to render an earlier decision in that matter of fancy-faced clubs. "Scored," "ribbed" and "corrugated" clubs have long been officially barred, and there could have been no rational hope that an effort to evade in another way the spirit of that ruling would be countenanced. That a certain element in the "gallery" vocally rejoiced at the misfortunes of the Americans at critical moments is admitted. But the explanation is wholly credible. Of late years international contests, especially professional contests, have attracted a class of spectators unfamiliar with, or at least unpracticed in, sportsmanlike etiquette. A nation that rejoices in baseball can scarcely profess to have unwrung withers. At least there was no hurling of pop bottles.

There is even a positive advantage in this spilling of ill nature. The peccant humors become oxygenated. Of a certain "Vice" of Oxford—which is to say, Vice Chancellor—it was explained that he was so called because he served as an example for others in the practice of virtue. The high traditions of sportsmanship are not easily assimilated in the crude human system, and how can the process be better aided than by bringing any breach of them before the bar of public opinion? There was once a young American athlete so deeply perturbed by the fraud and trickery of our own intercollegiate contests that he went to an English university and became a member of one of its teams in order to proclaim with authority the superiority of English sportsmanship. But he found Englishmen slack and indifferent—content, in athletics as elsewhere, to muddle through. On an intimate view of Henley, he found the English sullenly resentful of an American eight, some of whom were "of the artisan class," so long as they seemed likely to win—adopting the gracious mien of host only when the soggy atmosphere of the Thames "bottom" had sapped the visitors' energies. As against this—well; hypocrisy—was there not something to be said for frankly outspoken partisanship?

On the day of Mr. HAGEN'S corrected statement Mrs. HARDING met in the Denver army hospital a pale-faced soldier who had lost both legs. He assured her that he was "all right and feeling fine." Said his wife, who sat beside him: "JACK tells all the visitors that; but then, he was always a good sport." Among other things, sportsmanship is worth while as affording a familiar and recognizable name for the sort of fellow JACK is.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Skill Is Gained in Sleep.

Wise folk will refrain from expressing either amusement or incredulity when they read about the discovery at the Government air station near Pensacola that students in the radio school conducted there are gaining speed otherwise unattainable in the receiving of code radio from rapidly transmitted messages heard by them through instruments strapped to their ears when they go to bed. Why the expectation of getting the message does not keep them awake is a little mysterious, but go to sleep they do before taking these strange lessons, and discoveries made in the last twenty years in the domain of the unconscious or subconscious are sufficient to account for the possibility of teaching in this way. After all, whether it can be done or not is a matter of fact, to be determined by experience.

According to the officials at the station, the thing has been done and now has become a routine procedure.

The subconscious part of the brain possesses many remarkable abilities, some of which long have been known, though unrecognized for what they are, while others are coming to light almost daily as the investigations of the psychologists go on. Not a few familiar activities are performed really well only after we have ceased to do them by conscious effort. The skilled typist leaves the finding of the keys entirely, as it seems, to her fingers, and the piano player does the same thing. The driver of a motor car who has to think what to do when an emergency arises is a dangerous person to ride with; to be safe he must do the right thing "automatically," it used to be said, but now his efficiency is ascribed to the training which his subconscious has received.

As the subconscious never sleeps and never forgets, the teaching it receives has lasting effects, and there is no reason why such teaching should not be direct and intentional rather than indirect and unintentional, or at least unrealised, as it has been in the past.

"Subconscious" Replaces "Automatic."

If radio operators can attain by practice in receiving code messages while asleep a skill which is beyond their reach when all their practicing is done while awake, it seems more than probable that instruction for other purposes can be given in the same way. Thence the humorists presumably will imagine and describe schools and colleges where both teachers and pupils do all their mental labor after they have gone to bed and put the lights out. The fact, however, that a theory can be reduced to an absurdity by pushing it to its logical extremity does not prove the theory unsound when its application is kept within reasonable bounds.

Anybody who, under expert guidance, makes a list of the number of tasks he daily entrusts with perfect confidence to his subconscious powers will be surprised at their number. They begin with the beating of the heart and the drawing of the breath and they go on to decision as to which hand shall be extended for shaking when we meet a friend, and into which pocket we shall reach to get a knife or a pencil.

The difference between ability and inability to swim is a mystery to the conscious mind, for no swimmer can tell what he does after he learns that it is different from what he did before the art was gained. But the subconscious knows, and makes an easy job of what a little before was an impossibility.

Specifics for Two More Maladies.

Curative medicine seems just now to be having its triumphs and to be getting some of the glory that for some time past has been monopolized by the medicine that prevents. Hardly has the diabetic who had been hopeless come to realize that "insulin" can save his life and restore his health, when from reputable and trustworthy sources comes the news that specific remedies in the shape of new serums have been found for two terrible maladies for which, hitherto, only quacks have promised real and speedy restoration.

Both of these announcements appeared in the Sunday Times, one relating to rheumatism coming from the New York University Medical School, where more than 5,000 cases of that many-phased disease have been treated with more or less success in 80 per cent. of them, while the London Medical Research Council made a highly commendatory report on Professor DOCHEZ'S "antigen," or vaccine, for sufferers from tuberculosis. In both instances the claims are cautiously expressed, in evident dread of arousing exaggerated expectations, but the facts presented are encouraging.

It is to be noted that animal experimentation, which certain mad folk are so fond of calling "vivisection," was utilized in attaining these medical successes, as so many others that without it their attainment would have been quite impossible. That fact, of course, the "antis" will ignore or mendaciously deny.

A Strike Sure to Succeed.

Baltimore's housewives, having decided that the bakers are charging too much for bread, now that the price of flour has come down, have declared a buyers' strike. Two days a week, they declare, they and their families will go without bread, and should this not prove effective in bringing the bakers to terms, the plan is to see what can be effected by three whole weeks without a single purchase.

This plan will work, almost without question, and it is the right way, or at any rate a right way, of exerting pressure.

Incidentally, the housewives say, it will spread the now somewhat neglected art of making bread at home, and that, too, is commendable, when practicable, for the best of home-made bread certainly is better than the best of baker's bread. On the other hand, far from all home-made bread is good, and probably the baker's bread averages considerably above it.

In both its phases the Baltimore "strike" is interesting. The lower price of flour, however, does not involve, necessarily, a lower price for bread. Labor counts as well as flour in fixing the price of bread, and the bakers, like everybody else, are paying far higher wages than they did in other days.

Exchange of News.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The undersigned (Englishmen) have read with interest the criticism of the British press by F. E. G. Phelps in your issue of May 27. Mr. Phelps's point is very well taken. We have often remarked on the paucity of American news in the English papers, while, on the other hand, many of the American newspapers—especially THE NEW YORK TIMES—not only print much news from the other side, but comment on most of the important happenings in England in excellent leading articles.

HARDING'S COURT PLAN.

Self-Perpetuation Regarded as Dangerous and Undemocratic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of this morning you give prominence to the following suggestion of President Harding in his St. Louis address relative to the World Court:

> . . . why not proceed in the belief that it (the Court) be made self-perpetuating?" After which the President presented two ways whereby this might be accomplished.

Could any scheme be more antagonistic to American institutions? Could any scheme be more undemocratic?

Imagine a self-perpetuating court anywhere! How long would it be before it became hereditary? What power might it not assume?

Let us have appointed Judges, elected Judges or even the recall of Judges, but let us never permit their self-perpetuation!

CYRIL F. DOS PASSOS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot refrain from giving expression to an admiration I have for our President after reading the short speeches he made to the people who came out yesterday to see him—and his words were intended not alone for those people but for the whole nation. In true democratic fashion he made his appeal and called for the best that is in the country's citizenry.

Throughout all his talks the thought was the same—we must quit rocking the boat; check the enemies of our Government and preserve the Republic; also respect the law. Then true happiness will follow.

Our sympathies are with Mr. Harding in the great problems he has had to face, and I believe we shall love him more as he honestly tries to serve his countrymen.

AMHERST DIVISION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Henry A. Stimson presents in your columns today a beautiful picture of the idyllic relations of trustees, faculty and president of a college, each group playing in its own corner with occasional halts to pass the loving cup around. In most colleges this soporific peacefulness is no doubt the rule. The exception is when a college president unwisely for his own freedom and continuance in office attempts to introduce a modern and vigorous educational program backed only by the courage of his convictions and the approval of those who really know what he is doing. "Law and usage" unfortunately do not contemplate anything of this sort. The absence of jealousy and rivalry bear testimony not so much to the devotion of the president to his educational duties as to his devotion to his position and the continued possession of it.

It may be true that the increasing stream of young life that flows into our colleges is sufficient proof of the value of our ordinary collegiate relationships and divisions. May it not also be true that the enthusiasm of a student body which to a man supported President Meiklejohn on account of his educational ideals, and the devotion of undergraduates that led thirteen to refuse diplomas and that will lead many others to seek these ideals elsewhere during the remainder of their college years, betoken a much higher value in education than that of perfect harmony in pursuing well trodden paths?

Amherst men of the last seven or eight years may at least rejoice that their college not only "shared in the evolution of the world about them," (which every college cannot help but do), but also tried to guide and lead that evolution.

Edison's Opinion of Einstein.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Edison says of his son, who has just returned from college: "If he carries his mathematics in the 'Einsteinian' direction, he will be useless." What does he really mean?

Years ago, 1832, Michael Faraday, discovered the momentous laws of induction between currents and between currents and magnets. He was once asked: "What is the use of this discovery?" He replied: "What is the use of a child—it grows to be a man." Faraday's child has grown to be a man and is now the basis of all modern applications of electricity, including Edison's, and leading directly to the discovery of the propagation of electrical vibrations, which is the foundation of all the miraculous inventions of the present day, the radio being the most popularly known.

The above is only one example. Newton's calculus was considered just as useless, and so on; there are hundreds of cases. As a matter of fact, they are of no use as found. It is a well-founded historical generalisation that the last thing to be discovered in any science is what the science is really about. Men go on groping for centuries, guided merely by a dim instinct and a puzzled curiosity, toiling on and on in the darkness of ignorance, gathering a fact here and one there, piling them up ever higher. Then the subject becomes ripe for discovery, a vague understanding of a hidden truth forms upon some one and suddenly bursts forth as an explosion, and we call the finder a genius.

There is also some truth in the definition which Lord Rosebery gives in one of his novels. Of a practical man, he defines him "a man who practices the errors of his forefathers." CLIFFORD F. KAISER.

The Right to Chew Gum.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There are many foreigners who regard gum chewing as a face-deforming and unseemly practice. If the British Parliament had passed a law forbidding the manufacture, sale and transportation of chewing gum within the British Isles and then had undertaken to enforce this law against Americans on American ships within the British three-mile limit, what would the attitude of the American people be? Would we calmly acquiesce when British officials came on board American ships, breaking seals and seized chewing gum? We would not.

It would mean war with England over the fundamental right of free-born American citizens to chew and transport gum on American ships anywhere. And we may be quite sure that if this question had been forcibly presented to the British highest court of appeals the court would gladly, for the purpose of avoiding international trouble, have adopted and applied the rule that American ships are American soil even within the British three-mile limit, and that Americans on such American ships were not subject to English dietetic and sumptuary laws.

EARLY AND OFTEN.

I pity those who lie in bed
Until the sun is overhead,
Who keep to shuttered chambers dark,
While I'm awake to greet the lark.

Awake, and hiking o'er the links,
For what care I for forty winks,
When I am marching to the tune
That's played by driver, cleek and spoon?

And that's a merry roundelay
With which to hail the new-born day;
While those who lack the golfer's zest
Contend they're taking needed rest.

But after all, if they were up,
They'd hurry me from tee to cup;
So let them bide in slumber's tents—
I'm glad they have some common sense.

DEGREE FOR B. M. BARUCH.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., June 25.—Williams College at its commencement exercises today conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier. It was contributions from Mr. Baruch which made possible the establishment of the Institute of Politics which has become an annual Summer event at Williams.

Other honorary degrees awarded were:

Doctor of Divinity—James Edgar Gregg, Director of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., and William F. Schell, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

Master of Arts—Howard Opdyke, Professor of Theoretical Mechanics at Union College.

One hundred and one degrees of Bachelor of Arts, nineteen of them with distinction, were awarded to members of the senior class. Orations were delivered by Henry M. Sheffield of Yonkers; Granville S. Sewall of Rye, N. Y., and Lockwood Thompson of Cleveland.

At the alumni luncheon gifts to the college during the year amounting to $788,684 were announced.

WAR DEPARTMENT SAVING.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A report of economies of administration made today by the budget officer of the War Department showed that while the civilian forces of the department had been reduced to 51,836 at the beginning of the fiscal year, or approximately prewar strength, a further cut to 45,112 had been brought about by April 30, 1923.

By consolidations of the various bureaus and offices of the War Department, a saving of 70,300 square feet in office space also was effected in Washington alone, and a considerable saving in money was brought about by curtailment of expenses for printing and binding, telephone service, fuel, ice and laundry.

A saving of more than $158,200 was effected during the first nine months of the fiscal year 1923 by taking discounts for prompt payment of bills rendered by commercial houses.

A saving of $400,000 has been effected under the appropriation for incidental expenses, and the Secretary of War General says this amount will be returned to the Treasury. Huge economies also have been made in water transportation by the reduction of the number of army transports.

PROMOTION FOR SCIENISTS.

Rockefeller Institute Also Announces List of Appointments.

The Board of Scientific Directors of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research announces the following promotions and appointments:

Dr. Oswald T. Avery and Dr. Walter A. Jacobs, hitherto associate members, have been made members.

Dr. Michael Heidelberger, Dr. Christen Lundsgaard, Dr. Peter K. Olitsky and Dr. Louise Pearce, hitherto associates, have been made associate members.

Dr. David I. Hitchcock, Dr. Frederic M. Neiditsch, Dr. Henry Schmidt and Dr. Leslie T. Webster, hitherto assistants, have been made associates.

Dr. Mimosa H. Pfaltz, hitherto a fellow, has been made an assistant.

The following new appointments are announced: Associate member, Dr. Jacob J. Bronfenbrenner and Dr. Paul A. Lewis; associates, Dr. Oskar Baudisch, Herbert L. J. Haller and Dr. Stuart Mudd; assistants, Arnold M. Collins, Dr. John H. Crawford, Dr. Robert Elman, Dr. Joseph H. B. Grant, Moses Kunitz, Dr. Cecil D. Murray, Dr. Everett S. Sanderson, Dr. David T. Smith, James Vander Scheer and Dr. Lars A. Welo; fellows, Miss Gladys Bryant, Dr. Charles Korb, Miss Dorothy Loomis and Dr. Elmer L. Straub.

HIGH SCHOOL TO REOPEN.

Summer Sessions at P. S. 165 Will Cover Full Terms.

The fourteenth year of the Summer School for girls and boys will start on July 5. Miss Louise M. Webster, the director, announced yesterday. The sessions, which will be held in Public School 165, 234 West 109th Street, will cover all grades of academic and commercial work.

Students may take three review subjects or two advanced subjects, or a combination of advanced and review work. In each course forty lessons of an hour and a half each will be given. A complete term's work will be covered. Students may prepare for the September examinations in advanced or review subjects, thereby shortening the high school course to three and a half years. Graduates of elementary school may start high school work.

The fees are $1 for registration, $10 for one course of forty lessons, and $18 for two courses of forty lessons each. July 4 and 5 have been set aside for registration.

MAKES ARTIFICIAL WOOD.

Norwegian Scientist Compounds It of Sawdust, Chalk and Chemicals.

CHRISTIANIA, June 25.—By using a mixture of 50 per cent. sawdust with chalk and chemicals and subjecting it to very heavy pressure, a scientist of the Kullebund says he has succeeded in making "artificial wood," possessing all the qualities of genuine timber.

Its specific gravity is the same as that of wood, its hardness that of oak. It can be planed, sawed, bored, nailed, painted, stained or polished, and subjected to every process of carpentry or manufacture for which real wood is used. It will not deteriorate in water, and on account of the chemicals it contains it is impervious to rot and burns only at a temperature very much higher than that at which real timber ignites.

DEDICATE RHEIMS CHURCH.

French and Foreign Protestant Pastors Participate in the Ceremony.

RHEIMS, June 25.—A score of French and foreign pastors, including the Rev. Paul Bert, minister of the American Church in Paris, participated yesterday in the dedication of the new Protestant Temple here. The edifice stands on the ground once occupied by the Protestant Church, which was one of the first religious structures to be destroyed in the World War.

The temple cost 1,200,000 francs, about half of which was subscribed by Americans.

Return of Seized Property Ordered.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Colonel Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian, and Frank White, Treasurer of the United States, were ordered today by Justice Frederick L. Siddons, in Equity Court, to turn over to Mrs. Helene J. Kny, widow of Richard Kny of New York City, $580,000, the proceeds of the sale of 2,000 shares of stock of the Kny-Scheerer Corporation of New York City, which was seized as enemy owned. Mrs. Kny sues as the executrix of the estate of her husband, who died July 11, 1922, and who she contended was an American citizen.

CITY WEIGHS OFFER OF BILLINGS ESTATE

TO BUY INWOOD HILL PLOT

Extension of Riverside Drive to Spuyten Duyvil Will Be Made Possible.

Mayor Hylan appointed a committee at yesterday's meeting of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate to confer with the Rockefeller interests regarding their offer to turn over to the city the estate on Washington Heights formerly owned by C. K. G. Billings, the sportsman, valued at $6,000,000. The committee consists of Borough President Miller of Manhattan, Borough President Bruckner of the Bronx and Aldermanic President Murray Hulbert.

This property was offered to the city during the Mitchel Administration on condition that it be made an integral part of the city's general park system. Nothing was done about the offer, but now that the city has a chance to turn the surrounding territory into a park it is hoped that negotiations for the property can be resumed.

The Committee of the Whole voted to recommend to the Board that condemnation proceedings be authorized for acquiring park land in the Inwood Hill section. This land is bounded by Dyckman Street, Inwood Hill Park, the Harlem River Ship Canal, West 218th Street and Seaman Avenue and the cost is to be assessed 50 per cent. on the city at large, 40 per cent. on Manhattan and 10 per cent. on the Bronx.

In moving for the condemnation proceedings President Hulbert explained that this land constituted the only natural park left in Manhattan.

"We already own part of the land," he said, "and if we do not take steps right away to get the remainder we will lose it entirely."

While Borough President Miller favored the city's acquisition of Inwood Park, he was of the opinion that the condemnation proceedings would place the entire property under the jurisdiction of the Board of Estimate. He thought the land could be obtained at less cost if the city negotiated with the owners of the property.

An expert informed the committee that the cost of the lots ranged from $1,500 to $4,000; and it was estimated that the entire property would cost the city $5,000,000. The assessed valuation of the property is $1,346,250.

"We want that land badly," said President Miller, "but we are guardians of the city's treasury and for that reason should be careful that we do not acquire the property at abnormal values. Let us get the property, but at a price that is reasonable and just."

President Hulbert declared that with the Inwood Hill park land and the Billings estate it would be possible to extend Riverside Drive north to Spuyten Duyvil and carry it across the Harlem on the proposed Hudson-Fulton bridge and connect it up with the Bronx park system.

On motion of Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn the committee recommended approval of map changes contingent upon the purchase of an addition to Dyker Beach Park, Brooklyn. The acquisition of this property will enable the city to lay out a public golf course. Part of the land now is used for that purpose by a private concession. It is leased at $325,000. It was agreed to assess 75 per cent. of the cost on Brooklyn and 25 per cent. on the city.

MINERS' DELEGATES GATHER

Special to The New York Times.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 25.—Several hundred delegates representing various local mine unions throughout the anthracite field had already arrived tonight for the Tri-District Convention, which will open here tomorrow to frame a new wage scale to replace the present contract with the operators, which expires Aug. 31. By tomorrow, it is expected that between five and six hundred delegates, representing fifty-three union locals and 170,000 hard coal workers, will be here.

The miners are understood to feel that the operators are getting such exorbitant prices for coal that they can pay the men who dig the coal a substantial increase.

Thomas Kennedy, President of the Hazleton District, who is also Chairman of the Tri-District Board, will preside at the convention tomorrow. John L. Lewis, International President of the United Mine Workers, is expected to reach here Wednesday to assume complete charge.

Indications are that the miners' convention will continue for the remainder of the week, and that the demands will not be acted upon until Friday or Saturday. Following the adoption of the demands at the convention, the union leaders will seek a conference with the operators' committee immediately in order to prevent a suspension of operations.

MGR. JAS. J. FLOOD DIES SUDDENLY AT 78

STRICKEN IN THE RECTORY

Head of One of the Largest Parishes Was Long a Consultor of the Archdiocese of New York.

Mgr. James J. Flood, pastor for the last forty years of the Roman Catholic Church of St. John the Evangelist, First Avenue and Fifty-fifth, and for many years a consultor of the Archdiocese of New York, died suddenly yesterday afternoon. Death came at his rectory, which adjoins the church in Fifty-fifth Street.

Mgr. Flood had been frail for the last fifteen years, but was able to administer his vast parish until two months ago, when he suffered a general breakdown of health.

The Monsignor was 78 years old.

Mgr. Flood had one of the largest parishes in the city and he maintained one of the largest parochial schools. Two years ago he raised almost $100,000 in a period of two weeks.

One of the closest personal friends Cardinal Farley had was Mgr. Flood. The Cardinal sought his advice on most of the big problems of the archdiocese. He was one of the four consultors of the archdiocese under Cardinal Farley, and he was appointed to this high office when the Most Rev. Patrick J. Hayes succeeded the Cardinal as Archbishop of New York.

The other three consultors are Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral; Mgr. James H. McGean, pastor of St. Peter's Church, Barclay Street; Mgr. Joseph F. Sheahan, of Poughkeepsie, dean of Putnam and Dutchess Counties. Mgr. Flood was head of the Archdiocesan Commission in Woodstock. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Home for the Infirm Priests of the archdiocese.

Mgr. Flood was born in Ireland and came to this country when a young man. He was educated in the College of St. Francis Xavier, Fordham University, and St. Joseph's Seminary, which was then at Troy, N. Y.

On May 30, 1872, Mgr. Flood was ordained to the priesthood. He observed the golden jubilee of his priesthood a year ago.

Three nieces survive Mgr. Flood. They are the Misses Margaret and Ada Kearney, of this city, and Mrs. Daniel Kiley, of Brookline, Mass.

The body of Mgr. Flood will be moved into the church tomorrow, and at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening the divine office for the dead will be sung. Members of the Holy Name Society of St. John's Parish and St. John's Club will be a guard of honor throughout Wednesday night.

A solemn high mass of requiem will be sung Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Archbishop Hayes will officiate.

RECTOR DEFIES HEAT AND WALKS 28 MILES

Dr. Carstensen Makes His Longest Birthday Tramp by Circling Manhattan Island.

The Rev. Dr. Gustav A. Carstensen, rector of Holy Rood Church, 178th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, took his "birthday walk" yesterday, and covered exactly twenty-eight and one-quarter miles, according to the speedometer he carried with him.

Dr. Carstensen was 72 years old on Sunday, June 17. The "annual" walk was delayed by church duties, weddings and many unexpected calls. Yesterday, however, he decided not to wait any longer, so at 5:30 A. M. he started to walk around Manhattan Island. At the Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South Street, he was welcomed by the clergy, and he stopped long enough to take a shower bath.

Dr. Carstensen arrived home at exactly 4:30 o'clock.

This is the longest "birthday walk" Dr. Carstensen ever has taken. A year ago he walked to Ossining, a distance of twenty-five miles. Two years ago he walked seventeen miles. He hopes some year to walk to Poughkeepsie.

SAY DELORME WAS AT HOME.

Witnesses Tell of Priest's Whereabouts When Raoul Was Killed.

MONTREAL, June 25.—Conflicting circumstantial evidence as to whether Adelyarde Delorme, former abbe, accused of murdering his half-brother Raoul on the outskirts of this city Jan. 6, 1923, was at home when the shooting occurred, was produced at today's session of the trial.

To settle this point, the Crown called several neighbors. Percy H. Akin, a private detective living near the former priest, declared that at 11 o'clock, not long before the murder is supposed to have occurred, he heard a car either entering or leaving the abbe's garage. He said that the next morning he saw marks of tire chains in the frozen roadway.

Two other neighbors, however, declared that they heard a motor running in the garage, but did not hear a car leave. One of these witnesses was Pierre Lalime. The other was his wife. Mrs. Lalime added that she had heard a woman's voice call, "Aren't you coming upstairs?" She fixed the time at 1 o'clock.

Lily Delorme, a half-sister of the priest, previously had testified she had called to him in the cellar at that hour, and Lalime said he had heard the Delorme furnace shaken at 1 o'clock.

Exhibits, a model of the house, garage and adjacent property of Delorme will be presented in court in an effort to smooth out conflicts in testimony of occupants of the houses as to their whereabouts on the night of the alleged crime. The house model, four feet high, and made of detachable parts, also will be used to test visibility and audibility in the Delorme house.

DOES NOT FEAR OUSTING.

Eugene Wood's Estate $8,627.

The estate of Eugene Wood, author and humorist, who died Feb. 25, was appraised yesterday at $8,627, the bulk of which was in mortgages and insurance. He divided his estate between his daughters, Peggy Wood, the musical comedy star, and Miss May Wood.

Richard Floyd Clarke, international lawyer, who died Sept. 16, 1921, left an estate appraised at $218,522 gross and $168,644 net, of which $167,347 was in securities. The will cut off his wife, Mrs. Felicite Fox Clarke, from whom he had been separated for twenty-seven years, and left the bulk of the estate for life to Miss A. Coralie Hallett of 116 West Eightieth Street, who had been taken into the Clarke household before the lawyer and his wife separated. Mrs. Clarke opposed the probate of the will but later settled for a sum not made known in the appraisal.

Miss Hallett got the life use of Mr. Clarke's books, $20,000 worth of stock in the Atala Land Company and furniture valued at $17,506, the income from two trusts of $50,000 and $23,506, or two-fifths of the residuary estate, outright.

MOUQUIN'S TO CONTINUE.

Restaurant Head Declares Sale of Property Unlikely.

Louis C. Mouquin, President of the Mouquin Restaurant and Wine Company, 486 Broadway, made a statement yesterday in which he said:

"Some time ago it was announced that a deal which involved the sale of the Mouquin restaurant property at Twenty-eighth Street and Sixth Avenue was under way, and the general impression was created that Mouquin's Restaurant was to close. While there were negotiations under way, these failed in consummation with the result that the property was not sold."

The property was to have been purchased by Charles W. Wyman and Louis H. Lowe, real estate operators.

The unique building at 434 Sixth Avenue, an old-frame, four-story building, which has housed what is known as "uptown" Mouquin's, will not be torn down.

ATTACH MORSE PROPERTY.

National Surety Company Granted Two Writs Totaling $76,573.

Two attachments were granted yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel against the property of Charles W. Morse in suits by the National Surety Company, which alleges it gave two bonds that Mr. Morse gave to indemnify. One suit is for $40,181, paid out by the surety company as a result of a judgment for the General Commercial Company (Ltd., against the steamship Huron, controlled by a Morse company. The other suit is for payment of $30,-000, made in a suit of the Dexter Trading Company, Inc., against the Huron.

The attachments were obtained on the ground that Mr. Morse is now a resident of Bath, Me., and stated so in court in Washington, D. C., on Nov. 6, 1922.

Mrs. Baker and Sons in Auto Crash.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 25.—Mrs. Raymond T. Baker and two sons, Alfred G. and George W. Vanderbilt, were in an automobile last night at Wheatleigh, the manor estate of Mrs. Caries de Heredia, when they were bound for the Sunday evening Trinity Church outdoor service. Mrs. Baker was driving her car on the right-hand side of the avenue leading to the villa when she crashed head-on into a car driven by Edward Conklin. She and the boys were severely shaken up and bruised and the automobile was damaged. They remained through the service and afterward Mrs. Baker drove to her estate, Holmwood.

Church Folk Stop Dance Marathon.

SHREVEPORT, La., June 25.—About 180 men and women in attendance at a Methodist-Presbyterian union church service last night at Cedar Grove, a near-by factory town, went to a hall where a marathon dance was in progress and forced the dancers to leave town. The dancing contest was launched Saturday.

BRITISH EXPERT LAUDS AMERICAN ADVERTISING

Union Jack Is Presented to New York Club as Tribute by W. S. Crawford of London.

With a tribute to America's advertising methods, W. S. Crawford, Vice President of the Thirty Club of London, presented a silk Union Jack to the Advertising Club of New York, at a luncheon yesterday at the clubhouse, 47 East Twenty-fifth Street. Great Britain and the United States, said Mr. Crawford, in discussing the international situation, must stand together to fight.

Mr. Crawford said he was astonished at the proficiency of the American advertiser. The theory and psychology of advertising may be better understood by British advertising men, who have made a study of it, he said, but the actual presentation of the goods to be sold is much better done here.

"You are all such wonderful salesmen," he said. "Our advertisements are quick and rough and raw compared with yours."

Mr. Crawford said that the British delegates to the convention learned much from the Americans and he hoped this country would be well represented by people from Great Britain at the convention in England next year.

The guests responded with loud applause when Carl Byoir, President of the International Consolidated Chemical Company, and Associate Chairman of the Bureau of Public Information, mentioned Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Byoir said that when he saw the Leviathan coming up the river last Sunday evening there appeared to him on the bridge the "shadow figure of the captain who was not there." No matter what one thinks of Mr. Wilson's international policies one must admire his idealism, he said.

James O'Shaughnessy, Secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, promised its co-operation in the London convention, asserting that the advertising profession "can make more for genuine betterment of international relations than any single undertaking politicians could conceive."

The flag was accepted on behalf of the club by Harry Tipper, former President. President H. H. Charles presided.

DELAYS ASSIGNMENTS TO NEGRO HOSPITAL

Director Hines Is Going to Tuskegee to Face Opposition to Negro Staff for Veterans' Institution.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Pending a personal investigation by Director Hines of the situation at the Tuskegee, Ala., Veterans' Hospital, no further negro personnel will be assigned to the institution by the Veterans' Bureau.

In making his announcement today, Director Hines said he expected to go to Tuskegee early in July and discuss the bureau's plans with those interested in the project. He declared he would endeavor to convince them that it is his intention to do for the negro patients the best that is humanly possible.

The decision to interrupt further employment of negro physicians was made, it was indicated, because of the agitation at Tuskegee which followed the recent publication of a letter by Director Hines to President Harding announcing that it was hoped soon to have complete negro personnel at the institution.

Director Hines was said to have been preparing to appoint a negro commanding officer, and to have virtually selected for the place Dr. Edward Jones, assistant director of Freedmen's Hospital here, when he changed his plans.

Director Hines said he was confident the situation could clear up with his visit.

"Anyhow," he declared, "I will go down there and face the opposition."

Director Hines said he had been surprised at the facility with which the bureau had been able to get competent negro doctors. The Medical Association of the Negro Race, he said, had been untiring in its efforts to aid the bureau in the selection of efficient negro doctors.

Uses Gas and Bullet to End His Life.

Sitting in an armchair in the dining room of his home yesterday, Henry Sweteiger, 55 years old, of 500 West 162d Street, placed in his mouth the end of a rubber tube connected with an open gas jet and fired a bullet through his head. His body was found by Rudolph Nesack, superintendent of the building. A note bidding goodbye to friends was found. Sweteiger had been despondent since the death of his wife a short time ago, the police said.

SAY HOLD-UP WAS "FRAMED."

Police Say Clerk Invited $663 Robbery in Shoe Store.

Nat Goldberg, 17 years old, a clerk of the Thom McAn Shoe Store, 24 3d Avenue, told detectives he had been held up in the store early yesterday morning by two men who had taken $663 from the safe. Later, according to the police, he confessed that the robbers were two of his friends, Harry Levine, 19, of 36 Forsyth Street and Max Arnstein, 21, of 141 South Third Street, Brooklyn, who he said, he had invited to hold up the store. All were arrested, charged with grand larceny.

When Goldberg ran into the station house and said he had been held up, the police say he could not describe the robbers or their car, but said that they had gone up town. Later he said they had gone down town. Then, according to the police, he broke down and admitted he had staged the holdup with his friends. Detectives recovered the store's money in a drawer of Arnstein's bureau.

EDMUND S. TWINING DEAD.

FRENCH SEEK AMERICAN TO CLEAR UP MYSTERY

Police Search for Man Whom Missing Finistere Councillor Left Home to See.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 25.—A search is being made by the Paris police for the mysterious American supposed to have been implicated in the disappearance of Pierre Quemeneur of the Council for the Department of Finistère. Quemeneur disappeared more than a month ago between his home and Paris.

Quemeneur had stated before he left home that he was going to Paris to conduct business with an American. He made part of the journey by automobile, but whether he ever reached Paris is uncertain. Some time after he was last seen a telegram arrived in his name to his brother-in-law asking for money, and 60,000 francs was telegraphed to the address given. This money was never collected, and after some time an inquiry was begun by relatives to discover his whereabouts.

A few days later a telegram was received from Havre, signed "Pierre," saying all was well, but there has been no further communication.

Quemeneur was a bachelor and lived with his sisters, and his family cannot believe that his disappearance was voluntary. They suspect a crime and an active search is being made to ascertain by whom the telegram was sent from Havre and to establish the identity of the American with whom he had been doing business.

The possibility is suggested that Quemeneur himself has gone to America, but this suggestion is not regarded as probable.

STEAL $10,000 FUR COATS.

Daylight Burglars Get Off Electric Alarm, but Get Away.

On Saturday afternoon burglars broke into the office of the Canadian Fur Company, Inc., 104 West Fifty-seventh street and stole two Russian mink coats worth $5,000 each.

The burglars, who jimmied the door, set off an electric protective system, which evidently caused them to work fast, for they left untouched other expensive furs.

According to the President of the company, Godfrey Gerber, several fur coats and neck pieces belonging to Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago had been in the shop for repairs, but were shipped out a few days before the robbery.

Here's something you ought to know

YOU see one Palm Beach Suit selling at one price and another at a higher price. Yet you know there is only one grade of Palm Beach Cloth. The difference is in the amount and grade or quality of tailoring.

Two Palm Beach Suits might be made of the same bolt of cloth, yet one suit, all hand-finished, would cost more than one in which the more expensive details of tailoring were omitted.

Only one grade—many patterns

Palm Beach Suits take their name from Palm Beach Cloth, a patented fabric made only by The Palm Beach Mills of Goodall Worsted Company, at Sanford, Maine. There is only one grade of cloth, but innumerable shades and patterns, from which clothing manufacturers who specialize in fine summer clothing make their selections. These manufacturers make different grades of Palm Beach Suits.

Manufacturers of popular-priced clothing make popular-priced Palm Beach Suits. Manufacturers of fine, high-grade ready-to-wear clothing make fine, high-grade Palm Beach Suits.

The details of tailoring

This is the label that identifies the genuine cloth

Why prices vary

The difference in the amount of tailoring in various grades of Palm Beach Suits makes quite a difference in price. Be sure that you get the genuine cloth.

All garments or suits of genuine Palm Beach Cloth have the registered Palm Beach label sewed into them. This label is for your protection. Look for it.

Golf knickers and sport clothes made of Palm Beach Cloth are cool and good-looking—practical and durable.

METZ ADMITS PAYING FOR DYE AFFIDAVITS

HAD TALKS WITH GERMANS

REBUKED BY JUDGE MORRIS

He Is Warned to Cease Evasive Answers or "Take the Consequences."

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 25.—During his cross-examination today as a witness in the Government's suit to recover seized German dye patents from the Chemical Foundation, Herman A. Metz, former Comptroller of New York City, developed such evasiveness that Federal Judge Morris finally warned him to answer questions or "abide by the consequences."

Admissions extracted from Mr. Metz by Isador J. Kresel, counsel for the Chemical Foundation, pleased the defense, which charges that Metz, seeking the return of seized patents to their German owners, instigated the Government's suit to set aside their sale by the Alien Property Custodian.

Among the more important admissions made by Mr. Metz was that he paid to E. W. Desters, a former employe of the Chemical War Service, money after Desters had obtained information used later by Senator Moses of New Hampshire, in attacks on the Chemical Foundation in the Senate.

After much parrying, Mr. Metz admitted that in 1920 and 1921 he discussed with German interests in Germany the possibility of the return to them of their dye and chemical patents seized by this country. The defense alleges that Mr. Metz promised the Germans he would get their patents back for them. For many years he has been sole American agent for the German Pharmaceutical House of Farbwerke-Meschat.

Judge Rebukes Witness.

Judge Morris had reprimanded Metz last week for the voluminity of his replies to questions and his persistence in wandering far afield, and when he displayed a similar tendency today the Judge's annoyance was evident. It found expression when Colonel Anderson protested against what Government counsel considered unfair cross-examination and appealed to Judge Morris for courtesy to the witness from Mr. Kresel.

"I think he has had it in full measure," exclaimed Judge Morris. "Mr. Kresel has shown the utmost restraint, and I shall no longer hesitate to say so. He is to be commended for his restraint. The time has come when this witness must answer these questions or abide by the consequences. I have observed him throughout. From now on evasion will not be tolerated."

As Metz persisted in evading direct answers as long as possible, the Court interrupted proceedings to summon opposing counsel to the bench for a consultation on the witness's conduct. A recess followed, during which Colonel Anderson, Mr. Metz and Major Vandiver, attorney for Mr. Metz, discussed the situation. Thereafter the witness apparently tried to conform to the requirements of Court procedure.

The witness declared he had no recollection of a bill for $14,765 rendered by Desters for getting affidavits for the dye investigation, but said he sent back to Desters "a bill for something." His memory was refreshed when Mr. Kresel showed a copy of the bill, and he declared there was no basis for it.

Tells of Conference With Moses.

Mr. Metz told of talking with a Senator Moses and Desters in New York during one of the Washington dye hearings," and said the Senator asked Desters to get certain affidavits for him.

"Isn't it a fact you paid Desters for it?" Mr. Kresel asked.

"After he lost his position I gave him money; not for affidavits," Mr. Metz replied.

Desters's bill said, in part:

"I, Edward W. Desters, submit to H. A. Metz my bill for fees and expenses incurred in securing information and affidavits to be used by Senator George H. Moses in the case of the dye embargo, as per agreement between Mr. Metz, Senator Moses and myself made in New York in October, 1921, to wit: 1. That all information secured by me should be used by Senator Moses and turned over to him; 2. that Mr. Metz take charge of the financial part of this agreement."

Then followed items totaling $14,765, and acknowledgment of the receipt of $5,000 "of this money."

Mr. Metz insisted he paid only $1,000 to Desters and several small sums as low as $10 in addition. The $1,000, he said, was to help him pay off a mortgage and because the man, out of work, had a sick wife and a child. He could not recall whether payment was by check or cash.

Admits Conferences with Germans.

Mr. Kresel digressed to examine into Mr. Metz's trip to Germany in 1921 and the witness resented the expression "to see your old friends, the Germans."

He denied discussing with the Germans the return of the patents, but when Kresel pressed the point he said he didn't "think he specifically discussed it with them," adding under further pressure "if I did, it was in a general way."

A moment later the witness admitted that it was in 1920, not in 1921, that he discussed with the Germans the return of the patents, declaring, "I discussed it with all the people who had patents here."

Mr. Metz finally conceded that in his 1921 trip abroad, as well as in 1920, he discussed this question with the Germans.

He disavowed knowledge of the purpose of a committee of three German chemists sent here in 1922, when Kresel asked whether their arrival was not the result of his discussion with the Germans as to the possibility of their obtaining the patents, but said he talked with a member of this committee in New York.

Mr. Metz admitted that before the foundation was formed he was aware that it was to be organized, knew it was to get the patents, had been told the price would be $250,000, and knew that Francis P. Garvan was to be President and that it was to grant nonexclusive licenses to all Americans applicants. Three of his companies took $50,000 worth of stock of the foundation, nevertheless, Metz testified Saturday that, while the average price paid by the foundation per patent was $50, he would have paid $1,000,000 for the salvarsan and neo-salvarsan patents and $200,000 for the novocaine patent, under which he had exercised a monopoly as sales agent for the German producers.

"Saw a Good Thing as Stockholder."

"And yet you were willing to become part and parcel of this organization that you knew was to buy the whole kit and crew for $250,000?" Mr. Kresel asked.

"I saw a good thing as a stockholder," answered Mr. Metz. "I had no interest in the Germans. I am still a stockholder for three of my companies."

Mr. Metz denied knowing Gaston B. Means, but said he knew C. Cyril Bennett and told of giving the latter $5,000. Except by hearsay, he asserted, he did not know that Means and Bennett made the investigation which resulted in the present suit.

"And don't you know Gaston B. Means was a German spy here during the war?" Kresel asked.

"I don't know it," said Metz.

Counsel attacked Mr. Metz's valuation of the salvarsan, neo-salvarsan and novocaine patents at $1,200,000, by recalling that Metz testified before the Shortridge committee in 1922 that he was not competent to give the value of the patents, but he insisted he would have paid that sum for the three patents, under monopolistic conditions. He declared, he would have paid $5,000,000.

Mr. Metz said he was still agent for the German house of Farbwerke-Hoechst. He recalled telling Joseph H. Choate Jr., general counsel to the custodian, that he expected to have a severe session with the Germans after the war for making salvarsan here."

Defense Scores a Point.

The defense scored a point when the witness, asked to assume that he was bidding for the patents under the restrictions imposed on the foundation, stated that "the value would be largely destroyed and I should not have bid."

In 1915 Mr. Metz warned the dermatological Institute against an alleged infringement of his salvarsan patent, telling them, however, that he would not interfere with their manufacture so long as he could not get a supply of salvarsan from Germany. He took the latter stand, he explained, on humanitarian grounds, and entered into an agreement with the institute to have it manufacture for him in such quantities as he could use.

Mr. Metz said he still had exclusive licenses on the salvarsan, neo-salvarsan and novocaine patents, and assumed that when the custodian sold the salvarsan patent to the foundation it was subject to his exclusive license.

When America entered the war the Federal Trade Commission granted four licenses under this patent. Mr. Metz protested against these, and also against issuances of licenses on applications by the Massachusetts State Department of Health and the New York State Board of Health.

Asked to reconcile this with his claim of acting on humanitarian grounds in permitting manufacture under certain conditions by the dermatological Institute, Mr. Metz declared "it was very unfair competition against private enterprise."

Under the foundation's régime, it was brought out, there was no longer a salvarsan monopoly. The witness also conceded that the dyes now made in America were "as good as the German dyes ever were."

Mr. Metz conceded also that since the foundation came into being there had been a great reduction in the cost of salvarsan. To wholesalers before the war Metz sold it at $2.50 per unit. During the war the price ran up to $4.50, which the War Department paid. Now, he said, the Government paid 30 cents and physicians paid 60 cents.

Colonel Thomas W. Miller, present Alien Property Custodian, who signed the Government's bill of complaint, took the stand for a short time today. He said he had been in office only a month when he transferred two groups of patents to the foundation and was not thoroughly acquainted with the facts at that time. Had he known the facts since alleged by the Department of Justice, he said, he would not have permitted the transfers.

Collection of 3,000 Volumes Given to Princeton Library

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 25.—A valuable collection of 3,000 volumes on the French Revolution has been presented to Princeton University by James H. McGraw of New York City, Professor Christian Gauss, Director of Public Relations, announced here today.

This collection was made by the late William D. Weaver of Charlottesville, Va., a naval and electrical engineer. In making the donation to Princeton through President John Grier Hibben, Mr. McGraw said that he was prompted by his high regard for Mr. Weaver and by a motive to make the valuable collection available to students at Princeton and "to show my appreciation of what Princeton University has done for the higher education of young men of our time, including three of my own sons."

BOY KILLED BY CAR DRIVEN BY MOTHER

Woman Backing Machine Down Driveway of Home Fails to See Child.

CROWD MOBS CHAUFFEUR

Men and Women Beat Operator of Truck Which Crushes Lad to Death.

While backing her touring car along the driveway from the garage at her home, Mrs. Austin Dawson of Stewart Avenue, Bayside, Queens, ran over and killed her two-year-old son David, who ran from the rear entrance of the house into the path of the car.

Mrs. Dawson, although she did not see the child, realized that her car had struck something and when she got out of the machine she saw the body of David under the car, his head crushed by the rear wheel.

Neighbors, attracted by her screams, called in Dr. George Dickey, who pronounced the child dead from a fractured skull.

An enraged crowd of more than a hundred men and women vented its fury for ten minutes last night on Joseph Stinson, a chauffeur, of 2,150 Fifth Avenue, after he had run down and killed Thomas Nigido, 6 years old, of 142 Cherry Street, with a four-ton truck. The machine, owned by the Atlas Tin Works of 225-231 East 144th Street, was being driven south on Cherry Street when it struck the lad, who was playing ball in front of his home.

Thumb Nearly Bitten Off.

The people of the neighborhood who were sitting on the stoops of their homes saw the car drag the body twenty feet before it was crushed by the front and rear wheels of the truck. When the car was stopped they rushed the driver, who had not left his seat, and began beating him with sticks and broom handles. When Detective Salvatore Inella came to Stinson's assistance the latter's thumb had been nearly bitten off by a woman in the crowd. The driver was taken to the Oak Street Station, where he was charged with homicide.

Louis Waldman, 7 years old, of 838 East Sixty-fifth Street, was killed when he was run over by an automobile driven by Anthony De Stance of 231 East Twentieth Street. Louis was playing at the corner of Second Avenue and Sixty-second Street when the machine, owned by Joseph Fried & Sons of 530 East Seventy-first Street, struck him. Patrolman Sheehan of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station commandeered a passing truck, which carried the boy to Flower Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Playing on the streets claimed a third victim when Joseph Dubias, 5 years old, of 1,072 Simpson Street, the Bronx, was run down by a taxicab after he had darted in front of the machine to recover a ball. The machine, driven by William Frater, 46, of 1,053 Simpson Street, the Bronx, was going south on Fox Street. The accident occurred at Fox and 167th Streets. Frater was locked up at the Simpson Street Station on a technical charge of homicide.

Apparently the victim of a speeding automobile, the body of Albert von Glahn, 60 years old, a farmhand employed by Henry Thenhurst of Carlstadt, was discovered by William Bode of Washington Avenue, Carlstadt, lying on the road in front of the latter's house.

According to an ambulance surgeon from the Hackensack Hospital, von Glahn had been dead about two hours and the appearance of his body indicated that he had been killed by an automobile. The police of Carlstadt have started an investigation. This was the third automobile fatality in Bergen County over the week-end.

Bronx Boy Killed by Truck.

A motor truck owned by Frederick M. Schildwachter, an ice dealer of 4,190 Park Avenue, the Bronx, and operated by his son Frederick, of 800 East 175th Street, the Bronx, struck and instantly killed John Boyle, 6, of 414 East 163d Street, the Bronx, yesterday morning.

According to witnesses the boy, who was playing at the Melrose Station of the New York Central Railroad, 162d Street and Park Avenue, ran in the path of the truck which was northbound on Park Avenue. Schildwachter was taken to the Morrisania Station, where he was questioned by Assistant District Attorney William Clendenning.

A fractured skull and internal injuries were suffered yesterday morning by Motorcycle Patrolman George D. Maher, of the Snyder Avenue Station, Brooklyn, when his motorcycle collided with an automobile driven by Patrolman Harry Dufner of the Bedford Avenue Station. According to the police of the Snyder Avenue Station, Dufner, who was off duty and in civilian clothes, was being pursued by Maher for speeding. At the corner of Clarkson and Brooklyn Avenues, the autoist suddenly halted his machine and the motorcycle policeman, unable to stop, crashed into the rear of the auto. Maher was taken to the Kings County Hospital in a serious condition while Dufner and two of his companions were treated for slight injuries and then went home. No arrest was made.

Mrs. Fay Grueber, 28 years old, of 356 West 145th Street, was leaving the Homicide Court yesterday, after having been held in $2,000 bail for examination in connection with the killing of 5-year-old Anna Gendick Saturday night by her automobile, when Mrs. Ethel Gendick, mother of the victim of the accident, attempted to attack her. Policemen and Court attendants intercepted Mrs. Gendick in the courtroom as she ran after Mrs. Grueber shouting: "You killed my little girl." Later in the hall outside of the courtroom, the mother again tried to get at Mrs. Grueber, but she was restrained until the latter drove away in her car.

Policeman Weidig of the West 152d Street Station arraigned Mrs. Grueber before Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb on suspicion of homicide. He told the Court that Mrs. Grueber's car struck the little girl in West 145th Street near Broadway where Anna and several other girls were playing near her home at 599 West 145th Street. The Magistrate said he would hold a hearing on the charge on July 13.

NORTHWEST STORMS KILL SCORE OF PERSONS

Six Perish in North Dakota—Great Property Damage Is Done by Rains.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 25.—Nearly a score of deaths and great property damage resulted from Sunday storms in the Northwest, reports tonight revealed.

Six persons perished when a tornado swept western Bowman and eastern Adams Counties in North Dakota last night. Twelve persons were seriously hurt, one probably fatally, and five slightly injured in this storm.

Several other deaths were reported from drowning, electrocutions and accidents all attributed to the storms.

Heavy rainstorms earl today added to the damage.

Wife Says H. A. Solomon Gets $25,000; He Says $1,800.

Mrs. Alicia Solomon of Forest Hills applied to Supreme Court Justice Strong in Brooklyn yesterday for alimony of $750 monthly and counsel fees of $2,000, pending trial of her action for a separation from Harry A. Solomon, President of the American Shellac Company, in Long Island City, and head of Harry A. Solomon & Co., in the Produce Exchange Building, Manhattan. The Court reserved decision.

It was alleged to the Court by Mrs. Solomon's attorney, Francis G. Hoyt of 61 Broadway, that her husband's yearly income was not less than $25,000.

Charles H. McCarty of 35 Park Row, attorney for Solomon, said the income of the defendant in 1922 did not exceed $1,800 and he offered to produce in court the income return of his client for that period. The defense denies the charges of Mrs. Solomon alleging cruel and inhuman treatment. McCarty said a counter suit would be filed by Solomon making the same allegations against his wife.

They were married at Poughkeepsie in August, 1915. Mrs. Solomon says she left her husband on or about Sept. 12, 1922.

Arsenic Spray Kills 17 Cows.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., June 25.—Seventeen cows owned by John Grieff, a farmer, formerly of Hoboken, have died within the last twenty-four hours from arsenic poisoning. The cows strayed out of Grieff's pasture and crossed the Raritan River to the estate of James B. Duke. The estate has been sprayed by the State Gypsy Moth Bureau and the grass was covered with the sprayed arsenic.

England Is Planning to Double Air Forces, Looking to Equality With Those of France

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 25.—Premier Baldwin will make a statement in the House of Commons tomorrow on the Government's air policy, and it is understood that he will announce proposals for increasing the British air forces to more than twice their present strength by the end of 1925.

The proposals are said to include an increase of forty squadrons, or an addition of about 500 airplanes, and the enrolment of a territorial air force.

This increase will do something to appease critics of the Government like Lord Birkenhead, who urged its necessity in view of this country's weakness in the air, especially when compared with France. The British Government's view, it is declared, is that the proposed increase is not to be considered as final in any way, but subject to modification if required by any international agreement arrived at or by any League of Nations policy acquiesced in. Failing this, a further increase might follow on a great advance in building by another power.

Much may depend on the number of squadrons detailed for Britain's home defense. Roughly speaking, three-fourths of the French air strength is concentrated in France. At present France has about 140 squadrons and approximately 1,300 machines, and, according to her present program, she will have 220 squadrons and about 2,000 machines by the end of 1925. Of Britain's thirty-five squadrons which existed in March, only six and a half were available for home defense, and they were not all fighting squadrons.

Each squadron, it should be explained, consists of twelve machines. The rest of the squadrons were distributed in Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Constantinople and India.

"The last thing we wish to see," says The Westminster Gazette, "is a competition in aerial armaments; but, just as we have agreed with America to the restriction of naval building on the basis of strict equality, so it is reasonable in the air to aim both at an agreed restriction of armaments and at the one-power standard. It was one very friendliness with America and Japan which made the Washington agreement possible, and in a similar way our friendly relations with France ought to make all agreed restriction of aerial forces in Europe more easy to arrange."

GET POLICE RECORDS IN ENRIGHT'S SUIT

INSPECTOR LAHEY ON STAND

Throws Little Light on Alleged Bootlegging Activities and Graft Charges.

Police Department records called for by John D. Lindsay, counsel for Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan, in defense of the criminal libel proceedings instituted by Commissioner Enright, are expected to be produced this morning on the resumption of the inquiry before Judge Thomas C. T. Crain in General Sessions. It is understood that this agreement was reached yesterday afternoon between Chief Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora and Martin Dolphin, Assistant Corporation Counsel, assigned to Police Headquarters.

Mr. Dolphin, according to Mr. Pecora, agreed to do everything in his power to have the documents in court today, despite the appeal from the subpoena now pending before the Appellate Division. Mr. Lindsay has asserted that the records are necessary to further presentation of evidence to justify the statement on which the libel charge is based.

The records relate generally to police activities in connection with the late Mullan-Gage law. There are fifteen items in the subpoena, some of which call for the records in specific cases and others for all records of a certain class, such as complaints against the police arising from Mullan-Gage enforcement.

In the absence of the records, Mr. Lindsay, after calling several witnesses yesterday morning, declared that he could not proceed any further. He asked for an adjournment until after the Appellate Division's decision had been handed down. Mr. Pecora opposed any further delay. Judge Crain said that while his vacation started on Friday he would be willing to continue the hearing next week. After a discussion the hearing was adjourned until this morning.

Inspector Lahey Witness.

Chief Inspector William J. Lahey was the chief witness yesterday. His testimony threw little light on alleged bootlegging activities of the police. Asked by Mr. Lindsay regarding any investigations which he might have conducted in charges of graft relating to Mullan-Gage law enforcement, he declared that he only remembered one—the Petrucci case, in which the driver of a truckload of whisky was reported to have said that he was "riding" it for former Inspector Alfred W. Thor. Inspector John O'Brien and Captain John O'Connor.

Mr. Lindsay asked him whether any stenographic records of the inquiry were made. Grant Crabtree, Chief Clerk of the department, had told Mr. Pecora that no records existed. Inspector Lahey said that he remembered that records were kept, but he could not recall the name of the stenographer.

In reply to the rapid-fire questions by Mr. Lindsay, the Inspector said that he did not remember who made the complaint in the Petrucci matter, or whether there was any complaint. He did not remember that Detectives Lambert and Morrison, who were charged with accepting a $2,500 bribe in connection with the same affair, were called as witnesses.

Asked to state just what he learned of the affair, Inspector Lahey replied: "It seems that Lambert and Morrison were going through West Thirty-seventh Street when they saw an automobile with some men in it. One of them said to the other: 'I think it's booze.' Somebody approached them and said: 'You'd better not interfere with it, that belongs to some police officials.' Inspectors Thor and O'Brien and Captain O'Connor were specifically named, the witness admitted.

Witnesses Called.

After Mr. Lahey left the stand Mr. Lindsay declined to call any of the witnesses whom he had subpoenaed, saying that the records were necessary before they were called. Judge Crain then called some of the witnesses himself and Mr. Pecora called others.

Sergeant Frederick Kruise, head of the so-called gangster squad at Police Headquarters, was questioned briefly where the story involving Lambert and Morrison had come to his attention. He said that he believed it came from Detective Thompson, a member of his squad. He said that he had tried to find several persons whose names were mentioned in connection with the charge, but had failed. He said he had later heard something which made him conclude that the charge was "all bunk."

Ernest Petrucci admitted that he was the owner of 900 cases of liquor stored in a garage in West Thirty-seventh Street. He said that he had got it under a Federal permit from the Early Times Distillery of Kentucky. He said that he had sold 806 cases, for which he received $37,000, but he did not remember the names of the purchasers. The sales were in 1921. He said he was paid in cash and deposited the money in the Chatham Exchange Bank. He denied that he had paid Lambert and Morrison $2,500.

HAD $7,000 WHEN SLAIN.

Former Deputy's Death a Puzzle, With Woman in Jail.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 25.—Discovery of nearly $7,000 in currency in the pockets of Robert H. Shackelford, former Deputy Sheriff, who was shot to death in his home by a woman here yesterday, puzzled county authorities today.

Mrs. Daisy Vaught, held in jail charged with shooting the ex-deputy, maintains silence today. She will plead self-defense, authorities say. A Coroner's inquest probably will be held tomorrow.

BUILDERS RATIFY BRICKLAYING SCALE

Sign Formal Two-Year Agreement With Masons and Their Helpers.

WORKERS DRIFTING BACK

Both Sides Pledge Harmony—3,000 Ironworkers and 7,000 Cement Workers Now Out.

A formal agreement was signed yesterday by the representatives of the Mason Builders' Association embodying their oral promise of last week to the striking bricklayers. The agreement, which runs for two years, calls for a wage of $1.50 an hour, or $12 a day, an increase of $2 a day over the basic wage scale that has existed since 1920.

Announcement of the signing of the agreement was made by A. J. Fogarty, Chairman, and John F. Gray, Secretary of the Bricklayers' Executive Committee, after a meeting with the mason builders in the rooms of the Building Trades Employers' Association, 34 West Thirty-third Street.

The strike committee of the bricklayers' helpers was present and the mason builders also signed an agreement with the helpers for two years at $1 an hour, or $8 a day. Both agreements are to terminate on May 1, 1925. The bricklayers' contracts usually have terminated on Jan. 1 and it was said that the change of date was another victory for the mechanics.

Mr. Fogarty said that the utmost friendliness prevailed at the conference and that each side gave assurances that it would see to it that the present harmonious relations continued during the agreement. Bricklayers working on the jobs of speculative builders drifted slowly back yesterday to the structures being erected by members of the Mason Builders' Association. In some cases they refused to work for $12 a day but insisted on receiving also the old $2 a day bonus.

Abraham Vosk, Business Agent of Local 275 of the Inside Iron Workers' Union, said yesterday that the three locals which went on strike yesterday included between 2,000 and 3,000 men, working in 215 shops. The mechanics make ornamental iron and bronze work for buildings.

"The men are fighting for a forty-four-hour week to replace the present forty-eight-hour week, and for recognition of the union," said Vosk, "but for no change in the wage scale of $1 an hour for mechanics and seventy-five cents for helpers. We had an agreement with the employers two years ago under which we were to get the forty-four-hour week on Jan. 1, 1923. There was a trade depression at the time and the bosses ordered a lockout and instituted the open shop.

"Recently we asked for a conference with Arthur S. Roberts, attorney for the Allied Building Metal Industries Association and our request was refused."

Joseph Froeschel, Business Agent of the District Council of Cement and Concrete Workers, announced yesterday that between 6,000 and 7,000 members of his organization were on strike for $7.50 a day, an increase of $1. The employers offered a man an increase of seventy cents a day.

TELLEGEN FILES DENIAL.

Affidavit Is Made for Benefit of Jessie Reed in Her Divorce Suit.

Lou Tellegen, who has been found guilty of misconduct by the referee in the divorce suit of Geraldine Farrar, filed an affidavit in the Supreme Court denying that he conducted himself improperly with Jessie Reed, vaudeville actress, in Minneapolis last year. The affidavit was for the benefit of Mrs. Reed in her divorce suit against Lew Reed, a musician now appearing in vaudeville, in which he has countersialmed for a divorce.

Justice Wasservogel awarded $35 alimony to Mrs. Reed, who asked $100, stating that she needs all the money she earns in vaudeville for the support of her widowed mother and two brothers. Her husband alleged she got more than $7,000 last year.

Mrs. Reed sued on the ground that her husband had been attentive to Dorothy Blake, vaudeville actress, after she took part in a raid on a room at the Broadway-Claridge on April 13. Mrs. Reed also alleged that her husband and Miss Blake posed as husband and wife at the Drake Hotel in Chicago.

BUTTON CAUSES EXPLOSION

Friction Ignites Naphtha in Cleaning Plant and Two Women Are Hurt

A spark from the friction of a clothes button against the side of a naphtha filled tumbler caused an explosion in the plant of the New York Cleaning and Dyeing Company, 421 Grand Street, yesterday, which injured two women and shattered several windows. The tumbler, in a corrugated iron shed, was used as a revolving washer.

The concussion demolished the shed and Police Reserves from the Clinton Street Station, two ambulances and fire apparatus were sent to the scene.

Miss Margaret Matthews, 28 years old, of 60 Port Richmond Avenue, Port Richmond, S. I., a presser on the second floor of the plant, fractured her skull and lacerated an eye and arm when, panic stricken, she leaped from a window into the street. She was taken to Governeur Hospital where her condition was said to be serious.

Miss Ella Munse, 30, of 2,181 Grant Avenue, Bronx, was treated for shock suffered in the explosion. Five others at work in the plant escaped injury.

Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in New York City for week ending Saturday, June 23, were as follows: Native steers, 10.00 cents to 18.50 cents per pound and averaged 15.55 cents per pound.—Advt.

MRS. BUZZI IN TEARS TELLING LIFE STORY

Declares She Did Not Kill Schneider and Denies Ture Testimony of Admission.

PHONE CALLS TO HELP ALIBI

Woman Accused of Murder Is Firm Under Cross-Examination—In Witness Chair 4 Hours.

"Did you kill Fred Schneider?"

"No, of course not!"

"Where were you when he was shot?"

"At home."

"Did you love him?"

"Yes, I did love him."

The foregoing questions were asked in the Queens Supreme Court yesterday by James F. Donnelly, counsel for the defense, and the answers were made by Mrs. Anna Buzzi, charged with the murder of Frederick Schneider, a building contractor, in his automobile on Sound View Road, Classon Point, on Feb. 26.

Despite the law which gave her the right to refrain from testifying, the woman went on the witness stand and subjected herself to four hours' questioning by her attorney and the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Albert Cohn.

Led along by the quiet, soothing tones of her counsel, Mrs. Buzzi told her story with perfect composure, except when testifying of her affection for Schneider. Then she broke down and sobbed. She contradicted the testimony of her brother-in-law, William Ture, a taxicab driver, who declared that she had threatened to kill Schneider; that he, Ture, had got a gun for her at her request, and that she had confessed, after the shooting, that she had killed Schneider "so that no other woman could have him." She charged Ture with having threatened to "knock him (Schneider) cold." Establishing an alibi for herself, she testified that she had been in her apartment at 1,153 Grand Concourse, at 5:45 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder.

Under Long Cross-Examination.

The defense will try to show that it was impossible for Mrs. Buzzi to have committed the crime, which occurred about 5:15 o'clock, and then, as the prosecution alleges, gone home by trolley car, which would have taken more than half an hour.

Mrs. Buzzi was subjected to a long cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Cohn, but she stuck to her story without a break.

In giving her testimony her voice was so low and her manner so quiet that one expected her to break down when the prosecutor spoke harshly to her.

In her testimony Mrs. Buzzi said she was the divorced wife of Andrew Buzzi, and had been living with Schneider for about eight and a half years. She had been known as Mrs. Schneider during the year and a half that she and "Fred" lived in the apartment on the Grand Concourse. She said that she and Schneider never had quarreled; that there was no reason for her to kill him, that she was not jealous and that he did not threaten to go back to his wife or to leave her for any other woman. She said she was so much in love with Schneider that she had given him more than $5,000 to put into his business. Just before the shooting, he had not been taking her out as much as usual, she said, but that was because business was bad and he was short of money.

On the morning of the murder, Feb. 26, she testified that she and Schneider were up at 7 o'clock. The chauffeur called for Schneider, and he went to his office. She remained at home all day. Between 5 and 5:30 o'clock that afternoon, she said, Schneider came home. He stayed in the house from fifteen to twenty minutes, having coffee and coffee cake with her, and then left in his car with the dogs. Only the two chow dogs found barking over his body in the machine a short time later.

Tells of Telephone Calls.

When they kissed and said good-bye at the apartment, Mrs. Buzzi said, it was the last she saw of Schneider alive. She said that she had been expecting him to come to dinner at 7:30 — a girl friend — and stayed at home all the rest of the afternoon and throughout the evening until the police arrived. At 8:45, she testified, the janitor came to collect the garbage and a few minutes later Mrs. McGeehan, wife of City Court Justice McGeehan, telephoned and talked about ten minutes regarding the treatment for a chow dog that had been ill. After talking to Mrs. McGeehan she said she called up Schneider's store about 9 o'clock the night of the murder. She denied this, saying he must refer to the Friday before the shooting, the last time she had been there.

Unable to get any serious admissions out of the witness, the prosecutor finally gave up. Counsel for the defense called two operators of one-man trolley cars on the Classon Point line, Gustave Goldsmith and Benjamin Reichgott, who testified that they did not see Mrs. Buzzi on their cars running from Classon Point toward Mrs. Buzzi's home between 5:15 and 5:30 the afternoon of the murder. The trial will continue at 10 o'clock this morning.

Lynchings Drop From 33 to 11 For Six Months' Period

Lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1923 dropped to eleven, compared with thirty-three for the same period in 1922, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced yesterday.

The decrease was attributed to agitation for a Federal anti-lynching law, to the northward migration of negroes and the consequent desire to retain negro labor in the South. Florida had three lynchings, Georgia two, and Arkansas, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and Texas one each.

MERCURY HITS 95; NINE PROSTRATIONS

HEAT VICTIM TRIES SUICIDE

Woman Swallows Poison in Central Park—Rushed to Hospital by Policeman.

The intense heat of yesterday caused a woman to attempt to kill herself by swallowing poison in Central Park and necessitated restorative being applied to more than a score of persons in different parts of the city who collapsed under the scorching sun.

The heat wave was accompanied by a humidity which penetrated the usual places where people seek relief, and even at the beach resorts there was not sufficient breeze to make conditions halfway comfortable.

The Weather Bureau reported last night that the weather was expected to moderate slightly today and that there would be showers in the afternoon or evening.

The thermometer stood at 70 at 12 o'clock Sunday night, and in the next eight hours had declined two degrees. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning it began its upward climb and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon it reached 95 degrees, equaling the highest mark for the Summer made last Wednesday. The humidity declined from 41 to 26 between noon and 4 P. M., but by 5 o'clock it had jumped to 37, and as evening wore on it increased even more.

Policeman Gehrig of the Arsenal Station was standing near the Fifth Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street entrance to Central Park when he saw Mrs. Rose Bahr, 35 years old, of 346 West 146th Street collapse on the path. He hurried to her to the Presbyterian Hospital in an ambulance, where it was said the woman had swallowed iodine. The policeman later said that the woman complained of the heat.

The police did not succeed in getting the names of all of those who collapsed from the heat, but they reported the following:

Arthur Pecora, 23 years old, of 4,726 Park Avenue, the Bronx, was overcome on the Dyckman Street subway station and was removed to the Jewish Memorial Hospital.

Thomas Allen, 52 years old, who refused to give his address, was overcome in front of 235 East Fifty-ninth Street and was removed in an ambulance to Reception Hospital.

John Zunik, 55 years old, of 2,158 Second Avenue, was overcome at 64 East Fourth Street and was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

Fannie DeFiano, 18 years old, of 300 East Eighteenth Street was overcome in the subway station at Lexington Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street. She was attended by an ambulance surgeon and went home.

Augustine Sburno, 4 years old, of 18 Cherry Street, was overcome in front of 96 Roosevelt Street and in falling received several cuts on the head. He was taken to the Beekman Street Hospital.

Edward Farmine, 30 years old, of 348 East 140th Street, the Bronx, collapsed in front of the West Sixty-eighth Street police station. He was attended and went home.

Mary Lowe, 34 years old, of 94 Cortlandt Street, New York, fell in a faint in front of 50 Church Street, and was taken to Broad Street Hospital.

Josephine Ramaenti, 40 years old, of 309 East 103d Street was overcome at Second Avenue and 101st Street. She was attended and went home.

Mary Rogers, 30 years old, of West Hampton, L. I., was overcome at 106 West Forty-second Street. She was attended and went home.

SAYS RESTORATION CUTS STATUES' VALUE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 26.—Edouard Jonas, President of the Art Dealers' Syndicate of Paris and an expert at the Court of Appeals, said today in connection with the faked statuary scandal that any object of art loses its value and standing as antique by more than 10 per cent. of restoration. This is the ruling of the French customs, M. Jonas stated, and establishes a legal precedent on which to work in judging whether statues involved in the present controversy are fakes.

"This is general, so far as classification of statues is concerned, but of course the value of a statue is affected according to the location of the restored parts," M. Jonas pointed out. "Statues of which the head is a restoration have not more than 25 per cent. of their original value. Restored limbs take from the original value of the piece perhaps 33 per cent. Restored feet would not greatly affect the worth of a statue.

"If in the statue of the Virgin and Infant the child were restoration, that fact might not affect the value of the Virgin as a work of art, but if such a statue were sold without the facts regarding the restoration of the infant being stated, the transaction certainly would be a swindle.

"Any case of a sale where the existence of more than 10 per cent. restoration has not been stated is flagrant dishonesty. If in obtaining money under false pretenses and any museum which exhibits such statues without indicating such restoration is abusing the confidence placed in it by the public.

"We have such a case now in the complaint brought against the Louvre by an archaeologist named M. Dorine. He has charged the Louvre with swindling in charging him a franc admission to see genuine examples of art, whereas in his opinion the museum contains pieces that are flagrant restorations which are not indicated as such.

"If allegations against these statues are true, this man's case is certainly valid.

M. Jonas refused to give an opinion on the statues under discussion, but said if, as is charged, that the "Parthenay Kings" bought by the Gardner Museum of Boston were restored from the waist down and had undergone facial restorations, they were not worth more than 50 per cent. of the value placed upon them as genuine pieces.

Maxwell, Who Met Her There Recently, Said Her Attitude Was "Friendly."

George Maxwell, President of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, who was indicted recently on a charge of writing scurrilous letters reflecting on Mrs. Allan A. Ryan, voluntarily surrendered yesterday to District Attorney Banton. After being served with a bench warrant by Detective Sergeant John Cunniffe, Maxwell was arraigned before Judge Koehler of General Sessions in chambers and released in $5,000 bail. He will be arraigned for pleading this morning.

Maxwell, carefully groomed, appeared at the Criminal Courts Building at 9 o'clock accompanied by Nathan Burkan, his attorney. While Maxwell was posing for the photographers Burkan explained that Maxwell arrived in Montreal on Friday on the steamship Montcalm from England. Asked what his next step would be, Burkan repl

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Decline Again on the Stock Exchange, Industrial Shares Leading.

The weakness on the Stock Exchange yesterday was quite evidently a result of renewed activity by professional speculators for the decline. Apparently this selling was based on the signs, in Saturday's market, that the aggressive support which had turned the stock market upward on Friday was not continuing. When the outside financial public, as is the present instance, is taking no interest in the market, movement of volume will naturally be determined by that group of professional speculators which exists to its purpose. When it has pressed its advantage too far, speculative buying orders always appear, as they did last week; but if such purchases are promptly followed by profit-taking sales on a moderate recovery, the market is left very much where it was before.

All this rather obvious reasoning leaves the question open, why the investing public has deserted the stock market, and why the professional speculators for the rise have so much less staying power than the speculators for the fall. The plainest answer is the prevailing uncertainty over the character of the Autumn business movement. In this matter the visible facts do not differ from what they were a month or more ago. Commodity prices as a whole have been slowly falling for a dozen weeks; last week's average was about 6 per cent. below the year's highest. But it is still above the present year's low point, and more than 14 per cent. above last year's lowest.

Orders for future delivery in the principal industries are considerably lighter than they were in March or February, but every one who judged the situation at that time in the light of experience with similar recoveries from a prolonged depression expected precisely that result. The reaction in trade activity has thus far in fact been considerably less than was then predicted in many quarters. To a considerable extent the investing and speculating public may have been driven away by the news of recent Wall Street failures, to which it attributed a significance, in relation to the financial position generally, which did not belong to them.

The weakness yesterday converged mostly on the industrial shares, though declines of 1 or 2 points occurred in several railway stocks also. The motor-car shares were under special pressure on the ground that the waning of the general "business boom" would have its effect on purchasers of expensive luxuries and would not fulfill recent expectations of the manufacturers. That is a possibility. The American community has developed remarkable capacity in recent years for sudden changes in the matter of personal expenditure, and no one could at any time say how soon this consuming public, having had its brief fling of renewed extravagance last Winter and Spring, would be frightened at itself and return to practice of economy.

Two or three stocks of motor companies declined 4 or 5 points yesterday. But the market's weakness was pretty general; losses of 2 to 3 points occurred in numerous shares of other industrial companies. There was little recovery at the close; most stocks ended at or near the day's lowest prices. In spite of the wide movement of prices, the day's business on the Stock Exchange was the smallest in a fortnight, barely one-half the daily total of last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Foreign exchange moved very little, but rates ended a fraction under last week's. The mark declined, in ten-thousandths of a cent, from 9⅝ to 8¼; in one sense a narrow swing but, after all, a loss of 15 per cent. of the recovery made since Monday of last week. It is possible that the report of the German Chancellor's speech at Koenigsberg, on the German spirit of resistance and will to resist, may have had some effect on the mark. Most people would probably say, however, that even as a sentimental influence, increase of one and a half billion in a week in the supply of paper marks would constitute considerably more of a "bearish" influence than refusal to come to terms in the Ruhr.

MONEY.

MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1923.

Preparation for July 1 bank and corporation requirements imparted firm tone to market for Stock Exchange call funds, rate moving up to 6 per cent. shortly after midday from opening and renewal at 5, and interval of 5½. Maximum is highest charge since April 30. Time money market was quiet and without change at 4¾ @ 5 per cent. depending upon period; renewals are likewise arranged at these rates. Paper brokers reported broader inquiry for choice name bills, without any noticeable in business, which goes mainly at 5 per cent.

Money in London unchanged at 1¼ per cent.; short bills unchanged at 2 3-16 per cent.; three months' bills unchanged at 2 3-16 per cent.

Gold bullion 1d lower at 80s 8d. Taking the British Mint standard price of 85s per fine ounce as par, the market quotation of gold would represent a price of 105 at London. On the same basis the highest London price for gold for the year to date was 106, on Jan. 30. The highest price since open trading in gold was resumed at London in September, 1919, was 140¾, on Feb. 6, 1920; the lowest, 103⅝, on Feb. 21, 1923.

Clearing House Exchanges.

Exchange of checks at the New York Clearing House, $385,000,000; balances, $71,000,000; Federal Reserve credit balances, $71,000,000; exchanges this day a year ago, $370,000,000.

OIL BONDS TO BE REDEEMED.

Standard of California Will Pay Off $28,000,000 Gold Debentures.

The Standard Oil Company of California announces that, following the action of its Board of Directors, it will redeem and pay off on Aug. 1 all of its $28,000,000 outstanding ten-year 7 per cent. gold debentures, to include principal and interest accrued to Aug. 1, and plus a premium of 4 per cent. of the principal amount of the debentures. The notice of redemption is in accordance with the company's current issue of $30,000,000 serial 6 per cent. gold notes covering. These notes are due $2,000,000 annually on Aug. 1, 1924, to Aug. 1, 1938, inclusive.

"All holders of said debentures," says the announcement, "are hereby required to present the same with the matured coupons thereto attached, for redemption and payment, upon the terms above stated, on Aug. 1, 1923, at the office of Anglo-California Trust Company, in the City and County of San Francisco, or at the option of the holder, at the office of the Equitable Trust Company of New York, in the Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, said offices being the places at which said debentures are expressed to be payable. On Aug. 1, 1923, all interest on said debentures will cease."

Call in United Oil Producers Bonds.

The Coal and Iron National Bank yesterday sent out a call for the redemption and cancellation of United States Producers' Company 8 per cent. guaranteed and participating production bonds sufficient to exhaust $38,987 in the sinking fund. Tenders are asked up to July 16. This call brings the total redemption to $708,000.

Century Ribbon Sales Gain.

The Century Ribbon Mills report for May a larger gross business than for any previous May in the company's history. Sales were 34 per cent. greater than one year ago, the company stated.

KANSAS BANK TO REOPEN.

Examiner Sues to Recover Bonds in $1,500,000 Shortage of Cashier.

WICHITA, Kan., June 25.—Affairs of the American State Bank in the accounts of whose cashier a discrepancy of approximately $1,500,000 recently was found may be settled soon, according to C. J. Peterson, State Bank Commissioner.

A check shows none of the safety deposit boxes was touched, and the only account with a shortage is the bond department. The bank will be opened as soon as the assets of the institution are recovered, said Mr. Peterson.

A civil suit by Peterson as Bank Commissioner, asks the Bruen Crummer Company for the return of more than a million and a half dollars worth of bonds, title concerning which rests in the American State Bank, according to the petition of the suit.

It is reported on good authority that warrants for the arrest of J. M. Bickerton, President of the American State Bank, and Frank Bruen and Byron Crummer, Vice President of the Bruen Crummer Company and E. R. Crummer, Vice President of the American State Bank, will not be asked for until tomorrow. The warrants will charge an attempt to defraud.

W. & L. E. Income Shows Slump.

The net income of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway Company for 1922 was $656,597, according to the annual report made public yesterday. This compared with $670,192 earned during 1921. The gross income for 1922 was $15,153,685, against $14,770,708 the previous year.

Gold Bonds Ready for Exchange.

S. W. Straus & Co. announced yesterday that permanent first mortgage 6 per cent. serial coupon gold bonds of the 157 East Seventy-second Street issue now are ready for exchange for interim receipts.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

An "Easy Reaction."

Following three consecutive days of recovery in prices, the stock market yesterday again resumed its downward course, under leadership of the automobile stocks. There was little in the news of the day to account for the renewal of the decline, but a new crop of Wall Street rumors again appeared. This time the rumors had nothing to do with the financial position of brokerage firms but with the general business situation, especially as affecting the motor car industry. The failure of another Stock Exchange firm was announced, but it was considered insignificant in Wall Street circles. Possibly it was not accepted in the same light by the outside rank and file who were not familiar with the details of the firm's suspension, and it brought about some scattered selling, which was also partly influenced by the easy manner in which the market seemed to recover under the pressure of professional selling.

Factors in the Market.

It was extremely difficult yesterday to lay one's finger directly on the cause of the reaction. A half dozen reasons were advanced, any of which might have been used as a peg to get the market lower, but the truth of the matter was that the selling was plainly earmarked "professional," and that the various theories advanced were excuses rather than explanations for the decline. In the order of their importance, the following particular rumors were heard on the Street: That the fight for a soldiers' bonus this Fall, in view of the remarkable improvement in Governmental finances, is to be a serious and determined one; that the Ford Motor Company will announce as of July 1 a sharp cut in prices of all cars; that prominent Directors of the Atchison Railroad have set their feet down squarely on any increase in the dividend at today's meeting.

The "Raid Against the Makers."

There was much in the rumors of the day to account for the sharp reactions of two to five points or more in the active automobile stocks yesterday. The rumors had to do with pending price reductions, slackening in demand for cars, overstocking of second-hand models and the failure of some companies to liquidate old models carried over from last season. In all instances the rumors were officially or semi-officially denied, but these denials and the arguments which were advanced favoring the outlook had little effect on the market position of the shares, as they were not backed up by buying orders, and in the absence of support the professionals had full sway of the situation. The declines reported at the close indicated that their operations were highly successful. The attack started with a report that Henry Ford would cut prices on July 1. This was answered by news from Detroit that the organization had orders on its books equal to double a month's capacity, and that in view of this situation, a price cut was unlikely until current orders were filled. This news was shed like water from a duck's back. The attack against Studebaker was founded on a report that the company was stocked with 1922 models, which was denied.

Railroad Income in May.

The prediction made by railroad officials that May railroad earnings would be large and their belief that there has not yet come any perceptible decline in the earning ratio will be borne out if the preliminary statements issued yesterday by a few of the foreshanded roads may be considered criterions of what the rest of the Class 1 railroads will show. In the case of the Southern Pacific, whose May report was one of the first to be announced, the net for the month was approximately $100,000 below the excellent April statement and $492,000 ahead of May, 1922. For all the railways, last month's car loadings were nearly 5 per cent. above April and 27 per cent. above May of last year, when the roads earned 4.36 per cent. on property valuation.

Too Bullish Then, Too Bearish Now.

The head of one large brokerage house pointed out yesterday that speculative sentiment in the Street may always be counted upon to go too far either one way of the other. "Take the case of Baldwin Locomotive," he said. "I can remember very well not over two or three months ago, when Baldwin was selling around 140, many of my friends came to me and told me that Baldwin was sure to go to 200. They fully believed it at the time, and would not have been at all surprised to see the shares of this speculative vehicle sell at that price, but the very same people are now just as pessimistic as they were optimistic two months ago. No doubt the high prices of stocks in late March and early April were due in measure to just this sort of overenthusiasm, but under present conditions we are very likely to become just as overpessimistic, and the one excess is at least as bad as the other."

Flurry in Call Money.

Very frequently when money market rates advance sharply bankers are at a loss to furnish an adequate explanation, but this was not the case yesterday. All gave the same testimony, which was to the effect that the sudden run-up from 5 to 6 per cent. in the money rate had been caused by interior withdrawals and that more than $15,000,000 went out of the Street yesterday afternoon to outside destinations. It put the call money rate to the highest point in eight weeks. The main reason for the withdrawals is said to have been the fact that there are but five intervening days to the close of the Government's fiscal year on June 30, and that banking institutions in all parts of the country which are Government depositories will be required at that time to balance accounts and make annual settlements. Money brokers declare that there are still ample funds left in the Street to prevent anything which might even approach a strain on the market. But it was noticeable, too, that these brokers whose loans were called had considerable difficulty in arranging new accommodations to suit their views of rates, the majority of them being obliged to assent to the 6 per cent. figure.

A Rumanian Loan.

The financial district heard with some interest yesterday of Rumania's effort to secure a loan of $6,000,000 from London. According to the reports received here, the loan would be one-third in cash and two-thirds in materials. Bankers were reported here as being indisposed to put in a bid, and the statement was made by one house which has played an important part in past international transactions that no competition would be put up by this country for foreign business for at least a few months. Despite the marked success of the Austrian loan, the banking fraternity is little disposed to go out of its way for the average run of foreign business, but it is still quite generally believed that the New York market will again play an important role when financing on a scale commensurate with that of the Austrian loan is undertaken.

RAILROAD EARNINGS CONTINUE TO GAIN

Four Lines Report Increases for May and for First Five Months of 1923.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC LEADS

Total Revenue of $108,411,534 Represents an Advance of $11,181,413 Since Last Year.

Net earnings of railroads for May, made public yesterday, indicate continuation of the high earnings that marked the first four months of the year. While the number of reports was small, it was sufficiently large, and the roads were of sufficient size to warrant a prediction in railroad circles that the other roads would show similar gains for May and for the first five months of the year.

The report of the Southern Pacific Company showed the largest net earnings for May since 1918, the figures being within $240,723 of the high mark set that year. The total net income for May was $4,148,456, against $3,656,086 for the same month last year, an increase of $492,890. The net income for the first five months was $16,358,485, an increase of $4,210,600 over the corresponding period of 1922.

The gross income of the company for May was $23,160,155, of which $16,130,235 was derived from freight and $4,913,606 from passenger service. Although the total operating revenues increased $2,036,249 over the previous year, the operating expenses mounted $1,393,685 to a total of $17,101,876 for the month. The greater part of this increase in operating expense was due to the added cost of maintenance of ways, structure and equipment and transportation.

The total revenue for the first five months was $108,411,534, an increase of $11,181,413 compared with last year.

Another road to report a substantial increase was the Wabash. The net earnings for May after payment of taxes, were $1,190,147, against $705,367 last year, an increase of $441,780. The May earnings also increased over those of last April, when net earnings were $1,146,988. The gross income of the Wabash for May was $5,721,076, against $4,900,000 in May, 1922. Net earnings for the first five months were $4,631,562, against $2,959,961 for the same period of 1922.

Similar conditions are reflected in the report of the Kansas City Southern; the May net earnings, after payment of taxes, were $414,989, compared with $303,876 a year ago. For the first five months net earnings were $1,999,514, against $1,460,354.

The Norfolk Southern also showed a gain in its net operating income of $103,-905, compared with $69,509 for the same period last year. The net operating income for the five months' period was $479,132, against $340,454 in 1922.

TOBACCO PRODUCTION SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Cigarette Output for May Totals 5,556,494,293—Cigars and Snuff Also Gain.

Tobacco production increased during the first five months of this year, according to figures of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Cigarette production leads all classifications both in quantity and increase over last year, while the increase in snuff production is the smallest.

Cigarette output for May was 27 per cent. more than in the previous May; cigars, 10 per cent.; smoking and chewing tobacco 1 per cent. and snuff output less than 1 per cent. For the five months, cigarette production was up 32 per cent., cigar output 10 per cent., smoking and chewing tobacco 1.3 per cent. and snuff output 8 per cent.

For May, production figures follow: Cigarettes, 5,556,494,293; cigars, 575,-915,851; manufactured tobacco (pounds), 33,996,629; snuff (pounds), 3,264,231.

For the five months, production figures follow: Cigarettes, 25,289,524,672; cigars, 2,749,613,544; manufactured tobacco (pounds), 158,654,103; snuff (pounds), 17,814,440.

Compared with 1921, cigarette production for last May showed an increase of 34 per cent. and for the five months of 35 per cent. Snuff production compared with 1921 showed gains of 20 per cent. and 26 per cent. for May and the five-month period, respectively.

UPTOWN BOWERY BANK.

New Branch Does Thriving Business on Its Opening Day.

The Bowery Savings Bank opened its branch office in the uptown financial district yesterday. From the moment the doors of the new sixteen story building at 110 East Forty-second Street opened at 8:30 o'clock until closing time at 7 o'clock last evening there was a constant stream of new business flowing into the bank.

Officials of the bank reported that 2,839 new accounts had been opened, at the rate of 270 an hour, with total deposits of $502,340, or average deposits of $178. More than 11,000 persons visited the bank, many being attracted by the air cooling system which kept down the temperature in the bank, despite the hot weather.

The new building will house the executive offices of the bank, which will still continue to have its original bank on the Bowery. According to present plans the bank's hours will be such as to attract the savings of those men and women whose employment prevents them from doing their banking business during the ordinary hours.

GOODRICH TIRES CHEAPER.

Reduction of 7 to 13½ Per Cent. Announced.

The B. F. Goodrich Company yesterday announced a reduction of from 7 to 13½ per cent. in tire prices, 4 to 11 per cent. on tubes and 2½ to 10 per cent. on solid rubber tires. This reduction meets the cuts announced by other companies in the last few weeks.

Figures covering the production of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company for the first five months of the current year, and published in the financial district yesterday, show an output of 2,909,987 tires against 2,297,640 in the same period last year, 1,556,636 tubes against 1,359,-419 and 32,005,014 pairs of rubber heels against 13,845,497 last year.

STATE BANKING LAW UPHELD BY COURT

Mutual Benefit League Questioned Ban on Competition With Private Loan Concerns.

ALBANY, June 25.—The Lowman act, enacted by the 1923 Legislature, prohibiting persons from competing singly or in groups with private bankers, savings banks or savings and loan associations, was upheld as constitutional in the United States Circuit Court here today.

The decision was delivered in an action brought by the Mutual Benefit League of America, for itself and about 25 other organizations. Seeking to assure the operation of so-called 3 and 4 per cent. loan trust companies providing money loans for home building purposes at 3 and 4 per cent.

The Court granted permission for the organizations to continue business under contracts made prior to June 1, when the law became effective, but declared illegal and void contracts signed since that time.

Oliver D. Burden of Buffalo appeared for the league, which has headquarters in Buffalo and branches in Albany, Rochester, Syracuse, Pittsburgh and St. Louis, while Edward G. Griffin, Deputy Attorney General, appeared for Attorney General Carl Sherman in upholding the law. United States Circuit Judge Julius Mayer and United States District Judges Frank Cooper and Augustus Hand presided.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Transactions in the European exchanges yesterday were quiet, the narrow movement of rates reflecting little activity and demand for any of the foreign bills. The participation of the banks in the day's business was limited, in fact to the requirements of customers.

Slight declines were recorded in the leading rates in the forenoon session, French francs selling off to 6.17 cents from 6.19½ on Saturday, Italian sagged to a new low for the year at 4.44 cents, with Swiss also at a new low at 17.61 cents. The Scandinavians, Holland, Spanish and Belgian receded for small losses, while the German mark after early dealings around 8⅝ ten thousandths of a cent dropped to 8⅛ in an adjustment to the official rate fixed in Germany; Sterling was fractionally higher at the start at $4.62⅛, but later sold off with the rest of the list to $4.61⅛, at which point it closed on Saturday.

South Americans were irregular, exchange on Brazil and Uruguay showing improvement, with declines in Argentina and Chile. The Chinese and Japanese rates were heavy, on a continuance of the lower prices for silver.

In the subjoined table the quotation on sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

Principal and semi-annual interest (January 1 and July 1) payable in gold at Illinois Merchants Trust Company, Chicago, Trustee, or at the option of the holder at National Bank of Commerce in New York. Coupon bonds registerable as to principal. Denominations, $1,000, $500, and $100 interchangeable.

Interest Payable Without Deduction for Normal Federal Income Tax Not to Exceed 2 Per Cent

For information regarding these Bonds we refer to a letter of Mollie Netcher Newbury, President of the Corporation, copies of which may be had on request and which states that:

COMPANY: Netcher Building Corporation is organized under the laws of Illinois to acquire the leasehold and building at 16 North State Street, Chicago, occupied by the Boston Store.

SECURITY: The Bonds will be secured, in opinion of counsel, by a closed first mortgage on all the property of the Corporation, which has an appraised value of $1,790,000. The reproduction value of the building, less depreciation, as appraised by Holabird & Roche of Chicago, architects of the building, is $1,200,000. The value of the leasehold as determined by the Valuation Committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board is $590,000.

INCOME: Boston Store of Chicago, Inc. has a lease on this building until 1941 at an annual rental of $180,000, plus maintenance, insurance and taxes. The ground rental is $51,000 a year, plus taxes, leaving an annual income of $129,000 available to pay bond interest, Federal taxes and miscellaneous expenses. It is estimated that the surplus income of this corporation during the life of the lease to the Boston Store will be more than sufficient to retire the entire issue. The rental is payable by the Boston Store irrespective of destruction or impairment of the building.

BUSINESS OF TENANT: The Boston Store of Chicago is the second largest department store in Chicago and is the second largest strictly cash store in America. It was established in 1873, and from a very small beginning has prospered and grown steadily until it occupies half a city block with more than 23 acres of floor space.

DESCRIPTION OF BUILDING: The building consists of 17 stories and two basements, constituting the north section of the Boston Store located at what is known as "the busiest corner in the world" at State and Madison Streets, Chicago. The property has a frontage of 46.6 feet on State Street, lying immediately south of the alley between Madison and Washington Streets, and has a depth of 115 feet. The leasehold on the ground on which the building stands runs to October 31, 2003, on very advantageous terms.

SINKING FUND: The indenture securing these Bonds will provide for a sinking fund payable July 1, 1924, and each July 1 thereafter, sufficient to retire at least $50,000 bonds each year. Under this agreement not more than $100,000 bonds can be called at the sinking fund prices in any one year. It is estimated that surplus income available for retirement of Bonds during the life of this Bond issue will be sufficient to retire more than $750,000 par value of Bonds.

SAFEGUARDS: The indenture securing the Bonds will provide that—

(a) The Corporation shall pay no dividends on its capital stock so long as any of its Bonds are outstanding.

(b) The Corporation shall carry insurance to the full insurable value of the building and improvements, and use and occupancy insurance shall be carried to the full extent of the rental value of the premises, for a period of not less than 18 months.

We recommend these Bonds for investment, and offer them when, as and if issued and subject to the approval of counsel

Issuance authorized by California Railroad Commission

Information contained herein is furnished us by Mr. H. F. Jackson, of San Francisco, Vice-President of the Company:

The Sierra and San Francisco Power Company owns a self-contained electric generating and distributing system, which it operated as an independent light and power company until December 31, 1919, when its operative properties were leased for fifteen years to the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Three hydro-electric generating plants with a present installed capacity of about 60,000 hp. are located nearer to San Francisco than any similar plants in the State. An auxiliary steam plant of about 36,000 hp. capacity located within the city limits of San Francisco gives the Company a total installed electric generating capacity of about 96,000 hp. The transmission and distribution system includes more than 1,070 miles of lines.

For the last five years of independent operation ended December 31, 1919, net earnings averaged 2.37 times First Mortgage Bond interest. Since that date earnings of the leased property have greatly increased, and for the year ended March 31, 1923, the net earnings are certified by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company to be $1,568,780, or practically three times the annual interest charges on all First Mortgage Bonds now to be outstanding.

These Bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on the entire property owned by the Company.

During the term of the lease, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company covenants to pay interest on all outstanding First Mortgage 5% Bonds and on all Second Mortg

Prospects Excellent

The above epitomizes the remarkable record of a company whose common stock is now selling for only slightly over twice the present annual earnings. This is due to special conditions outlined in our analysis of the company's position.

In our opinion this common stock offers excellent prospects for a very high investment return within reasonable time and substantial market appreciation.

ELEVATED DIVIDEND RISE IS FORECAST

Indications Point to a Resumption of Old 4 Per Cent. Rate on the Next Payment.

HINGES ON WAGE OUTCOME

Interborough Will Seek Adjustment With 14,000 Employes on Next Wednesday.

Despite the fact that the Interborough Rapid Transit Company was unable to pay the full rental dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. annually to the stockholders of the Manhattan Railway Company for the last quarter, there is every indication, it was learned from an official source yesterday, that the next payment at the rate of 4 per cent. would be made.

When the Board of Directors of the Interborough recently announced that they were able to pay a dividend of only 60 cents per share, whereas the contract called for a payment of 75 cents a share, if the money was available, the question was at once raised in financial circles as to how the company would be able to make future payments. Those who brought up the question pointed out that the rental increased after last quarter from 3 per cent. to 4 per cent., and that at the same time the company was facing requests for increases in wages from its 14,000 employes.

Whether or not the company is able to meet the 4 per cent. dividend at the close of the present quarter will depend, one man in close touch with the situation said yesterday, on wage adjustment that was to be made with the employes at the meeting to be held on Wednesday. If this adjustment was such as to permit the road to continue to make the earnings it had for the past six months, there was no doubt that it would be able to meet its future obligations as they come due.

The cause for the recent cut, it is said, was not due to the earnings in the past six months, but to failure to earn sufficient funds to pay the rental in the previous six months. At that time the regular dividend was paid, so the cut had to be made at a later date.

Many of the labor saving devices that the company had expected to install have only recently been put in operation, it is pointed out, and there has not been time to bring about any great saving of labor as the result of their installation. Such savings should, however, begin to be apparent in the earnings for the next quarter.

PHILADELPHIA

First Closed Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds, Series "A"

Dated February 15, 1923 Due February 15, 1933

Interest payable February 15th and August 15th

GUARANTEED PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST BY THE "PHILADELPHIA COMPANY FOR GUARANTEEING MORTGAGES"

Fully registered bonds, denomination $1,000

A sinking fund provision, applicable to the Series "A" bonds, will be sufficient to retire $500,000 of these bonds before maturity

THE LAND TITLE & TRUST COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, TRUSTEE

These bonds are secured by a first closed mortgage on Philadelphia's newest and largest hotel, situated at the southeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia. The hotel will be an 18-story building of the most modern fireproof construction, located in the heart of the shopping district in close proximity to all department stores, railway stations, etc. Guest rooms to the number of 1,210, each with private bath, also banquet rooms, dining rooms, rest rooms, with every arrangement made for the comfort and convenience of guests. The building will occupy the entire lot, 194 feet on Chestnut Street and 255 feet on Ninth Street to Sansom Street, thus having three fronts. The ground and building have been conservatively appraised for mortgage purposes at $7,250,000, and it has been estimated that the total cost completed excluding furniture, will reach $8,500,000.

This is a Philadelphia conceived and Philadelphia owned enterprise. The corporation owning the hotel is the Benjamin Franklin Realty and Holding Corporation, incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania; officers, John C. Martin, President; Charles Gimbel, Vice-President; Albert M. Greenfield, Treasurer; Edgar W. Nicholson, Secretary. Directors, Jacob D. Lit, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Ellis A. Gimbel, Herbert J. Tily, Harry G. Sundheim and the officers.

First Mortgage Series "A" Bonds (Fully Guaranteed Principal and Interest)	$4,300,000
First Mortgage Series "B" Bonds	2,300,000
Second Mortgage Series "A" Bonds	2,100,000
Second Mortgage Series "B" Bonds	1,300,000
	$10,000,000

Capital Stock, no par value 3,500 shares

The First Mortgage Series "A" bonds are prior in lien and payment in all respects to the First Mortgage Series "B" bonds as well as to the Second Mortgage bonds.

It has been variously estimated that the net earnings of the hotel will be at least four to five times the interest requirements of the First Mortgage Series "

LOCAL BOND MARKET HAS FEW OFFERINGS

Awards Made of $16,720,000 Moffet Tunnel and $2,114,000 Boston & Maine Issues

Bankers Announce Several Securities for Investment—Demand for Land Bank Bonds.

New bond offerings for today constitute one of the year's lightest days of business in this respect. New issues expected shortly are said to be in substantial volume. Awards were made yesterday of $3,835,000 of bonds, consisting of $0,720,000 of Moffet Tunnel Construction District (Denver) 6½ per cent. bonds, maturing twenty to forty years, and of $3,114,000 Boston & Maine Railroad Company 6 per cent. equipment certificates. The tunnel bonds were awarded to R. M. Grant & Co. and the equipment securities to Harris, Forbes & Co., Curtis & Sanger, and Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Announcement was made that up to 3 o'clock subscriptions to the new Federal Land Bank 4½ per cent. bonds, due in 1965, were in excess of $32,000,000, with the Pacific Coast yet to be heard from. Demand in the Middle Western States was particularly strong. There were $45,000,000 of these bonds offered.

A new offering of $1,000,000 Sierra and San Francisco Power Company first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, due in 1949, is being made today by Harris, Forbes & Co. and Coffin & Burr, Inc. The bonds are priced at 93 to yield about 5½ per cent. The properties of this company have been leased for fifteen years by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which has covenanted to pay interest on all outstanding first mortgage bonds and on all second mortgage bonds.

A new issue of $450,000 Des Moines 4½ per cent. public service water works bonds, due 1934 to 1943, is being offered by George B. Gibbons & Co., to yield 4.30 per cent.

A block of 30,000 shares of the Johnson Educator Biscuit Company's cumulative and participating Class A stock of no par value is being offered at $25 a share by Morgan, Livermore & Co., Inc., of Boston.

An additional issue of $2,750,000 Electric Bond and Share Company 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock is being offered by Bonbright & Co. at 97½ to yield 6.15 per cent. Proceeds will be used for the expansion of the company's business. The common stock of the Electric Bond and Share Company is owned entirely by the General Electric Company.

A new issue of $1,000,000 Metcher Building Corporation first (closed) mortgage leasehold 6 per cent. sinking fund gold bonds is being offered at 100 by Ames, Emerich & Co. and A. G. Becker & Co. The Metcher Building Corporation is an Illinois concern. Its bonds are due in 1933.

DECLARES EXPLOSIVE TURNS LEAVES TO IRON

Dr. Munroe Also Tells of Making Fabrics Permanent by a New Method.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Dr. Charles E. Munroe, chief chemist of the Bureau of Mines on explosives, announced today that experiments were being carried out which had as their object the making permanent, by the use of explosives, of perishable things such as leaves of trees, pieces of lace and various fabrics. The process is known as the "Munroe effect," and it is hoped to bring about developments which will be of benefit to the world industrially.

"We have not only turned leaves of trees and laces into iron," said Dr. Munroe, "but we could write words with fire—in other words, with detonated explosives—and turn them into iron, exactly as the aviator in the sky writes words with smoke.

"At the moment the explosive is detonated, this solid explosive is converted into gas, occupying the same space as the explosive, and it therefore has the same density. The molecules from which it is resolved travel at an enormous rate of speed, probably more than 30,000 feet per second. This gas is intensely hot. As the molecules strike each other, there is great turbulence.

"The gas assumes a vortex motion. It moves in the direction of least resistance, where there is a cavity in the explosive above the iron base on which it rests there is an impingement upon the base. There, because of the high velocity in which the molecules are moving, because of the whirl of the vortex, because of the high temperature that exists, because of all of these at the moment of detonation, which is practically the moment of impact, the metal is melted and eroded and therefore the border device (either leaves or lace or whatever is used) is reproduced on and made a part of the metal base.

"The experiments are growing out of the increased industrial use of millions of pounds of explosives left over from the war, which are being distributed by the War Department for peacetime uses."

DENIES GAS RATE IS RAISED.

Northern Westchester Co. Loses Under New Schedule, Says Stratton.

Frederick A. Stratton, President of the Northern Westchester Lighting Company, yesterday denied a report, sent from Ossining Sunday, that his company had applied for a sixty-cent increase in the price of gas. Samuel Untermyer, the same report said, had termed the application "a master subservience" to continue to collect in another way the meter service charge now banned by law.

"May I say that the Northern Westchester Lighting Company, furnishing gas in Ossining, was ordered 65 cents per M. by the Public Service Commission, as were all the gas companies in the State, as the new rates for gas to comply with the O'Brian law," said Mr. Stratton today. "In the territory served by the Northern Westchester Lighting Company the rate now in effect is a commodity rate and lower than the rate with the service charge in effect before June 2, when the O'Brian law went into effect, and no consumer using the same amount of gas will have a larger bill than before the service charge was prohibited by the O'Brian law, and the income of the gas company will be less than before, although the rate before was fixed by order of the Public Service Commission."

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company will act as coupon paying agent of the five following issues: New Orleans Public Service, Inc., 6 per cent. mortgage income bond, McMyler-Interstate Company first mortgage 6 per cent. sinking fund bonds.

Affidavit of the Retsamert Copper Corporation are discussed in an analysis just prepared by A. A. Housman & Co.

The Metropolitan Trust Company has been appointed registrar of 25,000,000 preferred stock, par value $100, and 1,500 shares common stock, no par value, of the Credit Alliance Corporation.

Hirsch, Lilienthal & Bertles have issued for distribution to investors a "buy investors" circular containing a quarter list of high-grade securities to yield the investor from 4.50 per cent. to 5.70 per cent.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Union National Corporation John H. Thayer was elected a Vice President.

DENIES ANY DELAY TO FOREIGN LETTERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—There is just $10,000 left of the $6,500,000 appropriation for carrying the foreign mails during the fiscal year ending next Saturday, but in spite of this the Post Office Department announced today that all first class mail would be sent abroad and there would not even be any delay, as has been expected. It will be necessary, however, to hold parcel post for a week, so that its transmission can be paid for out of the fund available July 1. A statement issued jointly this afternoon by Postmaster General Harry S. New and Paul Henderson, the Second Assistant Postmaster, in charge of the foreign mails division, reads:

"The appropriation for carrying mail originating in America addressed to foreign countries for the fiscal year of 1923, which ends with the 30th of June, is $6,500,000.

"After Congress adjourned, and after it was too late to secure a deficiency estimate to increase this appropriation it became apparent that the volume of foreign mail had grown to such an extent as to preclude the possibility of paying for its transportation abroad out of the $6,500,000 made available by Congress for this purpose. Realizing this on the 15th of March the rates paid to steamship companies for the transportation of this mail were substantially reduced by the Post Office Department. A careful watch kept on the volume of mail moving from that date until the 15th of May indicated that there was still in existence an unprecedented volume of mail being offered for dispatch abroad, consequently on June 1st the Department again substantially reduced the rates being paid the steamship companies, with the net result that the Post Office Department entered the last week of this fiscal year with apparently but $10,000 left with which to pay for the transport during that week.

"The department is glad to announce that with this small amount of money it will be able to arrange for the transportation of all letter mail which may be offered for shipment abroad during the week. It will be, however, necessary to hold such parcel post as may accumulate during this week, in order that it may be dispatched next week and the payment for its transport covered during the next fiscal year. As matters are now arranged, there will be no delay in first-class mail."

Mr. Henderson characterized as absurd a rumor that the mails were being purposely delayed so that the Leviathan, largely to satisfy Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board, could sail July 4 with $1,000,000 worth of mail on board.

While parcel post packages were beginning to accumulate in the Varick Street Station yesterday, in view of the Post Office Department's decision not to send any packages to Europe this week, the Executive Committee of the Merchants' Association held a special meeting to discuss the situation.

According to F. B. De Berard, Director of Research of the association, the asking of President Harding's intervention was considered, but this move was deemed unwise. Only Congress can order an increase in appropriations, the committee was told.

Postal cards, however, will be sent to all the members of the organization, suggesting that, when sending letters to Europe this week, they specify the boat to carry them.

FORM KNAUTH COMMITTEE.

Creditors Select President Loasby of Equitable Trust as Chairman.

The committee of creditors of the bankrupt brokerage firm of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne was organized yesterday. Arthur W. Loasby, recently elected President of the Equitable Trust Company, who will act as Chairman, authorized the following statement:

"The committee which has been formed to act for the creditors of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne consists of: Lewis L. Clarke, President of The American Exchange National Bank; George L. Bourne, President of the Superheater Company; Louis K. Stoddard; A. W. Loasby, Chairman. It is probable that a fifth member of the committee will be added within the next few days. The counsel, as heretofore announced, will be Messrs. Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern.

"The committee will act in the interest of all unsecured creditors, whether the claims arose out of transactions in the banking or exchange departments of the firm. The members of the committee are acting at the request of unsecured creditors, although a number of the institutions of which the members of the committee are active officers have no claims of any kind against the firm.

"The committee will, of course, cooperate in every way with the receiver and his counsel and the fullest opportunity for examination of the affairs of the firm is being furnished to the committee by the receiver.

"The auditors for the receiver hope to have a report ready at an early date, and the committee will promptly communicate with the creditors."

Geddes Off to England Today.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, though still feeble as a result of a long illness, left Washington today for New York and will sail tomorrow on the Aquitania for a vacation in England. Secretary Hughes called upon the Ambassador yesterday to say farewell.

WARNS PACKAGE SENDERS.

Postmaster Morgan Asks More Care in Addresses to Russia.

Postmaster Morgan invites attention to the following announcement by the Post Office Department:

"A number of parcel post packages destined for Russia are being mailed in the United States incorrectly addressed because the senders furnish only the name of the village where the addressee lives, without furnishing the name of the government or province in which the post office is situated.

"Since several villages may bear the same name and are located in different governments or provinces, in order to insure packages reaching their destination, full and definite information must be furnished as to the whereabouts of the addressees."

Curtails Crude Oil Purchases.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., June 25.—The Prairie Oil and Gas Company today announced that effective tomorrow it will curtail its purchases of crude oil in all fields in Oklahoma, Kansas and North Texas by pro-rating runs from wells. The company explained it could not continue to purchase and store such a large proportion of the mid-Continent production, which has steadily increased, in the face of decreased sales to refineries, many of which are supplying their needs from other sources, including California.

Application is expected to be made to list the "Class A" Stock on the Boston and Chicago Stock Exchanges

For detailed information regarding this issue, attention is directed to a letter (of which copies will be furnished upon request) from Mr. E. F. Cullen, President of Johnson Educator Food Company, to the Bankers, which letter he has summarized as follows:

History and Business: The Johnson Educator Food products were originated about 1885 by Dr. William L. Johnson, of Boston, who made the first Educator Crackers in very small quantities for use in his professional practice.

Johnson Educator Food Company, to succeed which Johnson Educator Biscuit Company is being organized, was incorporated in 1902 under the laws of Massachusetts. Subsequent developments have raised the Company to the ranks of the few really important biscuit-manufacturers in the United States, and the name "Johnson Educator" has achieved a national reputation especially for the quality of its products, of which there are at present over 140 varieties. Many of these Educator brands are admittedly without competition.

Property: The new Company will own, upon completion of the present program, in fee and free of all liens, a modern, well-equipped factory in Cambridge, Mass., covering approximately an acre of ground in one of the most desirable manufacturing sections of Greater Boston, and a smaller factory in Newburyport, Mass. These properties, including equipment, have been appraised for the Bankers by Messrs. Lockwood, Greene & Co., Engineers, of Boston and New York. They are to be carried on the books of the new Company at approximately $520,000, while the replacement value is about $640,000. The Company also will own all manufacturing processes, trade-marks, etc., pertaining to the Johnson Educator business.

Earnings: Dividends have been paid without interruption for the past sixteen years. Based on conditions like those prevailing in 1922, and on orders received and indicated, the net earnings for the twelve months following the completion of the present program are estimated at two and one-half times the amount necessary for the payment of the dividend at the rate of $2 per share per annum on 60,000 shares of Cumulative-and-Participating "Class A" Stock.

Dividends and Voting Power: The Cumulative-and-Participating "Class A" Stock will be entitled to preferential cumulative dividends of $2 per share per annum, from May 1, 1923. After such dividends and after annual provision shall have been made for the purchase of Cumulative-and-Participating "Class A" Stock, $1 per share per annum may be paid on the "Class B" Stock, except that no dividend may be paid on the "Class B" Stock that will reduce the earned surplus below $200,000. The two classes of stock will participate equally in any further dividends. "Class A" stockholders will be entitled to full voting-power whenever the new Company shall be in arrears in respect of an amount equal to four quarterly dividends and then until payment in full of all arrears of quarterly dividends.

Purchase of "Class A" Stock: An amount of earned surplus at the rate of $1 per share of "Class A" Stock outstanding but not exceeding $50,000 annually, prior to the payment of any dividend on the "Class B" Stock, will be applicable under the provisions of the Articles of Organization, after May 1, 1926, to the purchase and retirement of Cumulative-and-Participating "Class A" Stock if obtainable at $30 per share or less.

Purpose of Issue: 30,000 shares of the Cumulative-and-Participating "Class A" Stock will be required to retire the now-outstanding preferred stock. The proceeds of the balance (this issue) will be used to pay off a mortgage of $125,000; to supply additional working capital with which to carry through a program of expansion made necessary by the growing demand for the Company's products, and for other corporate purposes.

Management: Mr. E. F. Cullen, President of the Company, and the general personnel, who have been largely responsible for the success of the business, will continue with the Company.

All legal matters are to be approved by Messrs. Reavis, Dorr, Travis & Marshall, of New York, for the Bankers, and by Messrs. Parsons, Ball, Dutch & Sawin, of Boston, for the Company. The properties have been examined and appraised by Messrs. Lockwood, Greene & Co. The books of the Company have been audited by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co.

A substantial part of the above issue having been sold, subscriptions for the balance will be received, when, as and if issued and accepted by us, and subject to approval by counsel, at

$25 per Share (plus accrued dividends) to Yield 8%

We reserve the right to reject any or all subscriptions, to allot less than the amount applied for, and to close the subscription-books at any time without notice.

Descriptive circular will be furnished on request.

KIEL CANAL CASE UP IN THE WORLD COURT

PRECEDENT IS INVOLVED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, June 25.—Today's public session of the World Court was monopolized by Poland's application to intervene in the question of the steamer Wimbledon, involving the navigation of the Kiel Canal.

The fact that this was the first public session on the Wimbledon case, which is considered the most important yet submitted to the court, besides being the first case of compulsory jurisdiction, and also that Professor Schücking was to sit on the bench as a full-fledged although temporary German Judge, attracted a large crowd of interested listeners. Legal and diplomatic representatives of the powers concerned in the case, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, which are arraigning Germany, and Poland as an intervening power, were present, besides many other foreign representatives who had received instructions from their Governments to follow the case closely.

According to Article 40 of the court statutes any State desiring to intervene under the terms of Article 63 or 63 must inform the Registrar in writing before the beginning of oral proceedings, and the Court or its President is to take the necessary steps to enable the intervening State to inspect documents in so far as they relate to the interpretation of the convention in question and to submit its observations to the Court.

Difference on Basis for Poland.

Some differences of opinion arose in the Court today as to whether Poland should base her application to intervene on Article 63 or 63. Poland has applied for permission to intervene under Article 63, which provides that if a State considers that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by a decision it may ask to intervene. In support of its application the Polish Government pointed out that it was the consignor and owner of the Wimbledon's cargo and that in consequence of the refusal of the German authorities to allow the Wimbledon to pass a quantity of rolling stock for the Polish railways remained unutilized for two weeks. Therefore, it was held that the attitude adopted by the German authorities constituted a violation of the rights and material interests guaranteed to Poland under Article 380 of the Versailles Treaty.

The British Government contended that it would be preferable for Poland to intervene under Article 63, according to which whenever the construction of a convention is in question every State which is a party to the convention has the right to intervene in the proceedings.

The Polish Government has declared that it does not consider it necessary to urge its right of appointing a Polish Judge for the issue. The German Government stated that it left the question of Poland's application to intervene to the decision of the Court.

A member of the Court pointed out to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that each time a similar question regarding an application of the Court statutes was taken up and thrashed out it naturally formed a precedent for the future application of the statutes.

Court Impresses Schucking.

When asked for his impressions of his first session of the Court, Professor Schücking stated that they were most excellent in every way. He felt on a footing of perfect equality, he said, with all the other Judges. From the beginning the Court has been open to non-members of the League, and in May, 1922, the League Council, acting under power conferred by Article 35 of the Court statutes, opened it to all the nations of the world on condition of the deposit of a declaration accepting the jurisdiction of the tribunal.

Since President Harding's St. Louis speech the question of giving advisory opinions to the League has been much discussed here. This question was fully considered at the time the Court statutes were drawn up. As giving such opinions was not considered a judicial function, the statutes as adopted by the League Assembly do not directly mention advisory opinions, but the Court after a careful consideration reached the conclusion that there were certain clauses of the statutes which by implication incorporated the provision in Article 14 of the covenant on that subject.

It was therefore decided that while the Court would not be justified in taking the position that it would not under any circumstances give advisory opinions it remained with the Court to determine whether in a particular case, considering the nature of the question submitted, it would give such an opinion. The rules adopted by the Court are based on this view.

It is not considered here that the giving of advisory opinions necessarily make the Court dependent on the League.

BRITISH HEAR BECK EXALT SUPREME COURT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 25.—Under the auspices of the Council of Legal Education, James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, delivered at Gray's Inn Hall tonight the first of two lectures on the functions of the United States Supreme Court. Among those present were Lord Shaw, Lord Justice Atkin, Lord Justice Bankes, Sir Henry Duke, Sir Miles Mattinson, K. C., Sir Lewis Coward, K. C., and Sir Claude Schuster.

Mr. Beck described the Supreme Court as the balance wheel of the Constitution with reference to its function to set at naught any law of a State or of the Federal Congress, or to invalidate any act of any public official that was in violation of the provisions of the Constitution. While not infrequently the party whose power was thus curbed had vented its wrath and disappointment on the court, yet after the earthquake of party passion had spent its force, he said, "the still, small voice" of the Supreme Court had always prevailed. "I believe," Mr. Beck said, "that the American people, notwithstanding past demonstrations of dissatisfaction, have a higher regard for the Supreme Court than for any other institution of our Government, with the possible exception of the Presidency. It is certain that without the Supreme Court the American Republic, with its great heterogeneous democracy, would have perished long since."

He said that the moral power of the Supreme Court, which had neither sword nor purse to enforce its edicts, was the highest example he knew of the great ideal of the Anglo-Saxon race, "A government of laws and not of men." No scandal had ever sullied its fair name, he declared, and against its mandates there has never been any lasting protest.

Viscount Haldane, who presided, said that it was one of the greatest tributes to the law-abiding instincts of the American nation that notwithstanding that the Supreme Court had no executive power its behests were always obeyed.

CROMWELL DEFENDS THE STOCK EXCHANGE

President Puts Loss to Public by Failures in Two Years at Less Than $5,000,000.

Seymour L. Cromwell, President of the New York Stock Exchange, when asked yesterday about the failure of Einstein, Ward & Co., members of the Exchange, called attention to the work carried on by the Stock Exchange against fraudulent brokers directly and through the Better Business Bureau. "Taking all the failures of Stock Exchange firms during the last two years, including the two big failures of the past ten days, the actual loss to the public will be only between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000," said Mr. Cromwell.

"It seems to me a pity," said Mr. Cromwell, "that the newspapers of New York do not acknowledge the powerful good which the Stock Exchange does in international and domestic affairs, instead of making the details of a failure a pivot on which judgment is based. The newspapers seem to lose sight of the fact that the Stock Exchange has a 95 per cent. batting average. In most cases of Stock Exchange failures creditors are paid in full, or nearly in full. You forget that the Stock Exchange has stood as a bulwark against bucketshops as far back as the Buffalo bucketshop days."

In connection with the failure of Einstein, Ward & Co., Mr. Cromwell said the firm was suspended on March 23, 1921, after charges of reckless and unbusinesslike methods. This, said Mr. Cromwell, meant that the firm carried customers' accounts without sufficient capital. The suspension at the time was for one year, which is the limit under the laws of the Exchange. The firm was reinstated on March 23, 1922, but nothing developed until the Committee on Business Conduct sent them a questionnaire on Sept. 23, 1922. The answer, filed on Oct. 14, 1922, declared that it was carrying no customers' accounts and that the only business being done was by Mr. Einstein as a floor broker. Mr. Cromwell said that the last time Einstein's dues were due he was obliged to get an extension in order to pay the $250.

DERY CORPORATION TO BE REORGANIZED

Committee Completes Plan for New Company With Working Capital of $4,000,000.

The committee which has been working upon a plan of reorganization of the D. G. Dery Corporation has completed its task, an agreement having been reached under date of June 14, and a copy of the plan is now being sent to all creditors. The plan calls for the formation of a new company and a readjustment of the capital. Creditors having claims of $1,000 or less will be paid in full. Percy E. Mann has been selected for President of the new company.

"Creditors are to receive immediately 25 per cent. in cash upon the plan being declared effective, and 75 per cent. by the acceptance at par of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock or voting trust certificates therefor.

"It is believed that as soon as the company is in a position to demonstrate its earning possibilities there can be found a market for this preferred stock and that the creditors will realize upon their claims at a much earlier date than if they accepted notes in part payment of their claims. If notes were to be accepted it is recognized that they would have to be subordinated to future obligations of the company, and this would, in the opinion of the committee, make the notes unmarketable.

"The bondholders under the plan will postpone the payment of the annual sinking fund payments required by the mortgage until March 1, 1927, in order to improve the company's cash position.

"The committee is thoroughly convinced that a liquidation of the plants of the company would be most unwise and would be very disastrous to the creditors. The percentage payable to creditors, in view of the position of the first mortgage, would be quite small, and it being necessary, therefore, in order to realize the largest possible amount for creditors that the business should be continued, it is the opinion of the committee that the company should be continued with such credit position as to insure the new company being a vigorous and important factor in the trade.

"Under the plan the company will commence business with a net working capital in excess of $4,000,000, and it is contemplated that 50 per cent. of the net earnings of the company, so long as this amount of working capital is maintained, shall be used annually in retiring the preferred stock."

The Reorganization Committee, which is serving without compensation, includes Emanuel Gerli, Allan Macfarlan, Gardner E. Perry, Arthur H. Titus and Allan B. Cook. E. E. Beach of White & Case, 16 Wall Street, is Secretary.

2 BUCKETEERS SENTENCED.

Brokers Plead Guilty and Get Six Months Each in the Tombs.

Judge Collins in General Sessions yesterday sentenced James H. Dewsnap and Stephen F. Hogan, brokers, to six months in the Tombs on their pleas of guilty to bucketing the order of a customer of the brokerage firm of I. B. Mullin & Co., 1,482 Broadway, which failed in 1922 with liabilities of $54,000 and $6,800 in assets.

Patrick Coen of 600 Seventh Avenue said that he gave Dewsnap and Hogan, who composed the firm, money to purchase stock and that they pocketed it. John O'Connor, counsel for the brokers, said that his clients did not intend to keep Coen's money and what they did "was a common practice among brokers at the time."

PERIL TO PORT SEEN IN MERGER OF ROADS

N. Y. Central's Acquisition of Jersey Central Would Be a 'Scissor-Hold,' I. C. C. Is Told.

VITAL LINK IN UNIFICATION

Strategically Located for Water-front Control, Says Port Authority Witness.

The proposed consolidation of the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the New York Central would have the effect on the Port of New York of a pair of scissors, Julius Henry Cohen, counsel of the Port of New York Authority, declared yesterday at a hearing before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Henry C. Hill in the rooms of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building. Mr. Cohen opposed the consolidation as detrimental to the public interest and as tending to block the Port Authority's comprehensive plan for the unification of the railroad terminals in the Port District, and presented witnesses in an attempt to show that it would give the New York Central almost a monopoly of the waterfront terminals on both sides of the port.

John E. Ramsey, chief statistician of the Port Authority, was the principal witness. Mr. Ramsey testified that, if the proposed consolidation went through, the New York Central would control all but about two miles of the belt line system from Edgewater, N. J., to Bayonne, a distance of thirteen and a half miles, and would control the vast industrial area in the Newark District, besides being the only railroad having direct rail access to Manhattan.

Jersey Central a Keystone.

Mr. Ramsey asserted that, had the staff of the Port Authority known that the consolidation of the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the New York Central was contemplated, it would have recommended the inclusion of all the Central Railroad of New Jersey's lines in the Port District in the comprehensive plan. He testified that 85 per cent. of the traffic of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was either received from or transferred to other trunk lines and that it was for the most part a terminal railroad, the waterfront facilities of which should be available to all the railroads on the New Jersey side of the Port and which should connect with all other railroads so that shippers within its territory might ship by any of the trunk lines.

"The Central Railroad of New Jersey is more strategically located for waterfront control than any other carrier in this district," Mr. Ramsey said. "The advantage of the Central Railroad of New Jersey is greater in this respect than the advantages of all the other railroads on the westerly side of the port combined.

"It has a trackage arrangement on the west side of Newark Bay that gives it control in carrying the products of several thousand industries. The Central Railroad of New Jersey is regarded largely as a terminal railroad within the Port Authority District. It is the belief of the staff of the Port Authority that the railroad is essential to a belt line system and that no single carrier should control this system but that the terminal facilities should be under unified control and available to all the railroads entering the port."

Ramsey Cross-Examined.

Cross-examined by Clyde Brown, general solicitor for the New York Central, Mr. Ramsey admitted that none of the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey had been included in belt line No. 13, which has been described as the "keystone" of the Port Authority's plan.

Mr. Brown asked Mr. Ramsey if the staff of the Port Authority would have been opposed to the consolidation of the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the Baltimore & Ohio and the Philadelphia & Reading. Mr. Ramsey replied that it would have been just as much opposed to that sort of a consolidation as to the proposed consolidation with the New York Central.

Mr. Brown then brought out that this proposal was made before the Interstate Commerce Commission in August, 1921, and that the Port Authority in its plan submitted to the Legislatures of New York and New Jersey in December, 1921, which is its present plan, failed to include all the Central Railroad of New Jersey lines in the Port District, as Mr. Ramsey had testified the staff would have recommended if it had had knowledge of a proposal to consolidate the railroad with the New York Central.

Mr. Ramsey said he had known nothing of the proposal to consolidate with the Baltimore & Ohio and the Philadelphia & Reading. He could not recall just how he had obtained information of the proposal to consolidate the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the New York Central, which was made by A. H. Smith, President of the latter railroad, before the Interstate Commerce Commission about two weeks ago.

Short Lines Oppose Grouping.

Statements on behalf of a number of short line railroads, objecting to their inclusion in any of the groups into which it is proposed to divide the trunk line railroads of the country, were filed by Charles MacVeagh, Assistant Counsel for the United States Steel Corporation and attorney for the roads. Judge J. H. Reed, President of the Union Railroad, a line fifty-seven miles long, serving the mills of the Steel Corporation in the Pittsburgh district, also objected to consolidation of that line.

Both Mr. MacVeagh and Judge Reed, in reply to questions by Wilbur La Roe, Associate Counsel of the Port Authority, declared that they did not favor the consolidation of a belt line with a trunk railroad as a general proposition but believed it to be advantageous to operate a belt line separately to get the advantage of connection with a number of trunk line railroads. Judge Reed, however, said he would also be opposed to linking up any other terminal lines with the Union Railroad and said he did not consider a unified belt line at Pittsburgh practicable.

The hearing will be continued today.

FORECASTS DEATH OF 700 AUTOISTS

Bureau of Safety Tells What Is Indicated for the Next Three Months.

BASED ON WEEK OF JUNE 2

If the Record Is Maintained There Will Be 1,400 Grade Crossing Accidents.

Seven Hundred autoists will die during July, August and September as the result of railroad accidents, if the record for the week ended June 2 is maintained, according to the Bureau of Safety of the Interstate Commerce Commission. As the figures show that there are two accidents for each death these figures, it is pointed out, mean that there will probably be 1,400 grade crossing accidents throughout the United States during the coming three months.

This is an average of more than fifteen accidents a day, although it is said that there will be more accidents on Saturdays and Sundays, because travel is heavier on those days. On these days also, the less experienced drivers are on the road and they are more likely to disregard railroad crossing signals.

With the increase in automobiles and trucks in the last five years there has come an increase in the number of accidents despite the efforts that have been made by the railroad and safety first associations, the records show. Since 1917, for example, the number of automobiles figuring in railroad accidents has increased nearly 50 per cent. In that year there were 2,076 such accidents resulting in the death of 1,083 persons and in the injury of approximately 3,000. In 1921, the last year for which there are complete records, accidents resulted in the death of 1,259 persons and the injury of 3,976.

Complete statistics for the years 1922 have not as yet been published. The figures for the first three quarters of the year, however, indicate that there is a substantial seasonal increase in the number of these accidents and the casualties resulting therefrom. The figures for the first three quarters of 1922 are as follows:

Quarter.	No. of Accidents.	Deaths.	Injuries.
1	607	218	787
2	707	310	988
3	907	453	1,338

It will be noted that in the third quarter, which includes July, August and September, there was an increase of approximately 50 per cent. over the first quarter in the number of accidents, and more than 100 per cent. increase in the number of fatalities.

If the number of deaths for the third quarter of this year reaches the estimate made by the Bureau of Safety based on the accidents for the week ended June 2, an increase of almost 60 per cent. when compared to the figures for the same period of last year, will be shown.

Safeguard your credit at its source

BANKS are not the source of credit, they are the channels through which it is distributed.

Credit comes from the people of a community—from you and your employees. By rigid economy and self-denial excess dollars are accumulated in the banker's reservoir.

Only when employees have the correct understanding of both life and labor will they contribute their part to the community's wealth. Only when their work yields a profit can you add your share to this necessary credit reserve.

Employees who regard work with a neutral attitude not only cause a heavy loss on your payroll investment—they actually decrease available credit and impair your standing with bankers.

Safeguard your investment in men, and you safeguard credit at its source!

An interesting booklet, "Stopping Payroll Losses," will be sent industrial executives gratis, on request. Please address Dept. L 10.

BRADY HEIRS MAKE $8,429,314 DEMAND

PROTEST THE ACCOUNTING

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 25.—Charging irregularities in the management of the estate of the late Anthony N. Brady by his two sons, Nicholas F. and James Cox Brady, and the Central Union Trust Company of New York, Mrs. Carll Tucker and Mrs. Frances P. Garvan, sisters of the Misses Brady, today filed formal objections to the accounting.

Surrogate George Lawyer, who received the papers from George Corbett of Francis P. Garvan's office, just before 5 o'clock this afternoon, fixed Oct. 15 as the date on which the hearing would be conducted. Mr. Garvan also filed through Mr. Corbett a separate objection on the basis of a life contingency in the $75,000,000 estate of the noted financier. In the event of the death of Mrs. Garvan her husband would come into a life estate in her share of the property.

Separate objections were also filed by Julius Ilich of Albany, special guardian of Luther Tucker, Nicholas Brady Tucker, Marcia Anna Myers Tucker and Carll Tucker Jr., children of Mr. and Mrs. Carll Tucker; Edward J. Halter of Albany, special guardian of Marula Anna Farrell and Margaret Mary Farrell; Joseph B. Foley, special guardian of Marcia Anna Gavit, daughter of E. Palmer Gavit; Melvin T. Bender, special guardian for Francis P. Garvin Jr., Flora Brady Garvan, Mabel Garvan, Anthony Garvan and Peter Dunne Garvan, children of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan.

No objections were filed by Mrs. James C. Farrell of Albany, she having declared in statements that she is in accord with the acts of her brothers, so far as they relate to the management of the estate.

Demand Big Surcharge on Trustees.

Through their attorneys, Guthrie, Jerome, Rand & Kresel and Calwalader, Wickersham & Taft, Mrs. Garvan and Mrs. Tucker charge that their brothers have administered the trusts and the estate, in an unlawful and improper manner to their own personal financial advantage. They ask the Court to surcharge against the trustees large sums, alleged to have been lost to the trusts, and in much less degree to the estate by improper administration.

At the time of Mr. Brady's death each trust fund amounted to approximately $21,500,000. With the filing of formal objections there is now a definite legal issue before Surrogate Lawyer. The previous hearings before him have been of a preliminary nature to obtain information upon which the objections are based.

The court is asked to surcharge against the trustees a total of $3,096,-466.53 for each trust or a total of $8,-845,963.32 for the four trusts. Specific surcharges of $825,481.87 against the two Brady brothers and the Central Union Trust Company are likewise asked, making a grand total of $8,429,-314.99 in surcharges requested.

These requests cover only eleven out of thirty objections of the nature, and it was said by attorneys for Mrs. Garvan and Mrs. Tucker that the total amount of surcharges requested would be much greater than the $8,429,314.99 now requested. The number of separate objections filed is sixty-three.

The specific surcharge requested for $1,061,973.99 for one trust or $4,247,895.96 for the four trusts for alleged losses in the sale of stock of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in which the Brady estate was formerly heavily interested. The objections allege that Mr. Brady's stock appraised at $1,223,878.20 was sold for each of the four trusts for $161,905.21, and that Nicholas F. and James C. Brady, both officers of the company, knew its condition and disposed of all or most of their personal holdings at higher prices than were realized by the trusts.

	Amount for One Trust	Total for Four Estate. Trusts Ests.
Southern Pac. stock alleged to have been purchased from James C. Brady in excess of market value:	$8,878.75	$33,515.00
E. R. C. Co. stock—alleged loss on sales	1,061,973.99	4,247,895.96
Anaconda Cop. Mng. Co. stock—alleged loss on sales	61,551.22	246,204.88
Losses alleged to have been sustained through unavailable subscription rights instead of exercising such rights in the purchase of additional securities	428,922.00	1,718,088.00
Memphis Gas and Electric Co. stock—alleged loss through profitable Administration expenses	121,854.67	486,498.46
Totals	$2,086,442.53	$8,845,853.32

In addition, the court is asked to surcharge the executors with $115,309 for alleged loss by the estate on the sale of Intercontinental Rubber Company stock, $5,000 for a contribution to the American Gas Association and $63,161.97 for administration expenses, a total of $63,-461.97, making a total of specific surcharges requested against the trustees and executors of $8,429,314.99.

Objection to Stock Purchases.

Other transactions to which objections are made include the purchases of stock and loans to the Maxwell Motor Company, payments for purchases of stock of Morton & Co. and Blair & Co., and payments for stock or rights to purchase stock of the British-American Tobacco Company, MacAndrews & Forbes Company, the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, the National Surety Company, the Electric Storage Battery Company, the National City Bank, F. Lorillard & Co., the American Tobacco Company, the American Writing Paper Company and other corporations. The trustees are declared to have failed to exercise for the benefit of the trusts proper supervision and control over the internal affairs of the Brooklyn Edison Company, the Cohoes Power and Light Corporation, the Dayton Power and Light Company, the Utica Gas and Electric Company and other corporations to prevent diversion of the corporate funds and waste due to mismanagement.

Mismanagement Charges at Forth.

General objections to the management and administration by the Trustees of the trust fit each case as unlawful, irregular and improper are stated. Some of them are:

"That they have used the funds of this trust for their personal account in the purchase of securities for themselves and otherwise and in other respects have dealt with and used the funds and property of this trust for their personal benefit and advantage.

"That they have borrowed trust funds for their own personal use and did not pay any interest on such loans.

"That under the method and practice adopted by the Trustees and followed throughout the accounting period, trust funds have been paid out by means of the depositaries and paid out by means of checks signed by a single Trustee without the knowledge or concurrence of the co-Trustee.

"That transactions in which the trust funds and property of this trust were or not initiated, carried through and consummated in the names of the Trustees, so that the benefits accruing or detriments chargeable to the trust or decedent such transactions would not at all times be identified, distinguished and readily traced, followed and verified.

"That they have subordinated the interests of this trust and their fiduciary obligations in respect thereto, to their individual and personal interests.

"That large sums of money belonging to this trust, in some instances exceeding the sum of $2,000,000, were for long periods of time left on deposit with firms of stock brokers with whom the Trustees or some of them had personal accounts, without adequate security in the hands of the trustees, thereby imperilling the trust funds, and no record of the amounts invested or deposited or the security therefor, if any, appear in the account as filed."

The objections also allege that the Trustees failed to account for the gains and profits realized during the active administration of the trusts, through salaries and fees received by the individual Trustees personally incident to corporate offices and directorships to which they procured their own election by virtue of trust stock holdings.

$17,672 for Office Furnishings.

Mrs. Garvan and Mrs. Tucker object to the charge against each of their trust funds of $17,672.92 for rugs and furniture for the Brady offices at 80 Broadway, New York City, on the ground that such expenditures were "unnecessary, unwarranted, unlawful, improper, excessive and unauthorized by the will of the testator."

In objecting to the payment of any commissions to the trustees or executors, the contestants declare that the trustees "have been guilty of waste, gross negligence and willful misconduct in the management and administration of the trust affairs, and that they have suffered the trusts to sustain great losses and that they have conducted affairs as a business and not a testamentary trust to their own great profit."

The trustees are charged with speculating with and jeopardizing trust funds. Objection is made to any further investments of trust funds by them, except those authorized by the decedents' estate laws unless with consent of the life beneficiary or upon order of the court.

Miller Combats Surcharges.

Former Governor Nathan L. Miller, principal counsel for Nicholas F. and James Cox Brady, had the following to say last night concerning the objections filed to his clients' accounting:—

"I am indebted to the press for the opportunity to see the lengthy printed objections of Mrs. Garvan and Mrs. Tucker to the accounts of their brothers and their co-trustees as executors and trustees of Anthony N. Brady, deceased, which I am told were given to the press yesterday and filed at Albany late this afternoon, although we were assured that we would receive copies as soon as they were ready for filing.

"From such cursory examination as I have been able to make it would appear that two of the sisters of Messrs. N. F. and J. C. Brady, who have each been in receipt of a yearly income of upwards of $500,000 after all charges and expenses of administration, and the principal of whose trust estates has each increased more than $2,000,000 under the management of their brothers and the latter's corporate trustee, are seeking to saddle upon the trustees all losses that have occurred, while taking the benefit of all profits resulting from their management of the trust estates.

"I have seen the itemized statement of surcharges aggregating upwards of $8,000,000 also prepared for the press. It is sufficient to say that these attempted surcharges are preposterous.

"Many of the objections appear to be based upon a perversion of the actual facts which the contestants have endeavored to spread on the record by the one-sided examination of the trustees before the filing of objections. Now that objections have been filed, an issue is presented which the trustees are fully prepared to and will meet."

SIX NAVAL VESSELS SOLD.

Two Colliers Bring Highest Prices in Sale, Netting $125,000.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The sale of six obsolete naval vessels for a total of approximately $125,000 was announced today by the Navy Department. Two colliers, the Vulcan and the Mars, went to John E. Walsh of Boston, the Vulcan bringing $80,100 and the Mars $35,100. The tender Prairie was sold to Louis Rothenberg of Oakland, Cal., for $22,666.66; the yacht Vixen to the Fair Oaks Steamship Company, New York City, for $5,100; the motorboat Helaria to H. W. Blodekler of Milwaukee for $1,100, and the Submarine 44S to Ralph Canning of San Francisco for $866.

NERVOUS TONE RULES IN COTTON MARKET

Declines of One-Quarter to Half Cent Per Pound Recorded in Forward Contracts.

Cotton reacted yesterday and at one time July showed a loss of about 70 points. Following the rapid recovery last week, buying was not broad enough to carry on the advance. Further July liquidation and a decline in securities unsettled sentiment. Actual volume of liquidation proved light and whenever buying in late months developed contracts were not plentiful. While the July Washington report is not expected to indicate a satisfactory yield, weather is now bringing improvement in the plant in most sections of the belt. The outlook in both Texas and North Carolina is excellent. Prices lost one-quarter to half a cent on the day.

As was the case last Monday, cotton showed a reactionary tendency following a sharp rise the closing days of the week. Liverpool failed to meet the advance in American markets, particularly in July, so the usual aggressive buying made its appearance in early trading. With excellent over-Sunday weather in nearly all sections of the belt outside of Georgia, contracts were for sale on the call and increased as the morning wore on. First notices on July come this morning, so that scattered liquidation in that position became a feature of trading. While there is seldom advance information as to the number of notices likely to be issued, the general impression seemed to be that very little cotton might be delivered at the start. Interests holding the local stock are believed to hold contracts in Liverpool, so that turning over of cotton from here may be deferred until later in the month. Since July commands so excessive a premium over October, many holders were disposed to terminate their interests by liquidation, a steady supply of July contracts in Liverpool, so that during over-night periods here may be deferred until later in the month. Since July commands so excessive a premium over October, many holders were disposed to terminate their interests by liquidation, a steady supply of July contracts in Liverpool, several thousands bales immediately following the call advanced the price 20 points, when a steady decline developed that brought a loss of over $3 a bale by early afternoon.

Late months were influenced by action of July and weakness in the stock market. After selling above 22.40 early in the session, October broke through 22.00 to 21.80, or 70 points from high figures of Saturday. Liverpool was in a place under comparatively limited selling, particularly in the more distant positions. There were few large orders executed during the decline and with the exception of July—this being one of October sold around 21.80, dealing mainly in small lots. The break failed to attract heavy liquidation, so that the moment any setback during the afternoon prices recovered up to 40 points under yesterday's close, thus proving under better weather conditions uncertainty over the report next Monday tended to restrict selling pressure. Crop estimating are still too small to encourage confidence in any sample view. Georgia had more rain where dry weather is needed.

After the sharp recovery to around 25.80 for October, the market ran into more contracts and afternoon trading developed heavy liquidation. Crop reports from Oklahoma, Arkansas and Georgia indicated that all three States have suffered from excessive rainfall the past month. Advices from Arkansas stated that virtually all the increased acreage there has been replanted owing to overflows which came too late to permit re-planting. Final trading showed a nervous rather than a weak tone.

JULY WHEAT LEADS IN RISING MARKET

News Made for Lower Values, but Closing of Spreads Gives Prices a New Lift.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Closing of spreads between Chicago and Winnipeg wheat, buying here and selling in the latter market, gave Chicago a firmer undertone, and, while the greater part of the news made for lower prices, the finish was ⅛@⅜ cent higher, with July showing the most strength. Winnipeg showed fair strength early but broke sharply toward the last and closed 1¾ cents ower, wire trouble preventing the final quotations from being received until after the local market had closed.

Owing to the high prices prevailing, for Manitobas there is little business under way in hard Winters, with 65,000 bushels sold here today to exporters. Further business could be done were lake freight to ease off about 1 cent per bushel.

Weather conditions in the Southwest remain very favorable for harvesting and threshing, and the country showed more disposition to sell to arrive, with a little grain bought in Oklahoma and Kansas for shipment to the Gulf. First half of July loading at the Gulf was quoted at 13½ cents over Chicago July, with last half August at 10¾ cents over September.

No offers of consequence are being received from Illinois and Indiana, although cutting has started in Central Illinois.

Continued hot weather is bringing in claims of premature ripening in Illinois. Drought in the Northwest has been eliminated for the time being by soaking rains over part of Minnesota and North Dakota, some points receiving as much as three inches.

In the visible supply there was a decrease of 1,376,000 bushels and total stocks are 28,343,000 bushels against 22,-002,000 bushels last year. In its weekly summary of the market the Department of Agriculture estimates that the carryover of wheat at the end of the crop season, June 30, will exceed 100,000,000 bushels.

Temperatures of 100 and over were shown at five points in Illinois over Sunday by the official report and a few reports of rain being wanted are now coming forward. December corn came in for increased attention, the big discount under the old crop deliveries being a factor, and it gained ⅞ cent, while the nearby futures were up ⅛@½. September being the weakest.

The feature was after cash corn, and took 135,000 bushels in all positions, including some fresh-shelled yellow afloat for Buffalo. A majority of the crop reports show that corn is making rapid growth, and except from parts of the Southwest there are less complaints of weedy fields. A decrease of 1,107,000 bushels in the visible supply brought the total down to 3,165,000, against 4,332,000 the previous week and 31,326,-000 last year.

Local stocks were reduced 1,156,000 bushels for the week, and are 405,000 bushels. The reduction here was unexpected and due to some extent to the transfer of grain from private to public elevators, and will probably show up again in the stock next week.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 1,067,000 bushels; week ago, 565,000; last year, 1,033,000. Shipments were 745,000 bushels; week ago, 566,000; last year, 936,000.

Corn receipts were 724,000 bushels; week ago, 540,000; last year, 1,144,000, and shipments, 288,000 bushels; week ago, 416,000; last year, 616,000.

Lamborn & Co. Win $205,663 Verdict.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 25.—A verdict of $205,663 damages was directed by Judge Wilbur F. Booth in Federal District Court here today in favor of Lamborn & Co., New York sugar brokers, against the Log Cabin Products Company of St. Paul. The Lamborn Company alleged breach of contract.

Western Union Cable Rates Cut.

The Western Union Telegraph Company announced yesterday that effective July 1, its cable rates to the principal Scandinavian countries will be reduced in proportion to the general reductions made on April 20. The reduction is applicable on half-rate deferred service to the countries where that service is now in effect.

RIVAL PHONE UNIONS RIOT.

BOSTON, June 25.—The two rival unions of telephone operators, emerging from mass meetings tonight on the eve of the strike called for tomorrow by one body, the Telephone Operators' Department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, while the other group, the old Local 1 A, which lost its charter, remains neutral, rushed each other in the street tonight. Extra police details averted violence and dispersed the 3,000 girls.

Those who are to strike yelled "scabs" at the others who retorted "We're stickers." Traffic was stalled in Newspaper Row by the yelling, whistling, cat-calling girls.

The striking operators had met in Tremont Temple where their band played while they foxtrotted in the lobby and heckled the passing "Annie Molloy" crowd, so-called from the name of their leader. The latter group had met in Ford Hall and determined to picket the pickets of the strikers tomorrow.

At Fitchburg the local resigned from the striking union and voted to remain at work; in Worcester the business men in mass meeting protested the menace of the strike to public safety.

The Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies announced tonight that they had engaged large staffs of boys to handle the additional business expected to develop should the strike cripple telephone service.

COMMODITY PRICES.

Cash Values Decline in Local Staples Market—Grains Prominent in Reaction.

Cash values continued lower again yesterday in a majority of the staples in subjoined list, the reaction being most prominent in the grains, where wheat declined ½ cent, corn 1¾ cents per bushel, and flour 20 cents per barrel, to a new low level for the year. Elsewhere losses were found in butter, lard, family beef, copper and cotton, with a small gain in tin. Groceries alone were firm.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Monday, a week before, and a year ago:

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Commercial Paper.

Yesterday—5 per cent. for the best names. Saturday—5 per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for six months' paper.

Black and White Favored.

For many kinds of apparel, including certain Summer dresses, outer garments and even bathing suits, the new black and white color motif is in vogue. This trend has been gaining headway during the last two weeks and is expected to grow considerably stronger. White has been slow in coming forward, owing to the unseasonable weather conditions, but it and the black and white combination are looked upon to be the dominating color features of Summer wear. Where solid white is utilized in one garment, high colors come into play for relief, and this has caused stimulation of buying of fancy blouses, some types of ribbons and other accessories. Printed effects at the moment, in the very high and bizarre colorings and effects, are not taking as they were expected to earlier in the season.

Gray Goods Again Dull.

The week opened quietly in the local gray goods market yesterday. Most of the business was done in "quick delivery" goods and at prices slightly under the first hand asking figures at the close of last week. Actual printcloth sales included some 38½-inch 64-60s, which were said to have been sold by first hands at 9¾ cents, as well as second-hand transactions in 39-inch 68-72s at 11¼ cents and in 38½-inch 60-48s at 8¼ cents. Sheetings were dull and without feature, but some small business was done by second hands in lightweight goods on the basis of 7¾ cents for 36-inch 8.50s. Fine-yarn cloths and the specialties had a quiet day.

See Merger as Benefit.

That a large merger of silk firms such as is rumored to be taking place would be a beneficial thing for the industry in many respects, was the opinion of several authorities in the trade expressed yesterday. They denied, however, knowledge of the merger. The main benefit, it was said, would come in the stabilizing of the industry through the creation of a big enterprise formed of the leading concerns, which in its field would resemble that of the American Woolen Company in woolens. "The silk market at present is really disorganized," said one of these authorities yesterday. "Raw silk is and has been high and yet because of the excessive and unsound competition, manufacturers have been forced to sacrifice finished silks. A big difference, I believe, would come about if there were a big concern of the type proposed that act as a stabilizing force."

Will Hold Preliminary Meeting.

Representatives of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York, which is made up of local dry goods commission houses, will confer with the Gingham Committee of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association in this city on July 16, preceding the meeting of the wholesalers' Association of Dress Fabric Buyers that will be held on the following day at the Waldorf-Astoria. Its purpose will be to permit discussion of several important matters pertaining to the sale and distribution of ginghams, and it is expected to prove of considerable value to both sides. Commenting on the gingham situation, a market authority says that ginghams are coming through with little delay, and that complaints are few on that score. It is hinted that some wholesalers would be pleased if the mills were unable to deliver a part of the goods ordered.

A Test of Umbrellas.

In a test recently conducted for a local firm of umbrella manufacturers, which was undertaken to determine how much more wind was required to turn their product inside out than that of one of their competitors, it was found that their umbrella withstood nearly twice as much breeze as the competing umbrella of standard manufacture. Both were of the same diameter. The competing umbrella collapsed under a wind velocity of 20 miles an hour, while the firm's umbrella withstood a wind velocity of 34 miles an hour before giving up its ghost. Under the method used for determining wind loads, the first umbrella took a load of nearly three times that of the second one before collapsing. In other words, the firm's umbrella proved to be three times as strong as the competing one. The test was made by one of the leading airplane companies by means of the wind tunnel system it uses to determine the strength of fabrics meant for airplane wings.

More Showings of Tropicals.

After the initial sub rosa showings of tropicals for next year to a few selected accounts, sellers are now beginning to make known definite dates for the openings of the new lines. As yet, this has been confined to a few of the smaller houses, but it is thought likely the larger sellers will soon inform their trade. While the immediate aspects of the market in these goods are not favorable for the booking of sizable advance business, it is believed that, despite the advances indicated of up to 15 per cent., the end of July should see a pretty fair total of orders on the mills books. With current sales helped by such weather as was had yesterday, the retail situation, it is expected, will then have cleared to such an extent that it should affect the clothing manufacturers' orders beneficially.

Naming of Artificial Silk.

The way was paved for the selection of a new name for artificial silk yesterday when all of the factors interested passed a resolution favoring this at a meeting held under the auspices of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. This was the first time that complete agreement was reached by the parties interested. The meeting was attended by representatives of the Silk Association of America, artificial silk manufacturers, the Kitted Outerwear Association and the Association of Knit Goods Manufacturers. A subcommittee was created, headed by H. B. Cheney and composed of the following: Oswald Knauth, Lincoln Cromwell, N. Trabulski, Bertrand R. Clarke and S. A. Salvage. This body will submit a report later.

Rabbit Furs Go on Show.

A number of buyers from Danbury and other men's felt hat manufacturing centres, as well as furriers from other cities, are expected here today and tomorrow to look over the offerings of rabbit skins that will be placed on the block at 10 A. M. Thursday in the warehouse of the New York Auction Company, Inc., 212 West Twenty-sixth Street. The offering will consist of 600 bales of Australian and New Zealand rabbits, together with white hares and French white conies. Executives of the company say the collection is a good one and that many fine pelts for both hatters and furriers' use are included in it. This is the largest sale of its kind ever held here at this time of the year.

Spring Prices of Bolivia.

When pile fabric lines for Spring are opened, the prediction was made yesterday, they will be priced at about the same levels that now prevail on Fall goods. Quite a few of the mills making bolivias and similar pile weaves made a small advance on Fall fabrics after the lines were originally opened, owing to the subsequent rise in wages, and, according to a well-known seller of these goods, this price will probably carry over for the Spring lines. Meanwhile, these cloths continue in good demand, and there is said to be nothing that seriously threatens their supremacy for "dressy" wear this Fall.

Waiting for Boston Shoe Store.

Buyers of shoes are marking time quite generally now, so far as placing Fall business is concerned, and the inclination in the trade is to look for a rather quiet period until after the general shoe style show that is to be held in Boston from July 9 to 12. Buyers from all over the country, including many from the metropolitan district, are expected to attend, and a number of the visitors will probably come to this market after the show. It was said yesterday to be a rather fortunate circumstance that the show is to be held in Boston this season, for the tone of optimism among the New England shoe men, especially the makers of the better goods, was said to be marked. All of them are looking for excellent business during and after the show, believing that many buyers have been holding off as long as possible for several reasons before ordering Fall stocks in earnest.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A novel method of calling on buyers has been adopted by Maurice Marcus, salesman for the Invincible Cloak & Suit Company, 363 Seventh Avenue. He is traveling on a high-speed motorcycle and is now halfway across the continent on the way to Los Angeles. He expects the round trip will be made in five weeks.

The next annual convention of the Retail Credit Men's National Association will be held in this city in June, 1924.

M. M. Lefkowitz, formerly with Hoffman & Hartbeck, Inc., and the Knickerbocker Mail Order Company, is now associated with P. S. Farmer, resident buyer, 3 West Twenty-ninth Street. He will supervise the general dry goods department.

C. K. Garretson, who for the last eleven years has been connected with various branches of the shoe industry, has become associated with the Welsh, Moss & Feehan Company, manufacturers of women's shoes at Haverhill, Mass., in a sales capacity. In his new position he will cover most of the large cities of the East.

DRY GOODS PROSPECTS.

Wholesalers Expect Revisions When the Time Comes to Buy.

Prices of finished goods in the primary markets continue unchanged, according to the June letter of Secretary-Treasurer Thomas A. Fernley of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association to the members of that organization, but there is a feeling that, when buyers get ready to operate in a substantial way, revisions will be made. In part, the letter says:

"Wholesalers who have accumulated substantial inventories based on lower prices prevailing last year have been able to maintain their sales without replenishment for some time and therefore have not found it necessary to make serious efforts to purchase goods from primary sources. There have been some inquiries in the market, but often these have turned out to be merely for the purpose of sounding out the price situation.

"Commission merchants have held firm on finished goods prices, particularly because they don't feel that a slight shading of prices would develop substantial buying. It is believed that the reason that commission merchants have held their prices on finished goods is principally due to the fact they felt that the buyers are not in the mood to buy now at any price. It is further felt that, as soon as buyers are in the mood to operate, revisions in prices will be made, but that these revisions will not be radical unless there is a decided change in the raw cotton situation toward considerably lower prices on cotton, which at the present time are not expected.

"Bleached goods prices are soft, and there is a variation of a cent in the mill prices asked by some sellers. Gray goods have held firm, and have not given such interests as those of the percale printers opportunity for a reduction which would make possible the prices of a year ago. Some converters of wash fabrics for the men's shirting trade have been willing to make substantial reductions, and second hands have been quoting attractive prices, lower than mill prices current.

"Discussion is now being heard as to the date of the resumption of active buying and the basis on which it should take place, some expressing a preference for a price basis approximating that prevailing during the Summer of 1922. Fair results have been obtained by wholesalers in selling percales at low prices, but views concerning announcement of new prices by the printers is not sufficiently definite to forecast any real information.

"The outing flannel situation remains unchanged and the wholesalers have sold ahead in fine shape for the Fall season. Cotton blanket orders are in much the same condition, manufacturers have satisfactory sales and no unfavorable developments."

DOG ATTACKS ITS MISTRESS.

Finally Killed by Policeman After It Gives Pedestrians a Fright.

While Mrs. Rudolph Bruno Herter, 31 years old, an interior decorator, living at 64 West Fiftieth Street, was leading her pet Airedale by a leash along Sixth Avenue near Fiftieth Street yesterday afternoon the animal suddenly leaped on her, biting her on the right shoulder.

The dog, it is said, began to froth at the mouth and ran down the street barking. A number of passengers were coming down the stairs of the Fiftieth Street elevated station and on hearing the cry "Mad dog!" scurried inside hallways and stores.

The Airedale ran back to the Herter apartment, which is on the third floor of the Fiftieth Street address, and climbed out on an adjoining balcony, where it was killed by a policeman.

Mrs. Herter was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where she was given the Pasteur treatment.

RUSSIANS RAIN GIFTS ON RELIEF WORKERS

By WALTER DURANTY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, June 23.—Proof of the popularity of the American Relief Administration workers in Russia and gratitude felt, not only by the famine sufferers, but by the local authorities and their own Russian employes, is afforded by the gifts—some of a remarkably lavish character—now being showered upon the outgoing Americans.

F. H. Lyons, who was in charge of the administration's warehouses on the outskirts of Moscow, where he handled enormous quantities of foodstuffs and medical supplies, has received from his employes a gold cigarette case and a silver samovar service, accompanied by the following characteristic letter:

"My dear Mr. Lyon: Whenever humans have got to part there sometimes arises a strong feeling of burden of it. Our dear Mr. Lyon, you have done all you could to make us feel the separation deeply. Your attention to us has shown you not only as chief, but as friend. You have been just in your requests to us and have always given a chance to the individual to develop initiative. Now in parting we are expressing our deep regret, begging you to accept our best wishes for your future life and work and accept as a remembrance this souvenir as a sign of our thankfulness."

This letter was signed by upward of 150 employes.

Donald Renshaw, chief of the Petrograd district, besides having a banquet given in his honor and receiving a present from his employes, got a gold cigarette case with an inscription from the Petrograd Soviet workers and soldiers. This is a really unusual tribute, as Petrograd is more radical than Moscow and has seemed much more readier to suspect the motives of the Americans' work.

In Ufa Dr. Bell received many gifts as well as the freedom of the city—or its Russian equivalent, which carries with it the right of residence and other privileges never before given except to some big chief of the Communist party. Dr. Godfrey at Kazan and Dr. Lyon in Moscow, in addition to presents, were also formally tossed in blankets which is regarded as a sign of a sort of "blood brotherhood" and comradeship.

It is worth noting that none of these Americans hold radical views. Indeed, I have found Russians generally inclined to be suspicious of foreigners who profess admiration for Soviet principles, and with greater respect for frank disagreement combined with a spirit of fair inquiry.

One of the most popular and efficient Administration executives, Dr. Fox, stationed in the Crimea, missed for a time his presents and banquets, which he received later. He has just reported that he was held up and robbed of a billion rubles, about $7.

FORD TO DISTILL COAL TO OBTAIN MOTOR FUEL

Is Building Factory in Canada to Apply a New Low Temperature Process.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, June 25.—Backed by Henry Ford, a factory for the low temperature distillation of coal, by which a ton of coal is expected to yield as high as ten gallons of motor fuel as a by-product, is under construction at the Ford factory at Walkerville, Ont., it was announced today by Wallace Campbell, President of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

The factory, which will cost about $500,000, will distill about 400 tons of coal a day. The motor fuel by-product, which it is expected eventually may be as universally used as gasoline, will be distilled from the raw fuel without affecting the fuel value of the residue, which, it is said, will burn as well, if not better, than the raw coal.

Should the experimental factory prove successful, other factories will be constructed by the Ford Company.

The distillation process is the invention of Emil Pirpy, assisted by Ralph D. Lamie, who is said to be in Detroit in connection with the new Ford industry.

Mr. Ford is believed to have had the new process in mind when he made the statement recently that he would show the world how to burn coal twice.

AMERICA AS THE FILMS SHOW IT TO ENGLAND

'A Large Country Surrounded by Sin and Sentiment,' Says London Screen Critic.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 25.—Under the heading: "America as I Know It," by "A Filmgoer," The Evening News prints a skit on the general characteristics of the American films shown in this country which deserves some consideration by the responsible leaders in their production and distribution.

"America," says the skit, "is a large country entirely surrounded by sin and sentiment. It is inhabited in the East by unscrupulous but enormously successful business men, who devote their nights to squandering in cabarets their ill-gotten gains of the day before. In the West 'bad men' rob stage coaches and banks and shoot Sheriffs and their partners in crime and spend a good deal of time rolling on the ground in attempts to gouge each other's eyes out. The North is peopled by bearded scoundrels who go there to escape from the law, to steal mining claims and to menace lonely girls snowbound in log cabins. The South is notable for cacti and half-breeds. The last-named have no particular vice; they are just bad.

"These conclusions are arrived at from personal observation, not in America, but in the British cinemas. The films which have taught me these things have American trade-marks, so I suppose they must be true pictures of life in the United States. They have taught me also that there are a number of good people in the land who seem to make up in sentimentality what they lack in sinfulness.

"The rich women of the East are notable for the scantiness of their costumes, their uncharitable attitude toward other women and for their remarkable bedrooms. These are of enormous size and have at least one telephone and an easy way of egress for the heroines and ingress for the heroes."

BURGLARS IN NO HURRY.

Carry Safe to Rear of Store and Open It at Leisure.

In plain view of the street, robbers removed a safe Sunday afternoon from the front to the rear of the Sheffield Farms store at 936 Second Avenue and then leisurely chiseled it open and took about $400. The store is about one and a half blocks from the East Fifty-first Street police station.

Valentine Johnson of 167 East Sixty-fourth Street, manager of the store, discovered the robbery Sunday evening after he returned to the place from Central Park, where he and his family were trying to keep cool. He had a "hunch" that something had happened, he said yesterday, because he had heard tappings on the wall just before he closed the store in the morning.

Special Booths
For the Garment Fair

Dignity, Privacy and Exclusiveness Will Be Given Each Exhibitor's Show Room This Year

FOR this year's National Merchandise Fair, and especially for the Garment Division, the booths have been constructed on new lines, so as to give each exhibitor all the privacy and atmosphere of his own salesroom.

Plenty of space; designed for individuality; excellent window display and lighting facilities—these are fundamental features of the new booths that will appeal to the garment trade and will be large factors in progressive selling by exhibitors in the Garment Division.

The booths are to be ten by twelve feet square and the window space will be seven and one quarter feet high, five and one half feet long and two and one half feet deep. The entrance to the interior of the booths will be at one side. Draperies will be placed at the opening securing the interior from the aisles entirely. The possibilities for decorations are unlimited.

The lighting of booths has been carefully planned so that the garments can be given the best display that is electrically possible. The window display will be carried in a flood of light. The cornice around the top of the window will hide the lights from view and serve as a reflector for the display. The aisles will take on the aspects of streets of individual stores and shops.

All lines of ready-to-wear will be displayed at the 165th Regiment Armory at 25th Street and Lexington Avenue in one session from July 23rd to August 3rd. In a comparatively short time spent at the Armory a buyer may view the season's lines and get an excellent perspective of the season's offerings.

The following lines will be exhibited; coats, suits, skirts, waists, dresses, millinery, knit goods, sweaters, bathing goods, children's and juniors' lines from six years up.

Reserve your booth Now.

THE PURPOSE OF THE NATIONAL MERCHANDISE FAIR

To establish new selling and buying contacts and to develop an educational influence by making more lines of merchandise better known to Professional Buyers.

To stimulate the initiative and vision of the manufacturers and to encourage the buyer in the selection and purchase of merchandise of more highly developed selling power with the broader view of stabilizing and increasing the consumption of goods by the consumer throughout the country and abroad.

Laborites Wear Red Flowers To Welcome 'Bob' Smillie

LONDON, June 25. — Labor M. P.s today celebrated the appearance in the House of Commons of Bob Smillie, victor in the Morpeth election, by wearing huge red carnations in their buttonholes.

One Labor M. P. was distributing flowers from a big bunch to his colleagues when Sir William Davison asked the Speaker whether it was in order for large bundles of flowers to be brought into the House.

"Would you prefer carrots?" asked another Labor member.

Amid the laughter of the House the Speaker refused to take the matter seriously. Neil MacLean jokingly offered a red flower to the Prime Minister, but Mr. Baldwin smilingly declined it.

of the property in twenty-five years. The broker in the transaction was Thomas A. Wilson. The purchaser recently resold 21 Cornelia Street for alteration into studios, and it is expected that a similar alteration will be carried out for this property.

Cyril A. Carroll and John Newton Porter sold for Leopold Loeb, the four-story apartment building on the northeast corner of East End Avenue and Eighty-third Street, known as 901 East Eighty-third Street, on a plot 26 by 81, with double store, which has been occupied by the present tenant under lease continuously for twenty-seven years. The property rents for $1,000, and was held at $30,000. Cohen Brothers, of the Kansas Beef and Provision Company, were the buyers.

Irving Judis resold southeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-first Street, being a five-story building, 25 by 100. The purchaser is H. Gulder. The broker in the transaction is the Realty Sales Company.

Nall & Parker have sold 362 St. Nicholas Avenue, a five-story and basement single flat on a lot 20.2 by 85 irregular, to an investing client.

Frederick Brown resold the two four-story tenements at 544 and 546 West Fifty-fourth Street. Katerine J. Grace is the buyer, and W. C. Prentiss was the broker. The property is between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, and covers a plot 50 feet wide and 100 feet deep. Mr. Brown purchased the property several weeks ago after long ownership in one family.

Samuel Simons sold to L. & J. Buchsbaum the five-story flat with stores on a plot 50 by 100, at 800 West 164th Street, southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue.

Ennis & Sinnott have purchased from Mary J. Rumbert of Providence, R. I., the two five-story flats at 125-127 East Ninety-third Street, 50 by 100.5. George Ringer was the broker in the deal.

Meinhard-Eckstein sold for Fannie Kraus, as executrix for the Estate of Joel Kraus, the two five-story and basement cold water flats with stores at 1,301-1,303 Third Avenue, on a plot 50 by 75. This property was owned by the Kraus family for about thirty years. The brokers resold the building 1,301 for all cash above the first mortgage of $10,000 to Henry Loeffler, who occupies the store of that building. Premises 1,303 were sold in conjunction with George R. Rumk, to the Ming Toy Holding Corporation.

LITTER FIFTH AVENUE AS REPAVING STARTS

Repairs Between Forty-Second and Fifty-Ninth Streets May Take Three Days.

The repaving of Fifth Avenue between Forty-second and Fifty-ninth Streets was begun yesterday. Workmen stripped off the old asphalt from Forty-second to Forty-third Street. The worn surface was broken into thousands of pieces, which were not removed, so that late in the afternoon when work ceased the avenue immediately north of Forty-second Street suggested the aftermath of an earthquake.

When the workmen left, other gangs from the New York Edison Company, the Consolidated Gas Company and various city departments began to repair or alter electric conduits, gas mains, water pipes, sewers and other subterranean equipment. The stripping of the old asphalt covering between Forty-second and Forty-third Streets will be finished today and the actual repaving will be started. Two or three days will be required to restore the block to normal condition.

Wooden horses across Fifth Avenue were placarded with notices for traffic to detour. Northbound traffic was detoured east through Forty-first Street to Park Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street. Southbound traffic was diverted westward through West Forty-third Street to Sixth Avenue to Forty-first Street and then back to Fifth Avenue.

COLUMBUS AVENUE LEASE.

Blade Estate Leases Corner for $1,000,000.

D. Kempner & Son, Inc., have leased for the Misrock Realty Company, lessees, the Patrick Kiernan property on the northeast corner of Sixtieth Street and Columbus Avenue, consisting of six five-story apartment buildings with stores on a plot 100.5 by 100. The new leasing corporation is the Blade Estate, Inc., which has taken the property over for a period of sixty-three years, at an aggregate rental approximating $1,000,000. This section of the city is fast becoming prominent for its automobile activities, and the buildings will be completely renovated into modern stores and apartments to meet the requirements of the neighborhood.

AUCTIONS BRING $238,012.

Joseph P. Day last Saturday sold for the Fleetwood Holding Corporation 215 lots and one dwelling in Mount Vernon for a total of $187,272.

At Flushing, L. I., Mr. Day also sold last Saturday 131 lots for the Alpha Realty Company for a total of $50,740.

Joseph A. Doyle purchased the southwest corner of Murray Lane and Thirty-second Avenue for $1,870, and A. E. Bergin paid $1,575 for the southeast corner of 150th Place and Thirty-second Avenue. Mr. Bergin also bought the southeast corner of 150th Avenue and Thirty-second Avenue for $2,550.

Vincent Astor Leases Building.

Morris White, realtor and leather goods manufacturer, has closed a lease with Vincent Astor for the entire buildings at premises 296 to 302 Sixth Avenue and 100 to 102 West Nineteenth Street for a term of years at an aggregate rental of about one million dollars. The premises are over 100,000 square feet, and will be used by the lessee for manufacturing purposes.

The premises were formerly occupied by B. Altman & Co. as a department store prior to their removal to Fifth Avenue. Mr. White will effect extensive alterations and will install a plant for the manufacture of leather goods.

Operator Buys Bronx Houses.

James L. Van Sant, operator, has purchased from Veronica Kleinbaum and Bertha Oettinger, 132 Brown Place, southeast corner of 134th Street, a five-story flat, 25 by 100, and also 128 and 130 St. Ann's Avenue, two five-story flats, one being 25 by 100 and the other 15 by 100. The properties were held at $60,000, and show a rental of about $15,000. This is the first sale of the properties for more than twenty-five years. The broker in the transaction was Henry Well.

PRIVATE HOUSE SALES.

Operators Purchase Dwelling on the East Side.

The five-story dwelling on lot 20 by 100.8 at 53 East Fifty-fifth Street, adjoining the southeast corner of Madison Avenue, was purchased by Ennis & Sinnott from Margaret D. Cox, through George A. Bowman as broker.

Mandelbaum & Lowine sold to Miss Florence Miller the property at 60 West Ninetieth Street, a five-story altered dwelling, and have resold the same to Nathan Lesky and Joseph W. Mastell. The property is on a lot 19 by 100. It was held at $38,000. The purchasers were represented by Joseph Chrust. M. H. Gallard & Co., Inc., were the brokers.

The 210 East Thirty-ninth Street Corporation, Emanuel G. Bach, President, which owns the three private houses Nos. 208, 208 and 210 East Thirty-ninth Street, sold premises 210 East Thirty-ninth Street to Pierre La Fevre, Irwin M. Hartline acted for the seller.

Charles K. Chaby & Co., Inc., sold for William Maerte Doubleday the four-story and basement twenty-foot dwelling at 121 West Seventy-sixth Street to Mrs. Cora C. Murray. The property was held at $40,000 and this is the first sale in nearly fifteen years. This is the seventh sale negotiated by the same brokers for Mrs. Murray recently.

Alfred Oleaton, who recently purchased properties 205 and 207 West 128th Street, two three-story private houses, size 16 by 100 each, has resold same to a client.

Nall & Parker have sold in connection with John M. Griggs premises 56 West 136th Street, being three-story and basement brick dwelling, on lot 18 by 99.11, to a client for occupancy.

Corn Exchange Bank a Buyer.

The Corn Exchange Bank proves to be the buyer of the seven-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Broadway and 115th Street, recently reported sold by Josephine Butler. The bank for many years occupied the ground floor of the structure, which fronts 50.11 feet on Broadway and 100 feet on the street.

Lease Entire Floor.

Cushman & Wakefield, Inc., leased the entire sixteenth floor in the Heckscher Building, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street, to the Howe Sound Company, Evander B. Schley, President, as executive offices. Moore & Schley, members of the New York Stock Exchange, will occupy a portion of the floor as their uptown branch office.

Deal at Far Rockaway.

The Lewis H. May Company sold for John C. Jorgensen the newly completed brick two-and-a-half-story dwelling and garage on the east side of Oak Street, Far Rockaway, L. I., to Louis B. Morris for an all-year residence. The property was held at $30,000.

Mouquin's to Continue Restaurant.

Louis C. Mouquin announced yesterday that negotiations for the sale of Mouquin's restaurant building at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street had been dropped, and that Mouquins will continue to operate their restaurant there.

THE BROOKLYN MARKET.

Moller Estate Leases Corner for $1,000,000.

The Moller estate leased for a long term of years, at a rental which will aggregate over $1,000,000, a Williamsburg Bridge Plaza corner, 266-268 Broadway and 232 to 240 Havemeyer Street. The lessee, the Lowell Realty Corporation, intends to make eleven stores on the ground floor, with offices on upper floors. The property had been in the Moller family for seventy-five years, and for a number of years was used as a cafe and hotel. B. F. Knowles Company were the brokers.

J. Lacev sold for Nathan Goats to Erna Landau a two-family brick and stucco fourteen-room house on a plot 60 by 100, with double garage, known as 1,162 East Twenty-third Street, and held at $25,000.

BUY BUSINESS SITES.

Mandel-Ehrich Corporation Acquires Two East Side Plots.

The Mandel-Ehrich Corporation acquired two business sites yesterday when they bought the northwest corner of Lexington Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, a five-story store and apartment building from Magdalene Smythe, and also purchased from Louise C. Tower through Worthington Whitehouse 50 East Fifty-fourth Street, a five-story building on a lot 20 by 100.5, east of Madison Avenue.

Bank Adds to Site.

The Seamen's Bank for Savings, at Wall and Pearl Streets, bought from Harriet B. Laidlow the two five-story buildings at 161 and 163 Pearl Street, on a plot 44 by 90 by irregular, adjoining the five-story home of the bank at the northwest corner. With this purchase the bank has increased its Pearl Street frontage to 128.9 feet. On Wall Street the property has a frontage of 61 feet.

The Pearl Street buildings just acquired are assessed for the 1923 taxation purposes at $412,000. The Charles F. Noyes Company acted as broker for the seller, and Horace S. Ely & Co. represented the bank.

Purchase Jersey City Plant.

Reed & Carnrick of Jersey City, pioneers in glandular therapy, have purchased through Joseph P. Day, Inc., parcel No. 3 of the former Davis-Bournonville Company property, located on Van Wagenen and Corbin Avenues, Jersey City, just off Broadway.

This plot purchased is improved with a five-story reinforced concrete and steel building, containing 46,644 square feet, together with a one-story garage. It is the intention of the purchasers to occupy. The property was held at $170,000.

They begin to think in bigger figures; they recognize opportunity where they never before saw it; they want and are entitled to more money.

But many of these men go along for years in jobs too small for them.

We are looking for a man of this better type to sell first mortgage bonds. This is the fastest growing form of security known, as well as one of the safest. The opportunity to build a future here will be limited only by the ability of the man himself. Remuneration is on a salary-plus-commission basis.

If you feel that you are beginning to arrive and if your character is 100 per cent. sound, we would like to have a confidential talk with you. We are not easily satisfied, but we have something better than a "job" for our kind of man. Telephone to Mr. Lovejoy for an appointment.

ARE YOU LEAVING THE SECURITY FIELD?

The Homeland Company, engaged in home building, financing and land distribution, amply financed, with no stock to sell but money to loan to its purchasers, is building a sales force and welcomes applications from well equipped, younger men of clean record and ability. Such men will be required to follow proven methods and forgot what they know.

New York State operations are centred in Yonkers, a city immediately adjoining New York, of 120,000 population; a city of well paid working people who have saved money but not enough in most cases to obtain a home through ordinary financing channels. The housing situation is acute. The Homeland Company is, through the loaning of private funds, meeting this need. Commission basis. For consideration kindly visit the general offices at No. 18 North Broadway, Yonkers.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25.—The weather chart of Monday night showed barometric pressure below thirty inches over the entire country. The barometer was relatively high, however, off the Florida coast, and it was relatively high and rising over the plains States. It read low along the Mexican border. There were evidences Monday night of a Gulf disturbance of slight intensity off the Louisiana coast. Warm weather prevailed during Monday in southern New England, the Middle Atlantic States, the Ohio and Middle Mississippi Valleys, the Southern plains States and the southeast portion of the region of the Great Lakes. Cooler weather overspread the Northern plains States and the Rocky Mountain region during Monday. There have been scattered showers and thunderstorms within the last twenty-four hours in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and along the northern border toward the Great Lakes and westward to Montana. Heavy local rains fell in parts of Eastern Tennessee, Northern Georgia, Minnesota and in Eastern North Dakota.

In the New England States and New York the weather will be partly cloudy and warm Tuesday, followed by local thunderstorms Tuesday afternoon or night and partly cloudy with somewhat lower temperature on Wednesday. In the Middle Atlantic States, the lower lake region and the Ohio Valley the weather will be partly cloudy and warm Tuesday, probably followed by local thunder showers Tuesday afternoon or night and generally fair with slightly lower temperature on Wednesday. In the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and Tennessee the weather will be partly cloudy with local showers and thunderstorms Tuesday and Wednesday.

I. C. C. PLACES BAN ON MORE COAL MINES

Denies Application of Virginia Railway Company to Build a One-Mile Extension Line.

IT WAS TO SERVE NEW PITS

Equipment and Car Supply of Carriers are Already Overtaxed, Commission Contends.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Basing its decision on the conclusion that there are already "more mines in the country than is consistent with the efficient use of carriers' equipment and their aggregate car supply," the Interstate Commerce Commission today denied the application of the Virginian Railway Company for authority to construct a one-mile extension of its line in Wyoming County, W. Va., at a cost of about $62,000, to serve mines being opened by the Pocahontas Fuel Company.

The decision attracted unusual interest because of the contention which has been made by Secretary Hoover and other officials that one of the most serious problems faced in efforts to stabilize the soft coal industry was the existence of too many mines. Their argument is that because of these surplus mines it is necessary to maintain a force of miners who cannot profitably be kept continually employed. Estimates have been made that two-thirds of the mines now open could supply the nation's needs if kept operating continuously.

The attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission is said to mark a new departure in the field of railway regulation which may have results of importance.

No formal announcement was made by the commission besides the fact that the application had been denied, but it was indicated that the Commission would, within a few days, make a full report, giving detailed reasons for its action.

The contention was made in the commission, it is said, that fewer mines would produce more coal, because rail equipment and facilities could be better concentrated. Another point was that during the last year there were twenty-eight weeks in which the Virginian Railway Company was unable to supply more than 50 per cent. of the cars needed by the mines in existence.

Work had already been started by the Virginian Railway Company on the proposed branch, which was extended along the Guyandot River Valley. There had been no objections from outside interests.

In the past the commission's control of new railroad construction has been exercised only where it appeared doubtful that the railroad would be able to raise funds to finance the construction, or where it appeared that the traffic possibilities of the new mileage were insufficient to give a return on the investment.

Salt Lake City

CLIMBING MT. TIMPANOGOS GLACIER. TWO HOURS FROM SALT LAKE.

At the glacier's foot lies Emerald Lake—a veritable gem set in the mountainside, with a clear depth of 1000 feet. At the very edge of the glacier wild flowers grow in summer. Only an hour from Salt Lake City is Timpanogos Cave—a mammoth cavern whose fantastic, vividly colored formations are unique and marvelously beautiful.

These are only two of the many points of interest in the immediate vicinity of Salt Lake City—high up in the Rockies, 4200 feet above the sea, with deep, cool mountain gorges bordering its very edge. Salt Lake City invites you to play in a vacation land different from anything else in the world—every sport has a new thrill.

Every big railroad in the west either reaches Salt Lake City directly or can route you via Salt Lake City—going or returning—without trouble or extra expense. Ask for the Salt Lake City 10-day stopover when you buy your ticket.

WIZARD
Liquid Wax

There is a Wizard Household Helper for every cleaning task in the home and each is a worker of magic speed and efficiency

A superior liquid wax gives amazing results

From South America comes a strange new wax that makes possible a better polish than has ever before been made. It is a sort of "wood extract" that spreads a thin veneer—transparent, but hard and wear resisting. It protects the surface as a plate glass top protects a dresser.

Wizard has taken this wonderful substance and made a liquid wax that gives the most amazing results. It spreads easily and requires very little rubbing. Works perfectly on all woods, beautifying the natural grain. Equally good for leather and metal. Excellent for polishing an automobile.

Good dealers everywhere have Wizard Liquid Wax.

Peerless

Set Your Own Standards
Then Test Them Against the New Peerless

Hundreds of men and women eagerly made opportunity to accept the invitation we issued last week to acquaint themselves at first hand with the New Peerless.

That invitation is still in force. It is tendered to you with no obligations or qualifications of any kind attached.

You are free to enjoy the same motoring experience as our owners and learn for yourself just why they say no language fully suggests the peculiar quality of Peerless performance.

That quality is what you might expect had you ordered a car especially built for yourself and told your manufacturer—the most experienced you could find—to go the limit.

In such a case you would expect power that never seemed to reach its limit, that never faltered or hesitated an instant in answering every demand of traffic, grade or road conditions, yet flowed with absolute smoothness and complete silence.

And you would expect and demand an ease of riding that would tax your tongue to picture and a dependability that knows no excuse or alibi.

Yet we venture to say that when you had finished giving your order you would not have specified as much as the New Peerless gives you and we confidently predict that when you take your ride the experience will surpass all your imagination might suggest for your own custom-built car.

We know the policy that makes all this possible. We have seen it at work in the factory where each car is tested as though it were your car and the only one being built.

But what all this means in terms of actual riding we can not tell you with words alone.

That is why we want you to ride with us and confidently expect you to be among our visitors this week.

INK

MAKES YOUR FOUNTAIN PEN A CHECK PROTECTOR

When writing checks, extra pressure on your pen causes DELLO INK to penetrate the fibres of the paper. Any attempt to alter or erase it by knife, eraser (hard or soft) or chemicals (acid or alkali) can be detected immediately. It is a complete check protector because it protects names as well as amounts.

DELLO INK has been perfected after 12 years of work, by Mr. E. M. Davidson, inventor of the famous "Pyrene" fire extinguisher. In addition to being erasure-proof, DELLO INK does away with blotters—it's clog-proof (makes your fountain pen work)—it's water-proof and fade-proof.

We make another type of DELLO INK for steel pen use only. At present we are marketing DELLO INK

FOR FOUNTAIN PENS ONLY

for your fountain pen (a year's supply) in each 25c bottle. Less than ONE CENT per filling. Ask for DELLO INK at stationery, drug, department and novelty stores everywhere. If your store hasn't received its shipment, notify us and we'll see that you get it. (3-oz. bottle postpaid on receipt of price.)
